The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

won't do," he said. "I might as you that the evening ches are the catch. They wear real here. And you gotta have . This is a classy place. Part our advertising is very beauti- in the latest from Paris."

"won't do. We're in this biz for money—not for our health." He ely continued his specialties. "No reason why a Jane as looking as you are shouldn't ve all the evening dods in the Not reason for that mister should be clerking in a office working here either."

Mr. Barclay, angry, and discouraged out the door, he called after "The job's always open if you nause to scare up the dress."

Late that afternoon, Ellen, bit- disappointed at losing the $20 got a weak telephoned to the Brooklyn apartment house. There a long wait while good-natured Mrs. Clancy climbed the stairs to ring Molly to the phone. But the was easier than the combined Molly Rossiter made it very and she could not understand Ellen had not persuaded Salon to take her without the pre- dress. She never understood such things. To top this off she explained tearfully that the landlord had called during the morning for his rent.

"What will we do?" she wailed.

Ellen had no better idea of that than Molly. But she poured forth assurances before she hung up the and turned away. She the way a little then. There were in her wide, thick-lashed eyes and her face, ordinarily so rosy, was pale with fatigue and anxiety. She brushed past a handsome, middle-aged man, who had been standing at the row of telephones on the fifth floor of Barclay's, flew did not notice him until he touched on the arm. She turned to face Steven Barclay, owner of the department store.

"You're employed here, aren't you?" he asked.

Ellen's heart gave a great thump. She against the rules to telephone during business hours. It was also against the rules to leave one's counter. Her counter, tended by another girl, was six floor below at the basement.

"I am employed here," she said in a strained, low voice.

"Will you step into my office, please?"

Ellen clamped her teeth into her lip. As she silently followed him she called forth all her re- serve to meet this final calamity. She was to lose her $8 at Bar- clay's!

CHAPTER XI

Ellen had her feet planted firm- ly in her small world by the time she had sealed herself. She had seen other girls pay the swift penalty for some inconsequential fault. She was prepared to pay it herself in quietly and in pride. She thought only that the important thing was to maintain her own courage.

Never before had she exchanged a word with her employer. In her two years of service she had seen him no more than half a dozen times. Steven Barclay spent only two or three months a year in the store which bore his name; the other months he wandered restless- ly about Europe adding to his col- lection of jades. But Ellen had ad- mired, as her working mates had termed it, that he was responsible for the strictness of the store, the tireless, trying rules, the rigid discipline. She had youthfully upheld him for that.

Barclay left her sitting at the desk, long and flanked with files, standing vases of roses, while he turned to close the door leading into the secretary's office. Ellen's heart took another down- ward dip. Her hands, folded in her lap, ached from their tight grip upon each other.

When Barclay sat down opposite her she raised her frightened eyes. She had been too really terrified be- fore, too appalled to attempt to draw any hope of a possible second chance from Steven Barclay's face or manner. But now, as she looked at him, she saw all at once that she had been wrong.

This man did not intend to dis- miss her. He leaned forward, his fine, lined face grave with sym- pathy.

"I hope," he began almost apolo- getically, "that you won't think I'm interfering in something which does not concern me. I am, of course. But perhaps you'll forgive me when I tell you that I can not bear to see an employee—to see someone so young as you—in such trouble without attempting to learn if there is something I can do. Some way that I can help."

Ellen had been prepared for dis- missal. She was not prepared for sympathy. For a moment revulsion of feeling made her actually dizzy. Her heart was suffocating her and she felt she could hardly breathe. But she forced herself to answer him.

"It's—it's nothing important," she managed at length.

"I was afraid you'd say that. It probably would be nothing to me. Obviously it's not that to you. But I do think it's nothing that can't be solved, won't you tell me?"

At any other time Ellen would have withdrawn into the fastnesses of the Rossiter pride. But then she had such an overwhelming need for sympathy, such an overwhelming need for the advice of someone older, someone responsible, that the whole story was out before she could check the rush of words. Myra and Bert; her mother and her disastrous shopping tours; Mike, delightful baby Mike, who should have his chance; the Brooklyn apartment and the countless harassing worries that beset two girls trying to balance on their slim shoulders the burden of a family, all that and more she poured forth.

She stopped at last in consterna- tion. What had she said, lured by this man's kindly interest? What had possessed her?

"So you see it's really nothing," she concluded stiffly. "Only the lack of a dress. I'm afraid I've draw ha dreadful picture. It's not a fair or truthful one. We have lots of fun. We love each other. Anyone would say that an evening dress wasn't important."

"I wasn't going to say that."

Ellen felt suddenly annoyed with herself, annoyed with Barclay, as though he had taken advantage of a moment of weakness to force her unwilling confidence. What real in- terest could a man who called em- ployes to buy a single piece of jade feel in the petty, financial difficul- ties of one of his minor employes? Her cheeks grew hot.

She remembered that Jenny El- kins below in the basement had promised to care for her counter only for 10 minutes. She glanced toward the door, longing to rush from the room.

Barclay noticed her restiveness and surprised her attitude.

"No, I wasn't going to say that" he repeated. "I was going to tell you something about myself, a thing that might help you, or I hope it will. Are you bored?"

Ellen quickly assured him she was not. She felt again and un- willingly his quiet spell, felt his sincerity and concern. His simple assumption that they were equals and, as equals, could solve her prob- lem. But how? What possible help could she accept from him?

"Don't think of me as a rich man," he was saying. "Think of me as a man who once was glad to support a young wife and a young baby on $18 a week. I was glad, when $18 a week meant more than it does now that it's enough. And my wife wanted a dress too. She wanted a pink dress with ribbons. She looked a little like you, had that same quick way of turning her head. And they wanted pink cloth and ribbons when she wanted the dress."

Ellen forgot Jenny Elkins in the basement. She had not known that Barclay had been poor. It was hard to imagine that distinguished, aging man, who wore clothes so carefully cut, so indicative of wealth in such a way. But she could visualize clearly the young wife who had wanted a pink dress with pink ribbons.

"No one offered to give her that dress," Barclay continued. "If any- one had I'm sure we both would have refused it. We were proud, you understand—proud as you are proud. I was going to become a rich man—going to buy her dozens up- on dozens of dresses." He hesitated and added quickly, "Forgive me, I was dead—dead with my young son and wife. I've not lived for years."

Ellen gave a distressed little cry. "We have not gone to bed," said Barclay, "Much the same sort of fun you and your brother, Mike, and your sister, Myra, are having now. But if we'd only been less stiff-necked, less afraid of the motives of other people, how much easier it would have been."

"Afraid?"

The heavy Rossiter brows rose in twin peaks.

MR. AND MRS.— WALKING THROUGH LIFE TOGETHER

Rokoff leaped to his feet and turning, faced the Swede cook. "Get out of here!" roared the Russian. For answer, the cook's great hand slid to the handle of a long, slim knife beneath his greasy apron. Rokoff saw the move—and stopped short. Then in French he said to Lady Greystoke: "Tomorrow you shall answer. You will come to me willingly or I'll kill the child before your very eyes!"

With those ominous words Rokoff banged out of the cabin. After a moment of silence the Swede spoke. The idiotic look that had masked his thoughts fell away, giving place to one of craft and cunning. "He think I—me—fool," he whispered. "I savvy French. You have good to me. He treat me like dirty dog. I help you lady. You yust vait. I help you escape." Jane could hardly believe her ears. Was escape possible?

Later when he brought her frugal dinner, he whis- pered very low: "Leave on your canoe sat' vell company than with Nikolas Rokoff and his gang. And so she obeyed the Swede's instructions. As midnight came a soft tap at her door. Cautiously she unbolted it to admit the muffled figure of the cook. He came quite close to her. Extending one of the bundles he carried, he thrust it into her arms. "Do not make some noise," he said. "It ban your kid."

FALL CAUSES INJURIES

Mr. Anthony Herity, Moira, Falls Through Barn Floor

Moira—Many regrets and much anxiety are felt for Mr. Anthony Herity who met with an accident a few days ago. He fell through a feed hole in the barn floor for about 10 feet resulting in a severe jarring to his system.

Th doctor was called and for a few days no little concern was felt for him. At present he is still confined to his bed.

Mr. E. Harrison, although 91 years of age enjoys his daily lintel without which he would be very lonesome.

All regret to hear that Mr. John Moorland of Rossmore who is 96 years of age is at present very unwell. The sympathy of the whole community goes out to him and his family.

Mrs. Dr. Welsh of Roslin is ill with pneumonia.

Influenza is more or less prevalent around Roslin and some cases are reported of septic sore throat.

Mr. Frank Foster has been laid up with influenza this past week. It is most unusual to hear of Mr. Foster being sick. He is over 80.

Mr. Albert Green was visiting at Mr. and Mrs. John Green's on Sunday last.

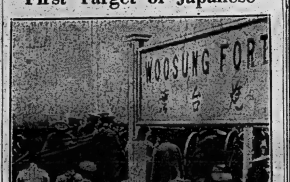
Cameron Morton has been laid up with gripe for a few days, but is slowly mending again.

Mr. Charley Ketcheson killed a large star snake in his field one day last week.

Miss Beatie Ketcheson spent the week end visiting relatives in Tweonto.

Mrs. George Hollinger is visiting her brother, Mr. Gordon Mitts at Marshill.

Mr. Mitts still suffers from the accident caused by his run away team of a recent date.



Mr. Ben Brough has purchased a hundred cords of wood land from Mr. C. Moorland.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palmer spent the week end in Belleville visiting relatives.

Much favourable comment is due to some of the farmers on the Pulley road for cleaning up the thick overhanging bushes on the narrow road sides. It makes quite a change and look doubly nedcy.

Huge piles of cord wood may be seen stacked in the bush by the roadside, waiting for the snow that doesn't come.

"EMMA" BRINGS MARIE DRESSLER TO THE BELLE

Marie Dressler, the star of "Min and Bill" and "Politics", now makes her appearances in the title part role of the new dramatic comedy "Emma" coming tomorrow to the Belle Theatre for three days, matinee daily. Supporting Miss Dressler is a talented

MARIE DRESSLER ed cast including Jean Hersholt, Myrna Loy, John Miljan, Barbara Kent and Richard Pratt.

In "Emma" Marie Dressler has the best opportunity of her career. Like "Min and Bill" it combines grand, easy flowing comedy with a well told, suspense-filled story which the talents of Marie Dressler make absorbing and interesting. As "Emma" you see Marie Dressler as a housekeeper who, for twenty-five years, has cared for a millionaire inventor and his motherless children. When the inventor, tired of his lonely life, secretly marries Emma, the children are shocked and refuse to recognize Emma as their step mother. But when the inventor dies suddenly following his marriage, leaving his entire fortune to Emma, the children not only contest the will but actually accuse Emma of causing their father's death.

How you become the central situation which adds power and strength to the story of "Emma." How Emma faces her strange and unexpected problem provides a combination of skilful emotional acting and a grand sense of humor which, preview audiences are finding irresistible. Needless to say, Emma in the person of Marie Dressler sets out to do what she believes is right. What she finally does accomplish is somewhat different from what you may expect. So be prepared for a surprise twist to the story's climax: a climax, incidentally, which makes you roar one moment and shed a tear the next.

"Emma" was written expressly for Marie Dressler by the well known screen author, Frances Marion who also wrote "Min and Bill", and "The Champ." The direction is credited to Clarence Brown, maker of the recent Joan Crawford success, "Possessed".

Charlie Chase appears on the same program in new comedy screen-studio, "Fatal Glass of Beer" and Metrotone Sound News will also be exhibited.

'PEACH O' RENO' BRINGS BOB and BOB'S NEW LAUGH HIT

That wisecracking, irrepressible pair of gloom chasers, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, poke the merry finger of satire at Reno and the wholesale divorce industry in their newest starring comedy which opened at the Capitol Theatre this afternoon.

The film is RKO-Radio Pictures' 'Peach O' Reno' which rolls along with the fast and merriest slapstick and builds up to a crescendo of funny situations.

Bert, Bob—Lawyers

Some idea of the splendid material at the disposal of the two comedians is seen in the fact that they are cast as divorce lawyers in this Mecca of liberated womanhood. As is usual the comics are pursued by difficulties, some of them in the shapes of women while the others are ex-husbands. Despite this confession the harried young lawyers nonchalantly continue their business of obtaining sure fire divorces at the cut rate of $60 per person and no questions asked.

The comedians make most of their original lines and build their humorous situations through an amazing series of tongue-in-the-cheek quotations and slap-stick moments, building to a hilarious finish when the divorce courtroom suddenly loses its dignity and becomes an inspired 'Tin Pan Alley of Jazz.

Dot Lee Is Again

Dorothy Lee again supports Wheeler and Woolsey, and, comedienne though she is, she injects an element of pathos in the story which adds considerably to its worth as entertainment. Joseph Cawthorn and Cora Witherspoon as the elderly couple who decide to smile their marital knot after twenty years of—blissful argument and discover that they love each other more than ever, do exceptionally fine work.

HEAVY MOTHERS

"Brave mothers of big families
Sometimes in your brief hour
You read and feel take your ease
You follow tales of power
You read of Builders who have wrought
With mighty plans in view
But knowing you we've often thought
That you are Builders too.

Brave mothers of big families
Who toil from dawn till night
You often thrill with memories
Of heroes and their might.
We see you at a sick bed stress
To pull a loved child through
And know that heroes are alive
For you are heroes too.

Brave mothers of big families
Who never, never rest
You often pray to God who sees
A world by your love Blest.
The lonely angels hover near
To make your prayers come true
To them it seems so very clear,
That you are angels too.

Mrs. Ethel Danford and daughter Marjorie of Belleville were among the visitors who took part in the celebration of the birthday.

Russia Denies Troops Concentrated in East

Geneva Feb. 9—The Russian delegation to the world disarmament conference today denied reports that Soviet troops are being concentrated at Vladivostok.

They explained that a regrouping of local military forces is going on in the far east to reinforce the garrisons in the Pronioye and Transbaikal regions, but that this was to protect the Frontiers from expected attacks of "white" Russians who, they understood, were arming themselves in Manchuria.

TOTAL DISARMAMENT

M. Livitnikoff Dashes Aside Other Proposals for Total Disarmament

Sees Grave Menace in Limitation and in League Army

PROTECTING WEAK

Progressive and Proportional Plan Advocated at Geneva

Geneva, Feb. 11—In labored English, Maxime Litvinoff, the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, today submitted to the World Disarmament Conference the most sweeping proposals of all.

The Soviet Union stood for total disarmament, he declared. In total armament lay the only infallible security for peace.

Moving-picture camera lights flashed up as the Russian took his stand on the tribune. Sound-camera booms hovered. Delegates bowed back into the ball from the corridors, and the public galleries were filled. For Litvinoff was the event of the day.

Japan, the delegates, from Belgium and Sweden who preceded and followed the Russian, aroused only mild interest.

Other Schemes Rejected

M. Litvinoff sharply rejected all schemes for limited armaments and the French proposal for creating an international police force like League of Nations. Limitation of armaments were no security but a menace. The creation of an international force only added a new army.

How, Litvinoff questioned, could the Soviet Union be expected to consider part of its army to an international organization composed largely of states opposed to it? Or even to the extent of refusing to maintain normal relations? The pacts and peace treaties of the Soviet Union were more likely to see in an international army created under such conditions a threat to their country.

Proportional Method

Litvinoff recalled previous Soviet proposals for the complete destruction of most aggressive types of armaments. These proposals remained in full force, he declared, at this conference.

"The Soviet delegation" he proceeded, "will recommend the progressive and proportional method as the most impartial and equitable method for reduction of armaments, allowing for exceptions and exceptions in favor of weaker countries who are in danger of aggression.

"It will warmly support any proposal approaching or catalogued by it now," he went on. "It will support, particularly, the proposal placed in the conference, and equal security for all states.

"The Soviet Union was ready to disarm to the same extent as the states on the basis on which other powers—first and foremost—those actually at hand, were prepared to agree. But no measures for the reduction of armaments, it again repeated, could meet the pressing needs of the world if they did not give security against war total, and general disarmament.

"Paul Hymans, foreign minister of Belgium, announced the Belgian desire to collaborate in an international understanding for the limitation and reduction of armaments and safeguards of its own country. He doubted whether denunciation of war such as were contained in the Kellogg Pact would in themselves be adequate. Belgium was prepared to examine the widest arms any proposal to strengthen the authority of the League.

CHEMISTRY OF LIFE BOUND UP WITH SCENTS

Deadly Phosgene War Gas Made Harmless With Woodland Odor

USE ACETYLENE

Scent One of Most Promising Avenues in Research

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, N.Y., Feb. 11 —Some day man may order his vitamin A with a violet scent and temper lethal phosgene war gas with a delicate woodland odor.

The strange chemical kinships which suggest these ideas were explained the American Chemical Society last night by Professor Marston T. Bogert of Columbia University.

Chemically, he said, synthetic violet perfume and the scent reputed for Vitamin A are almost identical. Both are made of atoms of carbon, Hydrogen and Oxygen arranged like bites with tails. The main chemical difference is a shorter tail on the perfume.

Effects Differ

Physiologically this little shortening of the tail makes a vast difference in the human effects of the two combinations.

Phosgene, the deadliest war gas is now used commercially for making a non-poisonous perfume having the odor of the violet leaf. This alteration from war to violets is made mainly by adding some acetylene to the phosgene.

Dr. Bogert used these and other startling illustration of perfume trail for chemistry to say that one of the most promising avenues of exploring the mysteries of chemistry it offers new clues for producing synthetic drugs, he said, and ultimately for a better understanding of the Chemistry of life itself."

RT. HON. BRUCE NEW MINISTER

Represents Commonwealth of Australia in England

BY THOS. T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 11—The appointment of Rt. Hon. Stanley Melbourne Bruce, former Prime Minister of Australia, as Minister Representing the Commonwealth" in Great Britain appeared today highly acceptable to Australians in London and others having intimate association with the Commonwealth. Mr. Bruce is present assistant treasurer in the Australian government and he will come to London after representing Australia at the Imperial Conference at Ottawa.

"When Australia was constituted a Commonwealth in 1900, Mr. Bruce was still at school, and his education was continued at Cambridge University. He was called to the English Bar and he was practising in London when the Great War broke out. He served with distinction in British regiments at Gallipoli and in Flanders, being twice wounded, and winning the Military Cross. One of the best known of all Empire statesmen, Bruce has hosts of friends here.

Almost immediately the appointment will cause a revival of questions concerning the status of Australia's High Commissioners in London. The Commonwealth government has always shared the position as that of a "Resident Minister." The Australians here have some precedent in the fact that Sir George Perley, while minister without portfolio in the Canadian government, became acting high commissioner here in 1914, subsequently remaining in the post until 1922.

Reeve's Welcome

Mr. MacIntyre Hood, the guest speaker of the evening, who as an active member in the Legion since its organization in Brighton, knows the work it has been doing among its members and its pressing needs at the present time, spoke on the growth of the Legion which in 1926 had 169 branches one year later at the next year 209 and then 263 increased to 309 branches and at the present time there are 237 branches now open.

This, of course, was not through any special drive put on by the Legion but that towns without a branch on seeing the benefits derived from it got together to form a branch, in 1929 there were 237 branches.

MUSSOLINI AND POPE PIUS XI AT VATICAN

Closeted Alone With His Holiness and Seals Pact

FIRST VISIT

Ill Duce Presents Members of His Party to Pope

By JOHN EVANS
(Copyright 1932 by Associated Press)

Vatican City, Feb. 11— Premier Benito Mussolini, Il Duce of Italian Fascism and Pope Pius XI, Holy Father to the Catholic world, met today in the Pope's library at the Vatican for the first time and were closeted alone for a full hour, sealing the peace of the Church and State which was begun by the Lateran Treaty three years ago.

The Premier's first visit to the Pope looked for several months since the settlement of the controversy over the Catholic Action Society, was expected to last only a few moments. Suddenly, to the surprise of the waiting attendants of both himself and the Pontiff.

Meeting Most Pleasant

Judging by the Premier's smile as he emerged, the meeting was most pleasant. It was not learned whether or not they discussed state relations, but from all signs it was a thoroughly friendly talk.

After the private conversation ended Il Duce presented the members of his party to the Pontiff and then reverently bent and kissed the Pope's ring, as he did when he entered, after which he said farewell and went to the Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State; later he went to St. Peter's and knelt in prayer.

The visit, which went down as a notable mark in recent Italian history, took place as the whole country was celebrating a new national Holiday, the third anniversary of the signing of the Lateran Treaty between Italy and the Vatican. This treaty, negotiated by envoys of the Pope and the Premier, ended the long "imprisonment" of the Pope in the Vatican and restored relations between the State and the Church.

Through Troop-lined Streets

The Premier motored early let the Palazzo Venezia in Rome and through its way to the Vatican City through troop-lined streets on which were crowded thousands of Italians in holiday attire, cheering Il Duce, as he was driven along on his journey to meet the Pope. The party was escorted by carabineers and accompanied by representatives of the Pope of the Holy See. The route was covered with orange-colored sand as is done for the cortege of King Victor Emmanuel.

The short time later the Pontiff and the Premier met fact to face in the Pope's private library, where the doors closed behind them.

Lights of 14 Cars Are Switched Off and Assault Starts

Knoxville, Tenn. Feb. 11 —Lying in bed at a hotel here today with his head bandaged, Waldo Frank, New York literary critic, told of being beaten near the Tennessee State Line as he and a group of New York Writers were escorted out of Pineville, Ky., after midnight.

Frank said his party, which had taken three loads of food into Pineville Hotel, loaded into cars and escorted to the Cumberland Cap Saddle, where the States of Kentucky and Virginia join. He said fourteen cars were in the procession.

Citizens Escort Them

"Myself and Allan Taub, New York lawyer, were riding in a car with a driver and two other Pineville citizens," Frank said.

"The procession was stopped at the Saddle, and an order was given to turn off the light.

"We got out of the car. Suddenly I heard a yell from Taub. Then someone struck me from behind with a heavy weapon, there was a rain of blows, and then a heavy blow stunned me and I fell to the ground."

Frank was chairman of the group of New York writers who came into the Kentucky-Tennessee coal fields to distribute food and test their constitutional right to hold meetings and give relief to miners.

OLD COMRADES PAY RESPECT

A Many Attend Funeral of Late Seward Modeland

Under Masonic direction the funeral of the late Seward Modeland took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 251 Charles Street to the Belleville Cemetery. At the home and graveside the services were taken by the Rev. A. E. McCutcheon, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church of which congregation the late Mr. Modeland was a devoted member; the Masonic services being conducted by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. W. Barlow, assisted by Very Wor. Bro. John McCarthy and Wor. Bro. Orval Chapman.

The very large attendance of Masonic brethren, former associates of the deceased in the Canadian National Railway's employ and the public in general, were testimony to the respect and esteem in which the late Mr. Modeland was held by the citizens of Belleville.

Attending from outside the district, and who were intimately associated with Mr. Modeland during his railroading life were ex-conductors Messrs. James Garrett, Toronto; Rance Norton, Toronto, Thomas Gibbard, Toronto, David Wagar, Cobourg and ex-engineer George Pratt, Cobourg.

These old time comrades and friends had come to pay their last tribute of respect to one who had journeyed with them so often during his lifetime.

The bearers were all of the Masonic order: Messrs. Homer Lavoie, L. C. Patterson, Harry Hill, W. Burtch, C. H. McBride and Arthur Jones.

QUICK THINKING AVERTS ACCIDENT

Truck Driver Narrowly Avoids Striking School Boy

An alert driver in charge of a large dump truck averted what might easily have been serious injury to a small boy on the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle street this morning shortly after 9 o'clock.

The boy with school books under his arm, unmindful of traffic at that point stepped into the road on Pinnacle street just at the moment that the truck, which had stopped for the through traffic sign, proceeded to cross the corner and bore down upon him. A quick swerve of the wheel sent the truck off at an angle just as it appeared inevitable that the lad would be caught under the wheels. The boy after a little shaky pause continued on his way without any apparent show of fear or happiness at avoiding the accident, becoming a visibly shaken driver to continue on his way, possibly wondering why there couldn't be something done about it all.

Not Planning to Kill School Teacher

NELSON, B.C., Feb. 11.—Investigation of the Champion Creek Doukhobor school bombing Tuesday by Provincial Police discloses that the bombing was made use of a light charge, judging from the limited damage to the building, and that he probably was not planning to kill Mrs. Jeanie McRae, the school teacher.

ADJOURNS PROBLEMS

Pais, Feb. 11 (AP)—An agreement between France and Great Britain on a formula for solving the reparations problem until June probably will be announced within the next day or so, the foreign office said today.

It was indicated that the formula will explain why the Lausanne Conference was adjourned last month.

The last weasel, found northwest of Hudson Bay, is the smallest carnivorous animal known.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting. Hinkle' bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back. If you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because an internal medicine can actually correct these conditions. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 960 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. J. S. McKown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must cure your Pile misery or money back.

Creighton Chaney, son of the late Lon Chaney, portrayer of weird roles, signed a film contract with Radio Pictures on his 25th birthday anniversary yesterday after stipulating he would act under his own name or not at all. He refused to capitalize on his father's fame.

Acquit Fumigators of Criminal Negligence

Judge Rules That the Men Were Not Negligent in Their Duties

Toronto, Feb. 11 (CP)— Joseph Hill and Frederick Smith, fumigators, were acquitted late yesterday on criminal negligence charges laid in connection with the death last September of Pearl Wiltuk, former of Winnipeg. Evidence indicated the young woman had walked into her rooming house while it was being fumigated and had died of cyanide poisoning.

The crown contended entrance to the house had been left unguarded for a short time, during which Miss Wiltuk entered. Judge C. H. Widdifield ruled it was not a case of criminal negligence.

New Crisis is Looming as Both Sides Prepare for Decisive Conflict

Communist Activities Reported From Different Parts of China

SEEKS HELP

Propagandist Literature Being Spread in Shanghai Native City

Washington, Feb. 11—News of Chinese Communist activities came out of China today in consular messages which reported an American bishop's appeal for aid at Kanchow and told of "Red" activities at Shanghai.

The bishop's appeal for aid against a threat of a Communist army operating in Kiangsi Province had been broadcast in United Press despatches yesterday and the State Department learned that Consul Walter A. Adams at Kanchow had requested Chinese aid to protect the bishop and any other Americans.

The messages, starting in their import, added to State Department anxieties, though Adams indicated that peril at Kanchow perhaps was not as imminent as Bishop's appeals indicated. Meantime word came that Communists were actively taking advantage of the disturbed Shanghai situation by handbilling propaganda.

American Consul-General Walter A. Adams at Hankow, in a delayed despatch dated February 6th, said Bishop John O'Shea, American missionary at Kanchow, in Kiangsi Province, had wired that a "Red" army was besieging Kanchow. He urged that relief be sent. An American legation at Peiping asked authorities at Nanking, capital of Kiangsi Province, to protect any Americans in the danger area.

M. F. Perkins, chargé d'affaires at the American legation, yesterday asked the Chinese Minister for Foreign Affairs "to take immediate steps for the effective protection of Americans in and around Kanchow."

The American consul-general at Hankow and Canton were instructed by the legation to make urgent representations regarding their protection.

Consul Adams at Hankow reported he had requested aid for the Kanchow Americans. He said, however, telegrams were still being accepted for Kanchow, that the post office was still selling money orders and that the military authorities had not heard of any attack. General Ho Chan Chan said, however, that the soldiers in the neighborhood of Kanchow were being replaced.

Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham at Shanghai reported to the state department that Communist literature, urging fighting against the Chinese Government, had appeared in the native city. Such literature, calculated to inflame the masses, already angered at the Japanese occupation, is regarded as a source of grave danger.

BOUCHARD IS GIVEN TERM

Is Found Guilty of 21 Counts and Disagreement on 21 Counts

Ottawa, Feb. 11 (CP)—After deliberating nine hours and twenty minutes, a Supreme Court of Ontario Assize jury last night found J. D. Bouchard, former civil service commission examiner, guilty on the first twenty-two counts in the indictment charging him with fraud and breach of public trust. He was sentenced to one year in the Guelph Reformatory by Mr. Justice O. H. Sedgewick.

Disagreement was reported by the jury on the other twenty-one counts. The verdict brought to a close a 21-day trial, longest in the history of the local assizes. The jury had been locked up for 22 nights, a record for Ontario.

The remaining twenty-one counts, all concerning examination candidates, who alleged they paid money to be passed, were traversed to the next Assizes. There are also nine charges of uttering forged documents, conspiracy, forgery, fraud and breach of trust. These also were traversed.

OLD PROPHECY HOLDS TRUE ORIENT ONCE AGAIN DISTURBED

Two New Army Divisions Reported on Way to Front From Tokio

TRENCHES FORTIFIED

Greatest Concentration of Men and Guns Since War Started

Shanghai, Feb. 11.—The greatest concentration of guns, manpower and ammunition of the entire Shanghai-Woosung engagement was in progress this morning as the Japanese and the Chinese got ready to fight it out to the finish.

The troops were massed about the Woosung forts, where the Chinese have stood up for a week under the most continued bombardment and aerial attack.

The concentration movement was carried out under the cover of darkness last night and early this morning. Passengers aboard steamships from Japan that docked at Shanghai late Wednesday said they had passed a dozen Japanese troopships. Neutral sources here received a code message from Japan saying that army divisions, about 20,000 men, had embarked for the front.

The Chinese prepared for the big push by draining their reserve troops from trench lines to the rear of their positions in Chapei.

In the area about the north station only two lines of trenches remained manned. Hitherto three or four lines have held full complements of men. A gap of half a mile existed between the Chinese front and the support lines after the shift had been completed.

Extra Protection for Trenches.

Japanese field pieces, unloaded from ships in the Whangpoo, were picked up from the Shanghai docks by motor trucks that rubbished away to the north.

Japanese trucks rushed bales of cotton into the Woosung sector for use in protecting strong points from Chinese machine gun bullets and artillery shells.

The Chinese carted great quantities of wooden beams and iron into the Woosung area and even requisitioned washboards with which to build shelter roofs and to buttress the sides of the trenches.

Meanwhile word came from Canton that extensive preparations were going on to back up the 19th route army, which has borne the brunt of the fighting thus far.

These Canton advices said guns and ammunition had been shipped and that General Chen Chi-Tang, commander-in-chief of the 19th army, had promised additional financial support.

Chambers of commerce throughout the country rallied to the government's support after word was received from Tokio that the Japanese government had appropriated 40,000,000 yen (about $14,500,000) for the military campaign in Shanghai.

Interpreting this action as an indication of a prolonged struggle, the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce circularized similar organizations throughout the nation by telegraph, asking for funds.

Resistance Surprises Japanese.

A private message received from Japan said the stubborn resistance put up by the Chinese at Chapei and Woosung had come as a complete surprise to the Japanese, as naval officers had had fullest confidence that the force of several thousand bluejackets, aided by guns of the warships and airplane bombers, would break the Chinese morale and finish the job assigned to them in short order.

Although the Shanghai international settlement was convinced that the next big action would come at Woosung, there was considerable apprehension, and new sandbag barricades and barbed wire entanglements were erected by foreign troops

RELIEF FUND PROBE IN BR. COLUMBIA

Ottawa, Oct., Feb. 11 (CP)—Investigation of unemployment relief fund administration in British Columbia was advocated in the House of Commons yesterday. Such investigation should be vested in a commission of one or more officials. It was urged by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Liberal Vancouver centre, who charged there had been "gross mismanagement."

Sons of Murdered Family Arrested

St. Catharines, Ont., Feb. 11 (CP) — Mike Holowchuk and a younger brother, of Thorold, yesterday were arrested on charges of robbery with violence. They are sons of Peter and Mary Holowchuk, murdered last September. Arrest of the pair followed complaint of Mike Slobodin, Welland baker, that he had been attacked and robbed of $104.

If civilization means anything, it means something to mark a moral worth, justice and happiness.

A Forecast.

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years. Not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time.

Russia hangs, as usual, like a cloud, dark and silent upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influence of the British Empire are sorely tried, in coping with the vast and deadly United Nonsense, and with its distributed relations in China.

Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom, the eldon of honor, of faith, of sympathy and charity—no man need seriously to despair; and yet, the very haste to be rich which is the occasion of this wide-spread calamity has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity."

(By Special Service)

BERLIN, Feb. 11—Wine 48 years old is no longer fit to drink. It has lost its alcohol and it has lost nearly half the ethereal fruit essences that make it taste well and give each vintage its distinction. There is nothing left but a weak solution of a number of mineral salts in water.

This in summary, is what Professor Johannes Girus of Berlin found when he analyzed the contents of an ancient round-bellied glass bottle discovered by a Russian expedition in a twelfth-century burial mound in the Caucasus. Sealed and sealed with a double seal, the bottle had preserved a considerable portion of its original contents but had not been able to prevent the deterioration of the wine.

A microscopic examination of the dregs disclosed a considerable variety of vegetables and animal debris. Most interesting of all was a curious alga, a low form of plant life, apparently absolutely identical with a similar species found in Baltic amber of an estimated 280,000-year antiquity.

Two Years' Normal Not Required Now

Financial Position of Province Given as Reason for Change in Rule

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 11 (CP) —Announcement was made yesterday by the Ontario Department of Education that it will no longer be compulsory for teachers in training in the Province to attend a Normal school for two years in order to obtain permanent professional certificates, "owing to the present financial situation in the province," said Premier George S. Henry, Minister of Education, the time was not opportune to ask teachers to undergo expense of an additional year in professional study.

The premier declared the course will not be compulsory for the Normal School year 1932-33 and 1933-34. If the voluntary enrollment justifies continuation of the second year course, classes will be maintained at the Toronto and Stratford Normal Schools during that period.

Madison, Wis., capital of the state, was chosen as the capital site when there was not a house on the present location of the city.

CUSTODY IS GIVEN FATHER

Appeal Judge Upsets Judgment of Trial Judge

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 11—Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall has decided that James R. Peltier, commercial traveller, Fort William, Ont., was entitled to the custody of his two young daughters. This reversed Judgment of Judge M. J. Kenny of Thunder Bay, who awarded the children to the mother.

Judge Kenny said the father, a Protestant, was now raising the question of the religion of the children as a means to an end, and that he was not prompted by any religious conviction. Accordingly He awarded the custody of the children to the mother, a Roman Catholic.

Chief Justice F. R. Latchford today declared the trial Judge had "devoted a lot of time to matters which had nothing at all to do with the case."

Turkey's new criminal code was copied from that of Italy, the civil code from Switzerland, the commercial code from Germany.

SCIENCE AND THE AUTO

Science is getting ready to make another contribution to motoring. It is the application to the motorcar of a system of red and green lights to be controlled from a central station. The electronic tube will be used. This will also provide an important change in substituting melodious chimes for raucous horns.

The automobile driver of the future will have his own traffic signal system on his dashboard in the form of miniature red and green lights which he will be able to watch in comfort instead of being obliged to keep forever peering ahead. Modern railroads have such installations in their engine cabs, and Dr. Lee de Forest Caldwell, editor of Electronics in a New York address.

There has been much progress from the first automobile to the present and if the steps forward cannot but be more and more important.

MUSIC OF THE DISHES

Many a joke has been perpetrated over the kitchen utensils and yet there cometh from the kitchen the most delicious confection three times every day which is called a meal. Bridge Street Women's Association in their presentation of the music of the kitchen came nearer to the truth than the critic of the kitchen has ever done. They set the utensils to music and what better music for mankind than a good meal?

LENT

Lent has begun and thoughts of men and women naturally turn to consideration of things of a more serious nature. Lent induces a tendency to reflection upon life as not so much material progress and acquisition as soul- and character-building.

The present-day world requires such a season. There is too much haste and no time is so fitted for reflection as this period just before the beginning of Easter. Restraint would be less likely when all nature is in bud and blossom. Nature herself leads the way for the present time is the very lull of winter, that momentous quiet just before the spring's awakening.

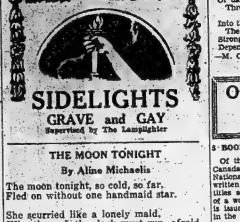
Lent if for no other reason is invaluable by providing the means to bring a life as well as of the spirit, it is well to take that rest from activity for reflection upon life, so that things may fit into their natural place and be all the more enjoyed for their orderliness and by reason of the repression.

Self-denial itself is a lesson we all slight follow. To follow ever and ever the plan and the build of life means a dulling of the perception and even the innocent things of life begin to pall. We must realize that there seems to be a progressive urge all through life shoving the race upward and on, yet progress is itself the result of thought. It is not the haphazard that enjoys without thought the pleasures of modern life is an ingrate unless he stops for a moment to realize how much they cost in the way of enjoyment it is to put oneself in a state lower than that of the animal and even lower than that of the stolid and stupid which make up so much of the material world for animals act from the instinct motive, and the rocks and stones are not even to be remembered for selfish man if they had reason.

Lent teaches the value of simplicity, meditation and one might write "with a" music of life. They have best served their fellowmen who have taken a brief spell from the machine for self inquisition and spiritual benefit.

THEATRE PURIFICATION

What may be accomplished in purification of the theatrical fare which is served the people is demonstrated in New York where civic censors may be said to be moving. In five years the Great White Way which was once said to be the scarlet path to Babylon and almost the synonym for evil way to the everlasting bonfire has been purified.



From the audition on the stage of 1926 to the success of the last year or so is a long step. Last year the delightfully pure play, "Sarrette of Wimpole Street, was a success while the censorship of two years ago was the illogical play "Green Pastures."

The vulgar joke and the double-meaning phrase are not wanted on the stage. They spoil a fine art and a theatrical presentation. The New York audience demonstrated that they do not aid in the attraction of an ordinary success or of a real triumph.

When the public forces the hand of the authorities towards purification and the censorship over the prurient and nasty, the producers and the playwrights know where their bread is buttered and behave themselves. They must please.

People have just as much power over the movie productions—no one dare flaunt the public if it is aroused. There is however probably greater difficulty in arousing the movie fans' opposition than that of those who frequent the playhouses where the legitimate drama is a serious business, because the very cheapness of movie programs attracts many who would not find it convenient, or enjoyable to attend stage productions.

The movie has acted and will act to the improvement of the stage because it removes certain types of drama which once were a drawback like the blood and thunder melodramas and also because it makes the drama more seriously concerned with real life values.

THE MOON TONIGHT

By Aline Michaelis

The moon tonight, so cold, so far.
Fled on without one handmaid star.

She scurried like a lonely maid.
Who through the dark must run, afraid.

I watched her speed among the hosts
Of clouds, that went like clutching ghosts.

I saw her haste, so pale and wan,
To shelter of the horizon.

CANADIANS down at Lake Placid Olympic sports are two-thirds of the whole show, according to Lou Marsh, sporting editor of the Toronto Star, who has been doing some refereeing and writing down there besides building up some expense sheet at the ten dollar-a-day millionaire hotel down there, or up there, which ever way one happens to be looking. Without the Canuk skaters and hockey players, skiers, dog teams and toe slashers the two million dollar Olympic would look like a busted flush. Bing! bang! right at the beginning the Lake Placid Olympic put the sun for the Lake Placid Olympic promoters for the Yank referee-in-chief took it upon himself to disqualify the Canadian skating because they didn't skate their heads off in the preliminary heats, or something like that. Upon being told there was no appeal from the high and mightiness' decision P. J. Mulqueen gathered the Canadians together and went into a huddle. From that huddle the rumor spread all over Lake Placid that the Canadian skaters would withdraw from further competition. Another huddle resulted, this time consisting of Yankee officials. P. J. Mulqueen was sent for and asked if it was true the Canadian skaters were leaving. P. J. replied that not only were the skaters leaving but that every Canadian would be out of Lake Placid by ten o'clock the next morning unless the disqualification was lifted. It was lifted.

GUY BROTHERS MINSTRELS, like ghosts of the long ago, have come out of the shadows, pushed back the years, and once more Arthur Guy, Interlocutor DeLuxe, cries, "Gentlemen Be Seated" as the curtain rolls upon another season for this famous old organization, which like most big successes is now split up into two parts, three little Guys here and three bigger Guys over there, beyond the Detroit River, in the land of perpetual sunshine where there is no T.B., no hunger or thirst, nor shelter or clothing. The show is starting out from Springfield, Massachusetts, under the management of George M. Guy, and it is to be remembered that on the old routes if there are enough old timers left to fill the seats. Many old timers in Belleville will remember the thrill of a night with Guy Brothers, a play of Macdonald's black and a gallery seat in the old opery house. Looks like a good season for revivals, now that the world is returning to normalcy, financial and otherwise, and we may expect to see the Guy Brothers Minstrels (call for Paul Lalonde), Hi Henry's, Haverley's and others. Now if we could only bring Jolly Nigger Johnson back to life we would be a laugh a mile long and a yard deep.

ARTHUR BRISBANE, chief editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers in the United States, was nominated for President of the United States, by one of the Western newspapers. Brisbane thanked his nominators for the honor but begged to leave to nominate the name of Will Rogers. Now that Eddie Cantor is in the field for President, Hoover, Roosevelt and the regular bunch should retire and let the two comedians fight it out. Uncle Sam hasn't had a good laugh since the stock market blew up in October 1929, and a good laugh is what he needs at the four year presidential election pain might start all the wheels of industry moving.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q. If a woman passes another woman who is seated at a table in a restaurant, and stops to shake hands, should the one who is seated rise?

A. Not unless she is very young and the one passing is quite old.

Q. What words are used when introducing persons?

A. Say, "May I present my friend Mrs. Jones?" Never say "Meet."

Q. What is the meaning of the initials R.P.A. when writing a visiting card?

A. It is a French phrase, pour prendre congé, meaning, "to take leave."

Poet's Corner

DAWN SONG

When little songs are heard
Of birds, at dawn,
And the young things declare
That night is gone,

Then hearts awake to hope;
The heavy pall
Of darkness trod, they pass
Through gates of day.

Into the living lands,
The land of sleep
Strong citadels of night
Depend and keep.

5 BOOKS BY WOMEN BANNED

Of the six books banned from Canada in the January issue of the National Revenue Review, five were written by women. One of the titles are enough to curl the hair of a wooden image. One of the titles is issued in England and the rest in the United States. Some of the women stoops to stir up a mess she apparently takes no hold measures. One of the present developments of the jazz age is the pronounced tilt towards dirt in the literature of sanitary. No question about is but there's nothing elairs interesting about a fob of gilt off wonagkind. Only men of a certain type have the right to write about sex which seem to find their clientele among the less intelligent members of the fair sex. —Sault Ste. Marie Star.

FUES AND CRUELTY

A New York fur retailer stated recently that mink were common in ten thousand ever sake for furs from animals put to death with modern efficiency. This announcement was made in response to an inquiry as to the progress of the movement to end the tortures of the steel trap by inducing manufacturers to use traps for skins or trapped animals "Not one in ten thousand' ever bothered her head about the cruelty by which her furs were obtained!

There is something curiously purpling in this situation. Are women in fact so utterly indifferent to pain—not to the sufferings of trapped animals that they will not even insist on furs that are obtained without cruelty? The question has but to be asked to bring forth a response positive. Women are not so different. Yet there is one statement: "not one in ten thousand" demands furs from humanely killed animals. What is the answer?

But there is a bright side to the situation. It is found in the great increase in the number of fur farms throughout the length and breadth of the northern half of this continent. There farms multiply every year and today they are found in nearly ovrrey of the northern United States and southern Canada.

It is possible now to visualize the day when there will be no more furs from farms or from animals that are destroyed by means of the cruel steel trap, a disgrace to modern civilization, must go. It is ferocious, by cruel and—it is unnecessary. It is one of the barbarous remnants of an age that the other century has joined the past.—Ottawa Citizen.

PATENTS AS BUSINESS

For those eager for predictions of fair business this year the United States Patent Office may serve as a trade barometer. A falling off in the number of new applications comprises a good outlook for trade, so a spokesman for commerce told the London Morning Post. A recent period of six months showed a rise of 20 per cent. compared to figures for the year ago.

The patent business flourishes in hard times. Manufacturers snap up any idea that looks new. If it can promote business and are less cautious than in boom times. Inventors, too, numbers of people who have always intended to work out a get rich scheme and have it patented think that a business slump gives them the leisure needed.

If all the hundreds of wild plans for relief which have filled the newspaper offices were to be patented, the Patent Office would be a genuine work. New York Times.

WHAT IS ART?

Beauty and the Beast is not the official title of the exhibition which has been seen at the Toronto Art Gallery during the past few weeks. But this title will do as well as any other and is offered for what it is worth.

In an old world garden, suitably seated in the wild flower paintings of the late Beatrice Woodruff, quite decorative, full of woodland charm but lacking in any real artistic flare. The loving care with which the subjects are portrayed is mirrored in every detail.

Across a corridor in the adjoining room is the other half of the exhibition, a panic, according to the view of the visitor. Abstract forms, distortion of perspective, crude anatomical monstrosities. The Matisni product of the modern American artist.

The public divide their attentions within the two adjoining rooms. Among the flowers they are held in fascinated admiration. In the other room they may be amused, shocked or bored. There may be some who find satisfaction there.

In presenting the various moods of the artists world, the Gallery may be only fulfilling its purpose. Even if it is not, pictures are, for the most part, the permanent collection consists of canvases that can be permanently hung. Pictures are the untutored.—Toronto Telegram

TELL-TALE IN BLUSHING IS HUMAN FACE

Expert Says Most of Emotional States Due to Fear

It is a mistake to believe that only the feminine gender blushes. Yes, men blush too. But when they do it they are not apt to say a lot about it, much happier so than do women when they tend to blush to excess.

Strange as it may seem, physiologists have been particularly the late William James —that we don't blush because we are embarrassed but that, indeed, we are embarrassed because we blush. That looks like "pulling the cart before the horse", so to speak. Essentially, however, it is correct.

Blushing and embarrassment and self-consciousness are simply nervousness all more or less go together. And all these emotional states are fear of something.

When a person feels embarrassed he or she, as the case may be, really believes that something has been discovered about himself or herself which he has been trying to hide, something at any rate which he considers a secret. The embarrassions are a variety of fear. With it, of course, goes fear of others and a generally alert and tense state of the emotions.

Now then, these thoughts and ideas just mentioned are, of course, experienced in the brain. And from the mind messages are sent along the spinal cord nerves to the upper spinal column or backbone — and from there to various portions of the autonomic nerves connections are made with the arteries and whether these nerves connections lie the ability of the automatic nervous system to dilate the blood vessels, that is, make them wider so that they can hold more blood. Now comes a disturbing thought of the blush. I have mentioned above some of this whole mechanism starts going and blushing takes place.

But why all this, you may ask? And why particularly should the face be picked out for the engorgement of blood?

As a matter of fact, the rest of the skin surface actually does undergo some engorgement of blood but persons do not notice it except those who suffer markedly from this phenomenon. Marked blushers, however, feel the blood all over. Because of the face it is felt-and seen. The face gives us away, so to speak. It is a telltale which we look for if we want to discover what they are thinking and feeling.

The reason why the blushing mechanism takes place at all is because men and women are so much a count of the fear element involved. Fear is nature's way of telling the system the body must try and protect itself. The way it can do that best is by engorging the blood vessels in question and by running. To run away from danger or to prepare for the blood vessels are dilated so as to carry more blood.

Blushing often becomes a terrible torment. Men, as stated above, can run away from it, but women are supposed to be found among young girls. Blushing and blushing fears are curable however. What is needed is knowledge of the psychological action of the thought processes and the emotions. Sometimes the glandular system is also involved. Indeed, even the general health may be at fault.

All kinds of emotional states may sometimes be traced back to some unfortunate childhood experience. It is surprising, however, how many of these can be traced back to some variant of fear, often started when the individual was but a child.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Itching of the skin may have various causes. The skin may be too dry. The complaint may come from faulty diet or disordered nerves. Sponging the affected parts with a weak carbonate of soda solution may give relief but always should the cause be sought.

Economic Breakdown is Merely Deferred Paish Tells Board

London, Feb. 11.—The breakdown of the present economic structure has been delayed by recent drastic measures in the principal countries of Europe, Sir George Paish, noted economist, said this morning, in his prediction on December 19th that the collapse would occur within two months.

"Since that prediction, the United States formed a huge loan corporation and Germany has negotiated a new standstill agreement on her obligations," Sir Paish said. "Thus they have deferred the otherwise inevitable collapse, but they have not cured the disease. Both actions are merely palliatives."

The Cubs play the return game in Kingston on Friday night and if they can't get a win on the Kingston forwards for the first few minutes of each period will be cheek by jowl closely we are of the opinion that the Cubs will come home with another victory under their belt. It was the opening of such period in which the Cubs seemed to be outplayed. Tomorrow night will tell the tale! Manager Lowery is confident and may get into tomorrow night's game.

No Evidence to Be Put in By Defence

Moving Picture Trial for Alleged Trade Restraint in Third Week

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 11 (CP)—Indication that no evidence would be submitted by the defence and that the case would be concluded by the end of this Week was given yesterday at the trial of N. L. Nathanson, J. S. Bloom, Samuel Fine and fifteen motion picture concerns, charged with restraint of trade.

W. N. Tilley, K.C., chief defence counsel, representing the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, indicated defence counsel would rest itself with closing argument and summings-up of counsel.

Heard On The Street

Somewhere in one of the old school books ran the poem: "She's somebody's mother, boys, you know the rest." Then the little story about the old lady who, bewildered by the traffic on the road at the point she wished to cross, stood dazed in the middle of the street while the unfeeling drivers of the vehicles sped past without a pause, and nearby spectators stood on the corner and smiled at the old lady's plight. Then if you read that far, you learned that one of the boys who had been left out of sight, acted in true Horatio Alger fashion, saw the old lady and true to his teachings, ran to her, clutched her by the arm and guided her safely to the other side. Then he ran back across the road to her help in the furnace, but on the way he stopped long enough to deliver some caustic comment to the loungers, reminding them that after all she perhaps was somebody's mother.

o—o—o—o

A day or so ago a slight old lady, dressed in a style more comparable with the fashions of her more matronly years, approached the intersection of Bridge Street and Front and hesitatingly stepped off the curb into the road and directly in front of the waiting cars which were throbbing impatiently for the usual signal light to turn from red to green. At just the moment she stepped in front of the cars the signal light changed, the waiting cars roared to life and the customary scene of confusion and fear existing each community when the old lady dashed, hesitated and stepped back just as one car, the driver impatient of her slow and undecided movements attempted to pass her on the left, at the moment another one swerved directly behind her and over the spot where she occupied an instant before. Again she stepped forward to cross in the small opening that had been left . . . and another car directly behind her stopped with a jolt and let that interested to part the fenders of the chassis. A group of young men on the corner stood, watched the old lady, and smiled superiorly at her bewilderment. She looked wildly around and let go her shoulder. Then closed her eyes.

Around the corner at that moment appeared a young boy of indefinite age—probably twelve. He swung along carelessly and with school books under his arm. History was about to repeat itself. The crossing was approached, he stepped off, took the situation in at a glance and young footsteps quickening he made his way behind the group and through the whissing cars he piloted her to safety. Leaving her on the sidewalk and pretending he did not hear her thanks he plunged manfully into the traffic of the road, he touched his cap and hurried off down the street. Once more the red light flashed on and once more the restless cars came to a temporary pause.

The community has had spelling bees, domino parties, endurance checker contests (a local fireman is city champ, by the way) and all the rest of the old fashioned games, but the new high mark for pure entertainment was furnished in one home in town the other evening when a real old style coalmine lamp was held and enjoyed by the many present. Beyond the fact that several knuckles were skinned and a few finger nails broken there were no other casualties. Any gamers at "Run of the Mine" and "Blind Man's Bluff" will probably follow in the near future.

One-third of the population of this city saw Seth Parker in a local theatre. Seth is Deacon Elmer Dolin (Princeton) from away back when. Personally Denmark is now in Orange, Texas, playing in a road show" but the man who saw the above picture came out of the theatre and went to the last show of another one—to calm his nerves before he went home. One of the local reporters went to a church service to other night and was mistaken for a visiting minister. A downtown butcher came down to open the shop the other morning to find a dead fifty-three pound calf on the doorstep. Origin unknown. The transom was used for a door. A large carton of tobacco was stolen from an uptown confectionery store. Mystery. A local girl was married. There were only empty boxes in it. A mysterious explosion occurred in the basement of the fast side house the other evening and the police are still wondering about it. The possibility was advanced that some shotgun shells got mixed up with the coal.

When a little news item appeared in the paper the other day about ten men cutting one cord of wood a company got mobbed by men looking for work. The item did not specify the actual amount being handled. Fifty-three years old, a genius at cutting wood and eating and the guests went home in varying degrees of dizziness and condition. One of the boys dumped a lot of fuel into the furnace and burned it. A local man is looking all over town for a swap on license plates. He has a "thirteen" on his rear and a "fifteen" on the front. One other has a "thirteen" on his rear plate and is worried to death. One other man has a "thirteen" and is trying to build his own television set. And the demand for the old time crystal set still continues.

The town clock bell strikes nine at ten o'clock. One of the gears is broken. Two men are playing checkers on the floor in the hall of an apartment house the other night and the place had to be evacuated. A local man, fifty-three years old, is getting married in June. One of them was pulled some time ago and another one is coming in. Hairpins are twenty-five cents a box. Local Chinese laundries are looking for a break when a new large store opens up for business in Belleville. The store will employ considerable shopgirls the other afternoon came out of the store with arms full of parcels, dumped them into the car and returned for another tour. She hasn't seen the car since—and it was not her car that she put them in. Her car had been parked further up the street. An all-Canadian society is in the process of formation in the city. Local Chinese have been subsidized for the war in their country, thereby beating the record of their brothers in other town exactly by one month and twenty-seven days. Another clothes line was raided in Coleman Ward the other night and the whole line taken. And no matter how cold it gets an east side resident sleeps outdoors.

Belleville Juniors Gain Two Goal Lead in Group Playoff With Kingston

Score 6 to 4, Locals Have Bigger Margin in Play Than Score

TEAM CLICKED

Shows Best Performance of Year in Downing Frontenacs

Staging a belated third period rally the Belleville Cubs defeated the Kingston Frontenac juniors by the score of 6 to 4, thereby procuring for themselves a two goal lead to take into Kingston tomorrow night, at the Belleville Arena last night.

The game was a typical Kingston-Belleville battle as the fans witnessed plenty of action, thereby and to make the game a success Harry Morgan and Pye Hodgson ing in a fine little fistic encounter, in which all the players participated, during the final period. Both fighting were held between the players and the game ended with a perfect feeling of sportsmanship between the participants.

Although the Cubs entertain a two goal lead, they will try to defend in Kingston tomorrow night, they should have had at least a four goal margin to say the least. The poor work of the local's defence and the indifferent work of George Scopis, on two occasions, cut the locals down considerably. But then juniors are juniors and too much cannot be expected of boys under 20 years of age, when under strain of battle.

Providing that the Cubs take Friday night's game, at Kingston, a little more scrutiny is in there is likely that they will come home with a victory in the Limestone City, tucked away.

The Frontenacs presented quite a varied crew, when they pulled out players from most every town in Eastern Ontario. Sharpe, in the nets for the visitors turned in an excellent game, although he does come from the village of Sunbury. Blake and Langdon were a tower of strength on their defence. Although Langdon lives in Kingston it was no less a personage than Joe Smith, Kingston's veteran hockey player, who made the Kingstonian recognize his fact. Covert the Deseronto boy, who the locals passed up, and is now playing centre for the Frontenacs, is a player of no mean ability. Of course all sport fans know that Card and Wilson of Napanee, are excellent hockey players and they were quite in evidence with-in the ice. Of the Kingston boys, that is the substitutes, Nicholson was the pick of the four. The other three, Gibson, no relation to "Hoot" and Samwell turned in excellent hockey for their home team. "Art" Casserton, their manager has spared considerable time in drilling his "pets" as they presented an almost perfect line of offense last night. In all, the Frontenacs have a very good team of junior players and it will not be the fault if they buy all evening in order to come home, Friday night, with a win to their credit. But, if the Cubs get in the game and Bill Sherry returns

WALTER MONSON

Centre star of the Winnipegs, Canadian Olympic representatives, was added to the team this year to take the place of Art Ross, who retired, was shifted back to the defence. Monson has a tricky style, is an effective poke check and feeds his two fast wings, Wentz and Smith, quite excellently. He is an automobile salesman in Winnipeg.

Much is expected of Monson in the final game against the Americans on Saturday. His speed should account for much in the crucial game.

Both goal tenders of the locals would be an injustice as all of them were right on the job all evening and both gave and received without actually any saw quarters, especially rewards. MacDonald, McGuire, H. Morgan and Nichol all excelled themselves and were rewarded with goals. Ehlker and Pollwell were much in evidence on the defence, Ehlker was in their work on the offensive. Goyder and Gow, the latter in his usual steady game and do not have to take a back seat from the ordinary junior of today. George Scopis in the nets, stopped many a hard and difficult shot but his clearing on a few occasions almost gave the fans heart failure. Scopis left his puck wide open for the opposition to tear in and beat. George can work a much better game, than he did last night, and we do doubt will be in better form in Kingston. Except, in the opening moments of the second period, when the visitors had it all over the locals, the Cubs were much better than their adversaries. A little more combination, around the opponent's defence would have been no doubt accountable for more goals being scored by the Cubs, last night. "Aud" Walsh, the local's fourth substitute, did not have a chance to display his wares as Coach Thompson realized that the boy had but little actual O.H.A. experience for such a gruelling contest. Walsh will, however, be quite in evidence before long.

As to the disputed goal in the second period when the locals were awarded the counter by Referee Collett, which Kingston claimed that official did not actually see the goal scored but, he was in doubt and when he asked the goal-umpire, that official stated, that the goal had been scored, but he could not get at the switch to turn the light on. This is the exact statement which was handed down by Referee Collett after the game. The game was very clean throughout and with the exception of the little "tiff" between H. Morgan and Wilson all the eight penalties were for minor offences. Of the eight penalties the locals received five and the visitors three.

The Play

Play opened rather cautiously and "Aud" Card had the first shot of the game when he tested Scopis from close in. McDonald and H. Morgan retaliated and Wilson, not again beaten by Scopis, Play raged up and down the sand as the fans, about 700 all told, (that includes passes and guests amongst what not) awoke to the fact that they were about to witness a hockey match of real human ability, action began to really happen. Thrills upon thrills were handed out to the patrons before Ehlker and Pollwell heavily loaded the locals' forwards and left a fine opening for Harry Morgan and Red. MacDonald and Ehlker intelligent

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess

Who what he sees doth understand.
Increasing knowledge doth command.
—Old Mother Nature.

Several times when he had been out in the evening Farmer Brown's Boy had heard strange sounds unlike any he ever had heard before. They were not always alike. In fact they varied considerably. He had guessed that they were made by an Owl, because he could think of no one else, but still he was puzzled. Never had he heard Hooty the Screech Owl or any Hooty the Great Horned Owl or other members of the family with whom he was acquainted make such noises.

Then one morning when he was sweeping the barn floor he picked up a curious thing. It was a little pellet made of small bones rolled up in fur. Farmer Brown's Boy picked up that pellet and on his face was a look of puzzlement. He knew what he had found. He had found similar pellets many times. He knew that those pellets were the bones of a Mouse and the fur was the fur of a Mouse, and that this was all that remained of a Mouse who had been eaten by an Owl. He knew that bones and fur and feathers cannot be digested, so Old Mother Nature has so planned matters for all members of the Owl family that the things they cannot digest in their stomachs are rolled together in pellets and these the Owls drop from their mouths just as you or I would spit out the seeds of an orange or a cherry.

Farmer Brown's Boy knew instantly what he had found. What puzzled him was the size of it, together with the finding of it in the barn. He had more than once found pellets dropped by Spooky and Screech Owl, who sometimes ventured into the barn to hunt for Mice, but these were hardly half the size of this one.

"This is big enough to have come from the mouth of Hooty the Great Horned Owl," said he and stared up in the dim light that beneath the roof. "Yes, sir, it is so. But I've never known Hooty to come inside. I wonder if there are any more of these pellets around?"

He hunted about on the floor of the barn but found no more. Then he went upstairs to the mow where the hay was stored. From one end the hay had been used and save for dust and seed the floor was quite bare. That is it was quite bare but for these things and pellets. There were ever so many of the latter and Farmer Brown's Boy knew that whoever had dropped them was in the habit of sitting somewhere above, probably on one of the rafters.

At once he began to look along the rafters, taking each in turn. Up there there was little light and he could not see clearly. At first he could make out nothing that even resembled a big bird. Then, just as he was about to give up, there sailed out of a dark, far corner a big bird with broad silent wings. He alighted on a rafter just above and leaning over to look down at him exposed the odd face that ever Farmer Brown's Boy had seen.

For perhaps two minutes he stared with such a look of unbelief in his face that you would have laughed had you been there. Meanwhile the Owl was leaning forward and bobbing his head in the funniest way as he watched every move made by Farmer Brown's Boy. There was a look of suspicion and a look of worry mingled in those big staring eyes.

At last Farmer Brown's Boy found his tongue. "Whoopee!" he cried. "It can't be, but it is! I don't believe it, but it is so! That's a Barn Owl! As sure as I am Farmer Brown's Boy that is a Barn Owl! I never have seen one before; I never have even heard of one being seen in this part of the state but there is no mistaking that monkey-like face. I wish there were two of them. Yes, sir, that is what I wish."

As if in answer out of that same dark corner flew another and joined the first on the rafter overhead. So it was that Farmer

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

LOOK OUT FOR THE HANDKERCHIEF scarf as it seems to be one of the season's biggest favorites and is used even on evening frocks. A slim, moulded, seamed and bellous frock of scarlet semi-sheer crepe has a decolletage marked by a carelessly knotted hankie-scarf of silver cloth.

A GOOD REASON to accept lots of formal invitations is the lovely wrap of white velvet with a double cape bordered with fluffy white fox.

ALMOST READY for our new spring coats we find that there are many wearable models. Typical of the new styles is a coat in green diagonal woolen with an adjustable cape collar banded with sand colored fox. The sleeves have puffs above the elbow and long tightly buttoned cuffs that extend from elbow to wrist.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

LIPSTICK LOGIC

Prowling round cosmetic counters is one of the zestiest diversions of the sisterhood. Cosmetic chemists are resourceful. No telling what they may be up to, and it's well to be careful. A woman may not believe in Santa Claus, she may be as hardshelled as an old walnut — a dragon guarding the family budget—and she may still cherish the notion that some wonderful day—she'll pick up a little jar of something or other that contains beauty magic, makes her over "just like that".

And that isn't being exactly dumb either. Let us consider the lipstick which has been picked on by long-nosed critics, and which has scattered all kinds of abuse even at the hands of those who love it. It does supply a need. While it reddens the lips it turns on the cheerful lighting system of the spirit. Pale lips, faint heart. What if the woman next door does throw a dirty look at the mouth lacquer? It puts you on your toes, whispers in your ear "There's life in the old gal yet." That's certainly something that's worth one half of one dollar.

Careful, discreet application of lip enamel adds immeasurably to the composition of the feminine pulse. That it enhances the pearly whiteness of the teeth, makes yellow ones look less bilious, is a statement that even chronic carpers won't question.

Women who take time to note different coloring effects, who study the contour of the lips and then use about as little as much pigment on the cosmetic lawn allow will find in the lipstick a friend and a brother, as it were.

There should be a pair of sticks in the make-up box, one of natural tone for daylight use and a more vivid shade for evening. Remember when the lights are on and the merry party in full swing a girl and her sympathetic complexion are no better terms. Strong sunlight is not any too kind to human faces; appears to leer and sneer a bit at lady faces that are carrying too heavy a load of sham beauty.

The vivid red lipstick is back again. It was relegated to the shelf by wonders of complexion wares, but the gals wouldn't stand for that. They bellowed loud and lamented, and protests brought results.

A new fancy is lavender powder and a lipstick of crimson with a violet cast. The combination won't be kind to the brunette, but the white-haired bundle of loveliness can get away with it, and maybe the blonde baby whose complexion has defied time and the elements.

Wide faces, with large features, bear up under heavily pigmented lips better than delicate, oval ones which require the craftier touch and lighter color. Shape is full under lip should be red-relveted only in the center.

Creaming the lips before using the lipstick will make for a smoother, better finish. And it may interest you to know that you can buy indelible products that you can't lap up along with your mushrooms.

A double chin's no fun if it's your chin...

By Julia Foster*

WHEN massaging your chin don't rub the skin reckless back and forth in a vain effort to remove surplus fat. Instead, use a gentle, rotating motion. And P.S. In order that any skin treatment be effective the pores must be receptive. That is why experts insist on a thorough Palmolive Soap cleansing first.

A handy tool tube showing exact amount of oil that goes into each cake of Palmolive.

OLIVE OIL for the complexion! Always known to keep skin soft, supple, youthful. In thousands of years nothing has ever been found to surpass this beauty secret of the ancients. But can you get enough olive oil in soap? How much, actually, goes in Palmolive? There is the exact amount—in that test tube at the right. The exact amount used in every cake of Palmolive. To this generous olive oil content can be directly traced the great benefits of Palmolive Soap to the complexion.

Palmolive is the only large-selling soap made of vegetable oils exclusively—the only one using olive oil as a base. Other Palmolive ingredients are simply palm oils necessary to produce a lather—creamier, more workable lather than possible with olive oil alone.

Over 20,000 leading beauty experts say Palmolive Soap is the finest possible safeguard for lovely skin.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Bridesmaid.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am to act as bridesmaid for a friend of mine soon. The bride is to wear white and I am to wear pink chiffon. Will it be correct for me to wear a rhinestone necklace with bracelet to match? The ceremony will take place in the morning.

2. Is flat silver an appropriate present from the bridesmaid to the bride.

3. When visiting a friend, is it correct to say, "thank you" when anything is passed by the maid, such as coffee, cake, and so forth?

A. M. C.

1. It is for the bride to say what she wishes to have you wear, both as to costume and accessories. Have you asked her? I see no reason why this necklace and bracelet wouldn't be a lovely combination to wear, but do ask the bride.

2. This depends. Usually the bride's family plan to give her the flat silver, and usually she has in mind a special pattern that she wishes. But if you are sure that the silver hasn't been planned for and if you are sure of the pattern that she prefers, this would be a lovely gift.

3. Yes—a "thank you" is always an appropriate and gracious thing to say for even the smallest of services, and well-bred people do not spare their expressions of appreciation.

After Dinner Coffee.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to use the coffee spoon for the regular size coffee cup, or is it used only for demitasse?

Mrs. A. M. B.

The small after dinner coffee spoon should be used only with the after dinner coffee cup. It is of a size appropriate for this, but too small for a larger cup.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

NORANDA AND NICKEL RISE

Small Gains Among Leaders—Rest of Board is Slow

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 11—Interlisted issues on the standard mining exchange responded to freedom strength on industrial boards today, but the general run of mining shares failed to show material improvement. Changes at most were small, with small gains somewhat in the majority.

International Nickel and Noranda were strong spots, former moving above 18 for a 50-cent gain the latter forcing 80 to 81. Silvers also were in better demand. Mining Corporation advancing 5c to 90 and Eldorado a cent to $1.17. Sentiment was up a small fraction, shrewd the only change among cheaper oils.

Dome sold up 5c to $10.05 in moderately increased volume and Lake Shore and The Pas were up 5c apiece at $28.50 and $4.60, respectively. Orandas, Wayne came out in an odd lot at 30 off 10. Among lower priced gold issues, Moffat was made some advances, while Buffalo and Hollinger lost a little ground.

WHEAT, WOOL MEAT EXEMPT

Import Duties Bill Said to Be First Aid to Agriculture

LONDON, Feb. 10.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Sir John Gilmour, minister of agriculture, announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that all Agricultural and Horticultural produce from foreign countries with the exception of wheat, wool and meat, will be included within the scope of the Imports duties bill introduced in the house yesterday.

Sir John described the step as an immediate aid to British Agriculture. His announcement further clarifies the position of Empire producers. It means that the Agricultural and Horticultural products of the British Dominions and Colonies will enjoy a measure of at least 10 per cent preference in markets of the British Market until the Imperial Economic Conference assembles in July.

The Imports duties bill introduced and given first reading yesterday provides for imposition of a general 10 per cent duty on all foreign products except wheat, meat, wool and cotton, British-caught fish, tea and coffee.

PENSIONS NEED STRESSED AT LEGION SUPPER

had been formed by returned men and for the returned men, were found to be inadequate. The Canadian ambassador from the British Empire Canadian Legion to help the ex-service man in his difficulties. The work of the Legion in the north Ontario district, he said, was of great value both to the men and to the communities in which they lived and who had been subsisting on local and municipal charities were, through the Legion, receiving much help from the Dominion Government. This relief, he said, at little expense, not the communities in which such cases exist.

Look to Country

The Legion stresses the country to live up to the promise made to the men when they enlisted for service overseas. 17,000 retained now are still without recognition on the pension board and these must be gratified to help, having been disabled in service for their country. An effort is to be made to help these men without increasing the burden of taxation, which is too heavy, even now, he said. The Legion is also on the men of the Legion are still willing to help their comrades to the best and help. That the men of the Legion were willing to stand by the country was shown in the 15 months for was proved by Mr. Hood, who pointed out that nothing happened in his home town of Oshawa, that something of Communists was to be held in that part. There was a police who was dubious as to whether the Legion, now of politicians would be able to cope with them called Mr. Hood to be the president of the Oshawa branch of the Legion, and during the many months he would be able to round up before 3 p.m. for a stag meeting. As it was there was it gave Mr. Hood very little time to notify many of the men of the meeting with some of the former officers. Practically all of the men who had them lined up at the park waiting for the Legion meeting to start. When the leaders of the Communist party met the superintendent of police and saw these ex-service men lined up with rifles in their arms, they turned around and went back to Toronto without holding their meeting. Veterans Ready

Every man of the Sault Ste. Marie Legion was ready to join a volunteer in case of any Communistic disturbance. At the present time the welfare of the country above all other things, the deserves some preference as to their pensions. Mr. Hood also went on to say that the Legion stood for Canada and the British Empire as one and that they did not hold with the idea that some of the people have that it might be a good thing for Canada to join the United States or even become a separate country altogether. That Canada and England should stand together was expressed as one of aims of Can. Legion. International Peace is also a great aim of the Veterans and is the reason for the Allied Veterans' Leagues with the countries, who fought in the Great War both friend and foe, the object is to help maintain peace throughout the world. At the Geneva disarmament conference, which opened last week Mussolini and other leading names were presented asking that everything possible should be done to secure world wide peace. He also stated that the Legion did not want to become involved in any way with politics but would bring its influence to bear in the interests of justice and fair play.

Free Breakfast Needed

Mr. Hood stated that free breakfast legislation was needed by the legion for all Veterans, who were unable to pay. The present situation puts this cost on the municipal government, when it should have a grant from the provincial government for this purpose. A man, who does not receive a pension is unable to receive treatment at his own expense. This is under consideration now and it is hoped that he will be able to offer free hospitalization to all returned men.

A pension board has been formed and all cases are to be looked into closely and only those who are worthy of a pension will receive it. Formerly this was not the case and tion was paid to the pensioner as an individual but extended to the family as a whole. Now the Board of Appeal will sit and any man claiming made, each will be given careful consideration. Those benefits to the men applying for pension have been brought about by the work of the Legion and it is the duty of every returned man to support and join the Canadian Legion. Mr. Hood said in conclusion, that a few years ago he visited the battlefields in France and Belgium and was deeply impressed by the sacrifices that had been made by the men who had died there. He said that they had not died in vain but that they had done their duty and that it was now the duty of the living to see that the sacrifices made by the dead were not in vain.

MARIE DRESSLER AS "EMMA"
NOW AT THE BELLE

That grand old lady of the screen the incomparable Marie Dressler, steps out with another laugh inducing, tender and human portrayal in her new starrie "Emma." In Emma you see Marie Dressler as a devoted and loyal housekeeper, bringing up the motherless children of an eccentric inventor who eventually makes a great discovery and becomes fabulously wealthy. Through all the years, the dark as well as the bright, Emma is the guiding spirit in the home, watching over them all, catering to their whims as well as their needs. In fact, she does everything humanly possible for one loving woman to accomplish for a long list of children.

But when the old inventor, tired of his busy existence, secretly marries Emma, the children see in their step-mother a menace. Nothing more than a common servant, and do not hesitate to take pot shots at their legal step mother. And Emma, the new inventor dies suddenly, it is discovered, to the utter amazement of the ungrateful children, that the entire fortune of millions has been left not to them but to Emma!

Well, not only does Marie Dressler meet this situation with accustomed vigor, but she actually does do something and does it with screamingly amusing things. So well does she handle the situation that you're more than apt to stand right up and cheer her on. In short Marie presents Marie Dressler with the most effective story of her career. And into her portrayal she injects that indefinable virtue of quaintness that has endeared her to millions has been left not to them but to Emma!

There are countless scenes which will droll face and expressive gestures make richly humorous.

"Emma" which Clarence Brown directed, comes to the Belle Wednesday for three days, matinee daily. It is the work of Frances Marion, famous as the author of "The Champ."

Charlie Chase in a peppy sizzling comedy, "Tobacco Kid", Tom and Jerry in a clever novelette called "Swiss Tricks," and the Belle Sound News, will be exhibited on the same program. Friday is ladies' Silverware night, each lady attending will receive a gift.

At The Capitol

VERY FUNNY PROGRAM
NOW AT THE CAPITOL

If it were possible to remember all the screen programmes presented to the Belleville public since the commencement of movie entertainment, it is safe to say that no two hour programmes was ever so crowded with laughs as the one now being shown at the Capitol.

"The big laugh of course is "Peach O'Reno" starring that priceless pair of clowns, Wheeler and Woolsey—and what a laugh! Just imagine those two as Reno lawyers, providing evidence for incompatable couples, and even going to the extent of impersonating the necessary female co-respondents!

All the wise-cracks are absolutely new and when the lady, tired of her husband complained of being doubled up with a pain every night, Woolsey expressed surprise that she was still living with her husband!

"Peach O'Reno" is the funniest thing that came out of Hollywood.

Rose Hobart plays the role of merit, and in "Oland Parade" he puts on some g-g-g-good fur-ful-fun!

The naggers, newcomer to the comedy world, are excellent in "The Naggers' Anniversary" and "Bosko, The Doughboy" is a cartoon of variety from the funny side.

The daily change in feature nature on the programme is a trip into Central America, with that interesting character, Tom Jerrie, the video adventurer, who shows us some very curious things in Guatmalians praying at the pilgrimage to the Virgin of Esquipulas.

This programme plays at the Capitol today, Thursday. Save Gift night as usual and Friday.

Belleville Service Man

W. A. Fraser M.P. answered Mr. Hood's address and declared himself as a staunch supporter of the Legion and its work and offered his services in any way that it could be of any members of the Legion. He has had a wide and varied experience in regards to the pensions, which he has helped different men to secure. Mr. Fraser is of the belief, that the men who, at the end of the war at the time of their discharge were probably physically all right but contracted illness, since proved that they had suffered injuries during the war. These were not apparent at the time were nevertheless caused by it. These cases he believes should be investigated thoroughly.

Further Cases of Peace

Mr. Sharpe called upon Sam Nesbitt former M.P.P., to say a few words and he did in his usual blunt straight forward and humorous style. Having a part in the last war he has quote him says, "War is Hell", and for this reason urged the Legion in their efforts to further the cause of peace. He also spoke of pensions which everyone agreed upon that is to have a gathering of the various branches to meet at say Presqu'ile some time in the summer. Mr. Carlow, chairman of the Pay Commission extended a hearty welcome and in his address he said meeting of all the branches in this zone was held in Belleville.

In conclusion or the evening Major Rogers of the Trenton Branch extended an invitation to the members to Vimy Night which is to be held on April 17th in Trenton. Mr. Keith Roblin in a few well chosen words thanked Mr. Hood for attending and speaking at this gathering.

MUTUAL LIFE CO'S PROGRESS

Sixty - Second Annual Meeting Held at Waterloo is Optimistic

Waterloo, Ont., Feb. 4th, 1932—Substantial growth and satisfactory progress during the year 1931 were revealed in the report presented to policyholders of The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada at the 62nd annual meeting, held in Waterloo today.

New assurances issued and paid for during 1931 amounting to $33,183,505. Total assurances in force increased by $20,546,819 to a total of $313,279,927. Total income for the year was $27,330,943, and total disbursements to policyholders and their beneficiaries $13,161,937. The Company's assets increased over $9,000,000 to a total of $125,965,129. Surplus earnings amounted to $5,463,880.

The President, Mr. R. O. McCulloch, referred particularly to the net increase of assurances in force, which he described as eminently satisfactory.

The ratio of expenses to total income dropped over 1% to 12.845%. A substantial amount was deducted from the profits of the year to provide for possible losses on investments. Any possible unfavorable contingencies are amply provided for by the Company's reserves and free surplus funds. Death losses were well within expectations and the net rate of interest earned on invested funds very satisfactory.

Mr. McCulloch pointed out that at the end of 1930 a total of $114,230,135 was invested in bonds. At December 31st, 1931, this investment had increased to $117,000,000, of which 68.1% was invested in government and municipal bonds, 19% in railways, 9.6% in public utilities, 10.7% in industrials, 9.1% in parochials and miscellaneous, many of the securities held during the year; $7,079,315 was in government bonds, and $532,377 in bonds and debentures of cities, the total increase in these two classes alone being practically 97% of the total net increase. The value at which the securities were taken, he the statement, is considerably less than the value allowed by the Department of Insurance at Ottawa.

Mortgage investments were increased by $3,725,775 to $43,270,000. Of this total, $34,312,666, or 78.57%, is invested in first mortgages on improved urban properties, and the balance in farm mortgages.

In closing his address, Mr. McCulloch said: "It would be rash to express an opinion as to when we may emerge from the adverse conditions under which the world is laboring, or as to whether we have definitely passed the worst, but the great resources of this country, coupled with an industrious population which has now recognized its difficulties and is steadily facing them, justifies a confident faith in the future of Canada, and I am optimistic enough to hope that we shall see a general improvement in 1932."

SURPLUS EARNINGS OF $5,463,880.00

DIAMONDS IN SUPERIOR AREA

Prof. E. S. Moore States Olivenite May Contain Gems

Toronto, Feb. 10.—Diamonds are hidden somewhere in those grim rocks which bound the shores of Lake Superior, Professor E. S. Moore of the Department of Geology of the University of Toronto agreed with the statement made by Dr. S. H. Ball, who declared to his Royal Canadian Institute audience on Saturday evening last that Canadian women may some day wear Canadian diamonds.

"When Canadian diamonds are found, they will be embedded in basic rock," said Professor Moore. "We have no yellow ground and blue ground like South Africa, but we have olivenite, a mineral, which often indicates, or which is frequently accompanied by, rock with diamond content."

It may be that Canada's diamonds are buried beneath the inland sea, Lake Superior, he said, "in that case they are lost forever, for that great body of water can never be drained. Its bottom is below sea level. Geologists, however, insist that diamonds are there, either on this basin's rim or below, for diamonds have been found in the soils of the states immediately south of it. From the northern reaches of Canada they were carried down by glaciers."

Lindsay, Feb. 9—At the close of the evening service in St. Paul's Anglican Church Sunday evening representatives of the church, the Sunday School, the A.T.P.A. and the Bowling Club gathered in the parish hall to bid farewell to Mr. Reg. Abraham who left Monday for Picton where he has been appointed Collector of Customs, a well-earned promotion.

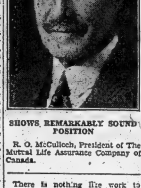
CARL SCHAEFER CROWNED CHAMP

Wins Figure Skating For Men Dethroning Gillis Grafstrom

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 10—Carl Schaefer, young university student of Winnipeg, was crowned man's Olympic figure skating champion in the early hours of the morning today, lifting him to the international title above Gillis Grafstrom, of Sweden, who won the championship both in 1924 and 1928.

Schaefer, bitter rival of the Swedish veteran, easily took the title with five of the seven judges voting for him for "first place while the other two named him second. Grafstrom received the other two votes for first place, and three for second.



Montgomery Wilson, Toronto, North American champion, who had given an impressive display of the standard movements and figures, was awarded third place. He received five votes for that position and two for fourth.

The judges reached their decision several hours after completion of the men's competition last night, a brilliant display of free style skating that kept a capacity crowd of 2,000 in the Olympic indoor arena cheering as one after another of the champions and contenders of eight nations went through their graceful and intricate manoeuvres.

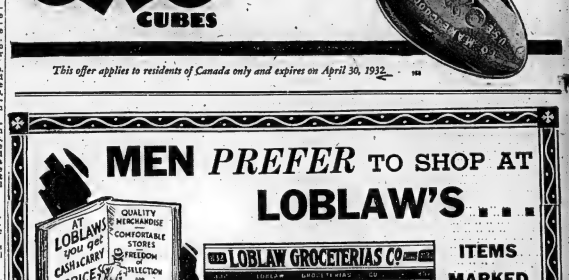
Macdonald College Celebrates

The Twenty Fifth Anniversary of Macdonald College with particular emphasis on Founder's Day, February 10th, focuses attention on this institution and its founder, the late Sir William C. Macdonald who built, equipped and endowed the entire institution at an expense of more than six million dollars.

Founder's Day which this year, marks the 101st Anniversary of the birth of the late Sir William C. Macdonald, founder of the Macdonald Tobacco Company and Canada's greatest benefactor, once more draws attention to the tremendous scope of his benefactions to McGill University with which the Macdonald College at St. Anne de Bellevue is affiliated. These benefactions total more than twelve and one half million dollars, $10,690,165 of which was given during his. While the Faculty of Science and of Scientific Agriculture was possibly the dearest to Sir William's heart, every faculty of the McGill University benefited during his life and after. The Faculty of Law received $252,500. The Conservatorium of Music $300,000. The Faculty of Medicine was bequeathed $400,000. The McCord Museum Building was purchased at a cost of $142,000, while the Macdonal Park site now occupied by the Stadium, and the Student's Park was purchased at a cost of more than one million dollars and presented to the University. Student's activities came under the benefient scope of Sir William as the McGill Union testifies. Sir William spent $219,000 on its erection and equipment. In addition to the wonderful equipment at St. Anne de Bellevue, these buildings at McGill which bear the Macdonald name and those donated by the late Tobacco knight, stand today, as the greatest monument to his memory.



Macdonald College was founded by the late Sir William in 1907. It was specially designed to include three schools—one for agriculture, one for household science, and one for normal teacher training. The gift included the grounds, almost 500 acres in extent, the complete equipment and endowment. The college itself was incorporated with the University of McGill as the Faculty of Agriculture, although the teachers' training feature is possibly his best known contribution to life in the Province of Quebec.

Other sections of the country have benefited by the late Sir William's benefactions, the Macdonald Institute and the Macdonald Hall at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, being among the most important.

O. S. D. ACTIVITIES

From "The Canadian"

At the close of the proceeding at the Association's dinner meeting, Hon. Mr. Martin was taken through the residences in order that he might see for himself how very inefficient our sleeping accommodation is, especially in the boys' dormitories. While there he was the guest of Superintendent Petterly, and left for Toronto about nine o'clock Saturday morning.

On Tuesday evening, the 11th inst., our Superintendent, Mr. Petterly, was the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Rotarian Club of Napanee, and gave a most interesting and instructive address on educational work for the deaf in general, and, in more detail, described the methods, employed, the ideals aimed at and the results achieved at the Ontario School for the Deaf Mr. Petterly was accompanied by our Bursar, Mr. McGuire at these and similar functions in Trenton and Peterboro.

On day last week we were favored with an official and a very enjoyable and much appreciated visit from Dr. H. E. Amoss, Provincial Inspector of Auxiliary Classes and D. Walker, B.A., Director of Professional Training in Toronto.

On January 31st, 1859, there first saw the light of day a wee baby who has since proved to be a deaf but a gentleman, by name Geo. F. Stewart. Little did he know, in that he was destined to become one of the most popular and highly respected teachers the O.S.D. has ever had. He is greatly loved not only by the present pupils, but also by those who have graduated, especially those who have been fortunate enough to have been his pupils. Since he is greatly loved, it is no wonder that all the pupils remember his birthday each year as it comes around. This year the seniors took him by surprise on the twenty-first when they presented him with a handsome desk set combining a lamp and library set in the stands. We know that he was greatly taken with our gift, and it was a joy for us to so remember him.

The work of the School has been somewhat interfered with the last few days by a mild epidemic of flu, also a few cases of measles. None of the cases are serious, all are making speedy and satisfactory recovery, and we hope that very soon our normal health conditions will prevail. Parents of pupils can rest assured that there is no occasion for alarm.

Phillis Copeman and Bo Waugh were among the guests at a birthday party given by Mrs. W. Finkle in her little girl. Mrs. Finkle was formerly a teacher at the O.S.D. and has never lost interest in the school. Bo and Phillis enjoyed the party very much and greatly appreciate Mrs. Finkle's kindness.

Ten Timely Advertising Tips

A successful retailer who has spent the best part of his advertising appropriation in good newspaper copy gave ten points which had helped him to become a successful business man through advertising. The ten points:

1. I advertise regularly. Every issue of the paper takes my story to its readers.

2. I make every ad look like mine. Years ago I adopted a distinctive style, and I have stuck to it. I use plenty of white space; my ads are never hard to read.

3. I put into newspaper advertising a definite proportion of my gross sales which I fix at the beginning of the year. My rule is to make it three per cent. of the previous year's gross, with more if special conditions justify it.

4. I brighten my ads with frequent illustrations, either humorous or practical. This costs me little, as the up-to-date newspapers supply these.

5. I am careful never to over-promise. Then, when I really have an unusual bargain, people believe me when I "whoop 'er up a little."

6. I think advertising all the time, I buy goods that will advertise me. Sometimes I buy goods just for their advertising value.

7. I get good display for my ads by seeing that the copy is in the newspaper office in plenty of time. I do this by having a definite hour to write the copy.

8. Whenever possible, I carry the nationally advertised goods that are advertised in my own home paper. I feature them. Sometimes they give me a smaller profit than my-night concerns, but I find that I sell faster and make more money in the end, besides pleasing more customers.

9. I always plan my window and counter displays to link up with my newspaper advertising. Each helps the other.

10. My salespeople back up my advertising. They often help me with suggestions for it, and see to it that they always read it.

INDIAN YOUTH ATTEMPTS OWN LIFE FOR GIRL

Francis Brant, 17, Shoots 1 Self With .22 Calibre Rifle

HAD DIFFERENCES

In Critical Condition and Not Likely to Recover

Unrequited love was probably the cause of Francis Brant, 17, Indian resident on the Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve, near Shannonville trying to take his own life by shooting about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, following a discussion of his life affairs with Ida Claus, 5th concession of Tyendinaga Township, at the home of Miss Claus' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mary Brant, the lady of his choice, who is understood to have had a close friendship some time in May of last year. Miss Claus was the first to attempt but on the second pat a bullet into his chest just above the heart. He was rushed to the Bellville General Hospital, where Drs. Robertson and McCreary attended, but little hope is held out for his recovery, as the wound caused an inward hemorrhage and he suffered considerably from loss of blood.

Crime on Scene

The police received a call shortly after four o'clock and Provincial Constable Kelly and Stringer rushed to the scene, while the police ambulance also went to bring back the wounded man. Arriving at Mrs. Brant's search was made for the weapon used in the shooting which was soon obtained by Constable Stringer, also the blank cartridge and loaded shell with missed fire by Constable Kelly, with Miss Claus accompanied the youth to the hospital in the ambulance and the police fearing, that death was soon to ensue, took a statement from the girl, who was not an actual eye-witness but who was with him shortly before the shooting took place.

Two reporters from the Ontario Intelligencer were at the hospital before the arrival of the ambulance and were given a statement as to the cause of the shooting and the events that lead up to the same. It is understood, that Miss Claus was keeping company with Brant during the early part of last summer but that relationships were broken off by the girl. On Tuesday, Miss Claus according to reports, came to visit her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Brant, who resides on the York Road, not far from the home of Francis Brant. On Wednesday afternoon, Francis made a trip to the Brant home to see Miss Claus and was admitted to the house. Miss Claus and Brant went into an unoccupied room to talk over their troubles and to try and again become friends as of yore. Brant it is understood, asked Miss Claus if she was going to stay at her grandmother's but was answered in the negative and after a further parley, Brant left the home.

Came Across Fields

A short time later Miss Claus was leaving the house, when she noticed the youth coming across the fields from Jimick Pullers and he was carrying a rifle. Brant came in the house preceded by the girl. At this time the party was in the kitchen and after asking the girl to again become his friend and being refused Brant is is alleged, placed a cartridge in the rifle and pointed it towards the girl. Miss Claus, startled with the boy grappled with him and the trigger was pulled but the cartridge luckily missed fire. Miss Claus called for help and Mrs. Barnhardt and Mrs. Brant came rushing from the upstairs. Miss Claus then fled to reason with Brant but he pulled her aside and she becoming alarmed could affect from the room up on the stairs. Brant put another cartridge in the rifle and again pointing the muzzle towards his heart pulled the trigger and this time Miss Claus was on the top landing of the stairs and stated to the police that she heard the shot and also heard the boy fall to the floor. Mrs. Barnhardt and Mrs. Brant were eye-witnesses of the shooting. Miss Claus further stated in her statement, that last summer Brant had made threats of doing away with himself.

Bullet Not Extracted

After the boy was examined by the doctors and given medical attention although no effort was made to extract the bullet due to his weakened condition, as the loss of blood, a reporter stood at the door of the ward, where he was lying, instantly recognized the youth as he gave evidence on behalf of the Crown at the trial that Frank Maracle was charged with manslaughter arising out the death of Gordon Green a Point Anne, about a year ago. When on a reporter asked Brant as each receiving an affirmative answer, the boy stated "You would do the same thing if you were in the same position as myself". He was half in tears and at intervals gave fleeting glances around the room and at the nurse, who was so patiently attending to his wants. Apparently the youth had an idea that the whole world was against him for in the next breath he said "what can a poor Indian boy of 17 do in this world"! Not wishing to disturb him, the reporter slowly and quietly left the sick room. Today his condition is given out as "fair" and he has only a slim chance of recovery.

Jap Artillery That Subdued Harbin

It was artillery such as that shown here which laid down themerciless bombardment of Harbin and routed the Chinese harrison and put Japanese invaders in possession of the city. These guns are modern in every respect and modelled after the famous French 75's. The Japs are extremely proficient in their use. Tsuda is General Araki, Japanese Minister of the Army, who after a conference with Admiral Osumi, Minister of the Navy, and Foreign Minister Yoshikawa, decided to send reinforcements of a full army division to Shanghai to augment the force already there.

Someone's On the Spot

There is a small hole pierced in the temple. In the Orient this is the Chinese are for the most part armed with fans or hopelessly obsolete weapons. These snipers, waiting for a potshot at an unwary Jap, belie the fans. They are armed with the latest and most dead y magazine pistols and if they were western clothes instead of their picturesque uniform, they might pass for a trio of United States gangsters putting a rival on the spot. The photo was made in a Shanghai street.

Outfit Dropped By Men From Tender of C. N. R. Train

BOTH ESCAPE

When number eighteen Canadian National Railway passenger train pulled out of the Belleville north station shortly before one o'clock Wednesday morning, Special Railway Constable W. R. Probert noticed two men riding on the tender. He heard the coal chutes in the east end of the railway yards, he worked his way toward the men on the tender. They, however, saw him approaching and did not wait to be interviewed; they jumped and ran, making a complete get away. They left behind them two suit cases containing the following articles: Pire cases black summer weight mans' suit, one pair of mens' dress trousers, one pair of grey trousers, one red flannel blazer jacket, two razor blade sharpeners, one flash light, two packs of playing cards, one 2a Brownie camerra, two straight razors, a first aid kit and a card board box containing a number of Canadian and American postage stamps.

Constable Probert after conveying the liquor and goods to the station office, called Ontario Provincial Constable Campbell of the Belleville District Office and together the officers made a thorough search of the railway yards and other places in the city, but the men were not found.

The liquor was seized by the Provincial police and the other articles were also taken in charge by them.

DIVIDENDS OF BRITISH RAILS

Declarations Keep Priority Stocks in Front of Securities

London, Feb. 11 (CP)—Dividends by the main British railway groups show the companies despite poor traffic conditions have endeavored to make such declarations as will keep their priority charge stocks among the good investment securities.

The London, Midland and Scottish Railway have declared a dividend of 1½ per cent. against £9,000,000 ordinary stock, compared with two per cent. previously. The company's receipts decreased by £3,841,000 but expenses were reduced by more than £3,000,000.

The Great Western Railway declares a total dividend for the year of three per cent., against five per cent. previously.

The Southern Railway pays nothing on its deferred capital and the distribution on the preferred stock if four per cent. compared with five previously.

Considering all the circumstances the stock exchange views these results with tolerable satisfaction.

A ROSE BUD COSTUME

By MARY ETHEL WHITE

Shirley Lee carefully folded the small rosebud costume into a suitbox and hid it on the top shelf of her closet. She didn't want Jane, her younger half-sister, to see it. Jane saw the tiny ruffled skirt, the basque made of rose-petals and the adorable pert little green cap and she'd want it. And, if Jane wanted it, she'd get it, for she wasn't all Shirley Lee's step-mother's fault that Jane was so spoiled. Everyone helped, even Shirley herself. It was because Jane had a way of making everything awfully disagreeable if she didn't get what she wanted, and awfully agreeably if she did.

Shirley Lee sighed. It was that way about boys, too. Her heart still felt tight when she remembered about Tom. She hadn't cared, before, when boys had come to see her and remained to admire Jane. But with Tom it was different. Tom noticed and it hurt. Then, after a while, he stopped coming to see her and started calling on Jane.

Shirley Lee pulled a blanket over the box and went downstairs. She'd go help Mother with supper. If they got through in time, maybe tonight there would be more time to dress for the dance.

"I'll get the carrots, Mother," she said.

Her mother agreed and Shirley Lee went on wondering about the dance. It would be the Christmas masks. She'd found a tiny rose mask just the shade of her costume. No one, except Tom would know who she was. Tom had come last night while she was dyeing a pair of her stockings green to match her cap, and, as usual, Jane was dressed and Shirley Lee had to go on the dance. It was awkward getting Tom in to see Jane. He could almost never think of anything to say. But her hands, emerald with dye, had made it easy.

"Going in the grocery business?" he had asked and tried to smile.

"You might call it that," she answered his smile. "I'm fixing the upholstery for a rose."

Tom's brows came together in that puzzled little frown which she loved.

"A rose?"

"I'm going as a rose to the dance to-morrow night."

"Oh, and it will be swell."

Shirley Lee's heart sang over that swell, but Jane had come in before she found out if he really meant it. Funny how a girl could look as much alike as she and Jane, and yet be so different. Jane's eyes were only a tiny bit bluer, her hair only a tiny bit lighter, her lips only a bit more curved and yet—well, the boys were always falling in love and forgot that Shirley Lee was around. Her self-confidence was shaken. He only came to see her because his girl was on the coast and he had to go to parties. Shirley Lee finished the carrots, and began setting the table.

"Ough—ookie, everybody!" Jane came down the hall two at a time. Shirley Lee coming out of the kitchen door, dropped the plate in her hand. For there stood Jane all pink and white, dressed in her costume. The tiny hat was cocked over one blue eye; the two dozen petals clung to her slender body with the help of a few safety pins, and forth with her hand. "Aren't I a love," she cooed.

Shirley Lee felt the quick sting of tears in her eyes and her voice trembled when she spoke.

"Jane, please—"

"Aw, Shirley," Jane begged. "Let me. I've just heard that Allen is in town and I want his help in it."

Fear clutched at Shirley Lee's heart but she shook her head. "Jane, it's important to me, too, Jane."

Jane turned on her heels, with a sharp impatient gesture. "Very well," she threatened, "if you won't trade costumes with me, I'll tell Tom how crazy you are about him."

Shirley Lee knew Jane had used that threat once or twice before and it always worked. Shirley Lee shuddered at the thought of Jane's contemptuous: "And she's in love with Tom all the time." There would be a quick flush under the eyes of Tom and one look he would pity her. She couldn't stand that. "I'll be glad to, Jane," she said dully, "you can have it."

Shirley Lee watched the pirate's pants and the white silk blouse Jane had selected. There'll be a dozen pirates, she thought, with shirts and white silk blouses, she mused bitterly. Jane hated to know if she were sick. She told him she wasn't but she didn't have much to say to him after that.

The dance floor was crowded with bright tinsel costumes, but even the gay balloons, the tons of confetti, the paper whistles couldn't do much towards cheering Shirley Lee up. She danced with men who were clowns and men who were Pierrots in green skirts and blackfaced comediennes, and hoped desperately that Tom would see Pierrot in green skirts and spoke.

"Let's get out of this, Jane," he whispered in her ear and Shirley Lee's heart sank. But it disappeared Tom's voice She knew that she should tell him she wasn't Jane, but instead, she nodded It would be sweet, being with him, even if it were all a mistake

Tom, his hand barely touching her arm, guided her to a seat in the lower end of the Club porch. He arranged the pillows, and sat beside her.

"Tell me, Jane," his voice was urgent, "have you told Shirley Price?"

Color flamed high in Shirley Lee's face and she was glad of the mask. She had no right to listen —no right to let him go on. She must get up and confess. To stop him, but the words were choked in her throat. She merely shook her head.

"I can't," he continued, "go on like this. It's wrong—on this technique business, Jane. It's silly trying to make her like me better than Tompkins by pretending indifference. It's silly, trying to make Shirley Lee jealous. There's got to be a showdown. If she likes this Tomkins better than she does me, well, I'll take my medicine like a man. But this—this method you're telling me to use is crazy."

Shirley Lee was afraid he'd hear the pounding of her heart; afraid to move for fear she'd break the spell.

"She's wearing a dress like a rose and I'm going back there to find her."

Shirley Lee came to life. She put a quick hand on his arm. "You don't have to hunt for her." She slipped off her mask.

Tom looked white and in consternation. "But I thought—" "Whatever you thought," she said, "was wrong. Whatever Jane told you was wrong. I've been playing a joke on both of us."

Then you're not in love with Tompkins?"

"Only with you, dear."

It didn't seem important to Shirley Lee then that Jane hadn't intended it as a joke.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

"Young people haven't changed much in spite of all the shouting," Barclay observed obliquely. "They're still afraid, aren't they, to accept a favor to do a greater favor? They're just as suspicious, just as conventional and every bit as proud. You, I'm sure, would never allow me to give you a lift. You wouldn't allow me, would you, to give you one dress from a store which has many of them? You'd rather hug your troubles to yourself, worry yourself sick, wouldn't you? You'd rather be selfish."

"I'm afraid I would," Ellen admitted.

Barclay's smile was careful. He made one more attempt.

"You know, of course, that you are depriving me of a great pleasure. Are you sure you have that right?"

Ellen felt confused. Was it possible that she was too stiff-necked as he had accused her of being, too conventional, too careful entirely? Then she decided so quickly that there was almost no pause before she answered, that even if she were it was too late to change.

"I'm sure I have that right," she said. Her tone was resolute but she softened it with a glance of shy sweetness.

The man considered a moment. His face cleared and when he smiled so many years dropped away from him that Ellen felt he must look almost as he had looked to his young wife. She had thought him handsome and distinguished before but separated from her by miles of spiritual distance, separated from her by many years and by great wealth. For the first time she saw him not as her employer but as a man.

"Well, if you won't you won't" he said decisively. "It may be that young girls should be suspicious of older men bearing gifts — I don't know. But I've thought of a compromise. Surely you can't refuse to borrow a dress."

"Borrow a dress!"

"Certainly. Don't look so astounded. Any resident sell the gowns that the models wear. You'll borrow one of them and return it when your engagement is over."

Taking her consent for granted, he turned at once to ring a bell. Ellen had neither the heart nor the wish to demur. Indeed, she felt her spirits rising. By so simple an act as signing a bell, Steven Barclay had settled the problem of where the Rosslyn rent was to come from. With the help of a borrowed dress it was coming from Dreamland.

A few minutes later a saleswoman arrived with a lovely cargo of evening dresses. Slowly Barclay had slipped away. Ellen was alone in the office. She could hear the apartment store owner's tact and his wisdom. Barclay's was fascinating a hobbed for gossip. The tiniest incident that involved Steven Barclay was always of absorbing interest to his employees. Fortunately the saleswoman who brought the gowns was placidly incurious.

The next 15 minutes were about the best Ellen had ever known. She had never worked an evening gown, evening gowns being one of the items invariably missing from Aunt Myra's bonus. She had not known it would be such fun to select a gown only because it made her beautiful.

She stood before a long mirror and held up before herself, one by one, gowns that she was convinced were the loveliest in the world. It was pure bliss to see that, although line and color seemed almost to change her appearance, not even the change her appearance, not even the trying burnt orange or the deep petunia could down the triumphant flush of her clear skin or deaden her bright hair.

When she came upon the gown of ivory lattice that it knew she had found her dress. It did not make her an ingenue. It did not make her a duchess. It did not make her mysterious. It only made her Ellen Rossiter, a girl of 20, clear-eyed and clear-skinned, a girl with slender curves and long limbs and beautiful but more than that, a girl who was gentle and secure in her own personality.

There were no ornaments, no frills on Ellen's dress. It was only white taffeta falling to the floor. But it had been fashioned by one of a great couturier who called his creation "Dream Lily."

Barclay returned after Ellen had seen the dress and had carried away. He glanced at the ivory taffeta over her arm. He hesitated and then said:

"I'm glad you selected that one." As Ellen looked into his eyes she saw with a little shock, half of fear and half of strange pride, that life was suddenly becoming exciting.

CHAPTER IV

When Ellen had left Steven Barclay's office to drive her to Dreamland she sat with her hands in her unconscious he had shown in extending the invitation. Their friendship had made such strides that they had become sparring from the vague fears which she had hidden not in his office, fears that his hands would be linked with hers in a pooling fellow-workers.

But Barclay himself had no such fears. He moved in a different world than his employees. He would have been amazed had he known any of the complicated feelings of many of them, of their bitter narrowness of their jealousy and envy of those more fortunate. He was too naturally modest to imagine that his comings and goings, however impersonal, were of absorbing interest to scores of men and women who had never met him. Nor did it occur to him that he might be subjecting a girl to the breath of scandal.

But as Ellen sank back into the soft depths of dove-gray cushions and turned her rose face to him she felt a pang as of anticipated pain. And he believed then that he had been unwise.

He had not known until then why he had been so uneasy and so restless after Ellen had left his office that afternoon. He had not known why the routine business of the store had become so suddenly unimportant or why the hours had dragged so endlessly. But he knew now as Ellen shyly smiled at him that her first that casual light resemblance that he thought had left him years ago.

And that was impossible. She was 37. Ellen was young enough to be his daughter. Almost roughly he leaned forward and gave the driver directions for reaching Dreamland. When he offered Ellen a cigaret and pulled out the lighter for her no one would have guessed that he imagined he had, in the brief space of seconds, put away from him a small vague dream.

"I don't smoke," Ellen told him. His brows went up quizzically.

"I thought all young girls smoked cigarets."

"Not all of them. I'm not well off enough to smoke."

At his look of surprise she explained. "You see the people we live among and, for that matter, my family, too, are so poor that we must be respectable. On any debatable point—like smoking for women — we're all ultra-conservative. Not," she added still in that light strain, "that I like it myself nights longing to smoke, I don't like it really. If I did I'd smoke."

"I'm sure you would. But, I'm rather glad you don't. I can't get under."

He broke off abruptly and thought that there was no use appearing in her eyes as an old fogy even if he were old enough to be her father. With Ellen's permission they drove through Central Park before going to the Dahchall. Central Park in the languid twilight was relaxed and quiet after the fierce heat of the day. On the bridle paths there were a few horseback riders, their habits crumpled, their horses at an apathetic trot. But neither the horses nor the riders appeared to be enjoying themselves.

The benches were crowded with workers who had stopped on their hurried way home to draw what solace they could from the dusty green of the park. The air was thrill with the confusion of children shouts. Scores of children ran up and down the footpaths and scattered about the lake, sending out small boats on the placid surface.

Darkness drew in and lights began to pierce windows of the giant apartment houses overlooking the park. "Night comes softly" thought Ellen. One by one the stars were kindled. The last toy boat capsized on the lake. The last cross and spoiled child was dragged away to supper. The park grew quiet.

The limousine swished to a stop at the Casino where early diners, men and women in evening clothes, leaned across softly lighted tables talking and laughing. Ellen and her escort went inside for tea drinks. Neither of them was hungry.

Ellen looked around with wide-eyed pleasure at the other diners, successful men and lovely, well-dressed women. As her eyes returned to the handsome man opposite her she began to feel a singing in her heart.

What fun to be so rich! What fun to be driven in a limousine wherever you wanted to go! What fun to stop at a smart restaurant because you were thirsty, to be served by an impressed headwaiter, to have every wish anticipated, care and worries drifted away from her. The hurried, clattery morning meal, the glass of milk cans and jangling alarm clock would never, never, never trouble her more.

She began, did Ellen, to weave the most wild dreams, to spin out those dreams that need no spinning. Wherever you looked at Steven Barclay did not guess it his eyes followed your figure moved through those gardens.

They drove almost quietly to Dreamland, absorbed in their separate thoughts. They stopped off at the Casino and drank a drink to top the box which held the precious dress and stretched out her hand to Barclay.

"I can't tell you," she said breathlessly, "how much I appreciate what you've done for me."

Above them through the open windows came a clashing of brasses and a tinging of strings. The orchestra was tuning up, getting ready to play.

"I'm glad I could do it," Barclay replied.

She meant to stop there. But he heard himself saying what he had not intended to say.

"I would like to be a great deal more for you."

Ellen's heart throbbed queerly but her voice was steady as she told him that they had done a great deal too much already. She was selfconscious and rare thing for her, as she climbed the stairs, self-conscious, and, now that she was away from Barclay and what he stood for a little dissatisfied with herself. She had been rude to him and Steven Barclay had lent her a dress most anything except that he was kind and generous and manly.

MOTORISTS HELD UP

Fire Losses in Western Ontario Through Thunderstorm

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 12 (By The Canadian Press)—Declining temperatures and fine weather throughout the province today allayed the flood menace in Ontario. Yesterday's heavy rains and thunderstorms taxed rivers and creeks, and dam-breaks were reported from several Ontario towns.

At Barrie the swollen streams emptied themselves into Kempenfeldt Bay and citizens whose cellars were flooded last night following collapse of Dyment's dam felt the danger over.

Although a street near the dam was still flooded the water level was declining and further damage was not feared.

Damage at Hendreds

Three gales were opened at Painkwick Dam near Barrie to bring the flood-waters under control. Millers stated today the situation was as serious as when the dam gave way in 1926, causing one fatality.

At Angus, the Nottawasaga River exceeded its its normal level. Bright sun and clear sky gave the district a spring-time touch.

Damage at Hendreds

Damage amounting to several hundred dollars was done at near Chilcombury early this morning when a dam on the Otter River broke. At first no further damage occurred when a section of the bank 200 feet long and 60 feet wide was washed out. A half-mile detour on the Provincial Highway was necessitated.

Grand River at Galt overflowed its banks for the fourth time this year, flooding cellars and a section of a local hotel. Little damage was done however, as residents along the river-front were prepared.

Thunderstorm Damage

Yesterday's unseasonal thunderstorm covered a wide area in Western Ontario. Lightning struck the barn of Richard Johnston, Morris Township, near Stratford. The barn caught fire and burned to the ground. Fire broke out at the Hydro substation at Guelph but was quickly extinguished. The telephone system there suffered considerable damage.

FRANCE, ITALY REOPEN ISSUE

Discuss Differences With View to Naval Reductions

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Direct negotiations between France and Italy to settle their naval disarmament differences were reopened today between their delegations at the World Conference here, it was revealed today.

It was authoritatively stated that the reopening of direct conversations would lead to an extension of the London Naval Treaty and provide a basis for further naval disarmament by all powers.

The main point to be settled, it was found, was replacement of Italy's battleship Conte di Cavour, this point that wrecked the 1930 treaty.

The French, who have a proportionately large number of ships under construction, maintained their right to replace them, but the Italians objected as they was proportionately more modern.

INTERNATIONAL RING EXPOSED

New Orleans Said to Be Seat of Smuggling Ring

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 12.—One secret grand jury in the district, charging conspiracy and violation of the United States Federal Prohibition Act, were handed down today by a Federal Grand Jury investigation the operations of what authorities described as a far-flung international rum ring.

It is claimed there is evidence that Al Capone, Chicago, gang chief now facing a Federal prison term, was the financial head of the smugglers and runners that purchased liquor in Canada and shipped it to Belize, British Honduras, where it was transferred to the Louisiana-Mississippi Gulf coast and trucked to the interior cities. King Conspiracy

The ring was uncovered in a series of raids last autumn when seven men were arrested and an outlaw radio station seized on the out-skirts of New Orleans.

Evidence was given from New York Chicago, Washington State, Canada Louisiana, and Mississippi were sifted by the Federal authorities and other indictments were returned against persons including Americans Vancouver, B.C.

Those named under the ring had operated many months before it was exposed and that it owned its own fleet of ships, it was said.

When seized, the agents claim, the organization had direct communication with a ship in the gulf of Mexico.

Cargoes, they claim were landed by small craft in the marshes on the coast and loaded into armed trucks for distribution in the United States.

SPAIN URGES ABOLITION OF WAR ENTIRELY

Little Interest at Arms Conference at Geneva Today

DENMARK'S PLEA

Canada's Presentation is Laid Over Until Saturday

By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Geneva, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press Cable)—The public galleries were less well attended today when Luiz Escolano, Minister of Foreign Affairs for Spain, took the tribune at the world disarmament conference.

And between the declarations of this youthful delegate of the youngest of Republics, and the Old Spain of Great Armadas, lay centuries of romance.

International Order

For Escolano, so-called humanitarian of war was not enough: war itself must be abolished. "To Escolano, international Anarchy of war international order must be created, he insisted.

Denmark and Czechoslovakia also presented their proposals, favoring heavy reduction of armaments.

Sir George Perley, chief Canadian delegate, was to have presented the Canadian case at the close of today's session but so much time was taken for the necessary translations that it was announced this morning that the Canadian proposals were postponed until Saturday.

Disarmed Nowadays

"Republican Spain considers international peace as an ideal toward which we must strive, but as an imperious necessity which must be realized," Escolano declared. "This believes the hour of purely Nationalistic organization is past. Henceforth the States will only be able to attain their ends by coordination in the vaster and greater organism of the world".

Spanish Aims

More concretely, Spain made the following proposals:

(1) Abolition of all military aggressive arms, the conference to decide on technical criterion on the choice of weapons.

(2) National and International control by means of licenses and publicity, of State and private manufacture of arms and munitions.

(3) Warships of greater than 10,000 tons displacement, forbidden to be forbidden. No ships to be armed with guns of more than 16 inch metres (eight inches, present limit of caliber.

(4) No merchant vessels to be reborned with the view to installation of guns.

(5) Absolute prohibition of military aircraft, which are to be placed under international control.

Czechoslovakian Plan

The Czechoslovakian delegate, Mr. Benes said, the essential condition for success in the disarmament among ourselves and in International Institutions. Czechoslovakia, he added, will agree to supervision of armaments, munitions and manufacture and trade in arms and to more comprehensive scale than is provided for in the draft convention. His government, he said, would pledge reduction in the budget of army service, in agreement with other powers, and the Czech delegation would consider the possibility of reducing the army budgetary expenses.

P. Munch, Danish Foreign Minister, proposed the abolition of aircraft bombardment, the abolition of chemical warfare and the gradual disarmament and budgetary limitation. He advocated total prohibition of chemical warfare and opposed the French plan for an armed International police force under the League of Nations.

POPE PIUS XI ATTENDS MASS

Celebrates 10th Anniversary of Coronation Amid People

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP) —Pope Pius celebrated his tenth anniversary of his Coronation this morning with an imposing mass in the Sistine Chapel, with the cardinals of the curia and tens of thousands of guests.

The pontiff was carried in solemn procession from his private apartments to the Basilica on a portable throne borne on the shoulders of 12 sedia gestatoria, bedecked in red. As he entered the Cathedral he was greeted with thunderous applause by Swiss guards. Thousands cheered the white papal robed pontiff in Latin, "Ad Multos Annos!" meaning "May you live many years longer."

Solemn excitement was created while the Pope was proceeding up the aisle of the church when an elderly man advanced into the aisle as the pope neared the great altar and tossed an envelope toward him, shouting: "I ask a grace".

The guards surrounded the portable throne immediately surrounded the man and took him away.

Plus wore a white cassock, and in vivid contrast to it a red mantle, embroidered in gold and studded with jewels. On his head was the jewelled tiara, or triple crown. He raised his right hand occasionally to bless worshippers kneeling as they were kept back by wooden barriers filled with guards.

The pope was preceded in procession by a detachment of the Swiss guards, another of the Noble guards then prelates of the Vatican and finally a score of cardinals in purple.

As the pontiff was carried up the central aisle the choir chanted "Tu Es Petrus" and the cardinals in their crimson attendants bore him to the large throne to the left of the altar. He left the portable throne and ascended the dais.

"TOO MUCHEE LIKEE HELLEE" FOR CHINESE

Sergeant Describes in Pidgin English Scenes at Woosung

VILLAGE SHAKEN

Fortress in Much Better State Than Village Nearby

By The Associated Press

Shanghai, China, Feb. 12 (AP)—Battered Woosung, target of heavy Japanese bombardments for a week, is "too muchee likee hellee," a Chinese sergeant said today, describing the crumbled mass of ruin there in which the Chinese have been maintaining a dogged defense. .

It is a veritable no man's land by day but it becomes a great Chinese beehive under cover of darkness when the eye of the Japanese airmen, alert by day to drop his devastating bombs can see it no longer. In the darkness the Chinese hustle about, improving their defenses for the next day's battle.

In Each Area

The sergeant with his descriptive pidgin English was spending the day in the back areas, like thousands of others of the 19th Chinese Army, waiting for the night's activities. He was encountered during the partial truce declared today for the evacuation of the few remaining foreigners from the university, near Woosung.

There is scarcely a hut or any other brick or frame building in the village which has not been blasted by aerial bombs or Japanese navy guns or peppered by machine guns and rifle fire from the sea. Woosung is a village chiefly of mud huts and other dwellings made of tin and nondescript materials, making it possible to reduce the heavy bombardment to which it has been subjected. Its fortifications, generally from 8,000 to 12,000, is made up chiefly of Chinese fishermen, river boatsmen and coolies.

Fortress Better Off

The fortress has fared much better than the nearby village. It has been covered directly by the heavy guns from the river but the main fire from battleships today were very much out of joint. Several of the Japanese warships were shoved on and crumpled, and the guns sunken and lopsided, their muzzles gaping upward. Both of these were flopped sideways and powerless by the fire from the fortress on the river.

The heavy bombardments, however, apparently have not yet broken the Chinese morale.

Mr. Edward Ahern, railway employee of the Canadian National Railways in Smith's Falls, lies seriously injured in the hospital of that town today as the result of injuries received in the yards there at an early hour this morning, the cause of which is yet unknown. Details of the accident which have been received so far are scanty and until tomorrow, according to Mr. Doyle, "to direct the expenditure of any sum set apart in the estimates for such purposes." Both of these, however, are routine committees.

Debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne probably will be resumed Tuesday when Hon. Harry Nixon, Progressive leader; Hon. W. E. N. Sinclair, Hon. Peter Heenan and Hon. George S. Henry will address the house.

GALLICOWMEN GET VOTE MAY SEEK OFFICE

Overwhelming Vote Today Grants Women Franchise

DISCUSSED

Only One Vote Registered Against Women's Enfranchisement

Paris, Feb. 12 (AP) — The Chamber of Deputies today voted overwhelmingly to give suffrage to women but its action must be also approved by the Senate, whose attitude also was believed by many to be a doubtful quantity.

The suffrage measure was adopted as an amendment to the electoral reform bill which was passed by vote of 311 to 6.

Deputy De Monzi's suffrage amendment, which would permit women to run for seats in the Chamber and to vote for Chamber candidates, was adopted by a vote of 319 to 1.

Reform Bill

The electoral reform bill, which must also be approved by the Senate before final adoption, provides discontinuance of second elections where no majority was obtained in the first. Under it members of the Chamber will be elected on one balloting and the candidate obtaining the largest number of votes will be declared elected.

In case of a tie the oldest candidate will get the seat.

Under the present system, if no candidate gets a clear majority, a second ballot is necessary.

Thus the Chamber ended almost a week of filibustering by the Left led by Edouard Herriot, the Socialist. The Radicals had kept the Chamber in session almost continuously for 34 hours before today's action began and were led out of the legislative hall in a body by Herriot, in final gesture of protest and disgust.

Called Violation

In a sensational speech, Herriot had declared that the measure was in violation of the principles of the Republic.

Another section of the measure provides for compulsory voting of all who hold the franchise.

HEAVY WINDS MUCH COLDER

Dead Branches Crash and Signs Whirl Wildly On Front St.

Creaking signs swung wildly and banged perilously to the appreciation of numerous shoppers, and of owner and refuse whirled about the streets of the downtown section, and dead branches of trees crashed to sidewalks in many districts as a wind of almost gale-like proportions swept over the city early this morning and held unabated all day.

Aided by the warm sun and a mounting temperature the ice in the bay began to rapidly disintegrating under the onslaught of the wind and large patches of open water in the harbor are rapidly spreading. With the gradual melt of the ice to the bay still holds, although badly honeycombed in places, it is expected that if the warm weather continues the bay will soon be clear.

Local predictions favor an early Spring, with the return of warm weather and very little ice, if any, for the remainder of the season. Where the necessary supply for the coming season will come from is still uncertain. In other cities however, it has been necessary for the dealers to go further north to get ice and then haul it in by truck and. Should the present cold spell, however, that the same warm weather and lack of ice prevail in the sections north of this city.

THE PLAY

Collegiate Society Puts on Wilde's "Importance of Being Earnest"

Oscar Wilde's "Importance of Being Earnest" was produced last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium at the annual dramatic offering of the Belleville Collegiate Literary Society and the gay comedy was in keeping with the high standard of production that has always been associated with plays given by the Society. The play was under the direction of Miss F. P. Merry and with the admirable cast selected the comedy was an assured success.

The attendance last night was not large, due to the fact perhaps that the play will be repeated this evening when the students will be better able to attend. The sparkling wit and choice epigrams of the dramatist are as captivating today as when they shocked the conventional theatre-goers of the nineties. Some of the lines, last evening, however, were delivered too quickly for the audience to appreciate to the result that clever quips passed unnoticed.

The players, in spite of the fact that the play was presented in comedy and for that reason considered easy of production, had difficult roles to perform in maintaining the atmosphere of the play and in comedy with all due seriousness of the period. They could not have been better cast for their parts, for the convincing manner in which they performed their roles showed unusual talent.

Perhaps the most outstanding of performances were those given by Miss Sylvia Vine as Gwendolyn and Bell as Algernon. Both had an easy, natural manner so necessary for the successful delivery of their parts. Miss Teit was charming as the romantic Cecily Cardew, who could match wits with overwhelming success with the haughty city belle. As Algernon Moncrieff, Bobe Bell was most amusing.

Ross Wrese made an admirable "John" Worthing, and although this was the first time he had taken part in a play he carried the role with skill. Miss Helen Purdy was Lady Gwendolyn and made the most of the small opportunity. Miss Frances Evans gave an excellent characterization of Lady Bracknell, whose airy remarks and shrewd comments provided most of the comedy of the play.

Miss Eleanor Bone acted splendidly the part of Miss Prism, Cicely's governess and Jack Carman as Rev. Canon Chasuble, was one of the highlights of the final scenes. Miss Jane Wallace, as Mrs. Fred Sprague, as Algernon's servant and Robert Seymour as the butler, completed the cast.

As for the story of the play and its many amusing complications, it would be well to keep them a mystery for the sake of those who are planning to see the play this evening. The role of Cicely will be taken tonight by Miss Audrey Lemoine. It is hoped that the audience will be a large one. The comedy will more than please the critical. Its production is finished and artistic and reflects great credit on the directress and players. The Collegiate orchestra provided music between acts. It is interesting to note that the scenery in the second and third acts was designed under the direction of Mr. Ferguson of the Vocational department, the garden being most realistic.

PROBABLE ICE FAMINE CAUSED BY WEATHER

None Has Been Cut So Far Although Nine Inches in Bay

CUTTING LATE

Consumption of City For Year is Estimated at 10,000 Tons

An ice famine is what the local natural ice dealers of this community are facing. If the present weather conditions do not very soon change, the city of Belleville's natural ice supply will be completely void.

The local natural ice dealers are at a loss to know exactly what to do under the present conditions. At present there is about nine inches of ice in the bay, but this is not nearly at the maximum of ice in the Bay of Quinte. Some of the local ice dealers had their winter's supply of ice stored away at this time last year and in my 34 years' experience in the ice business have never been caught as much as I am today," said one local iceman last night.

Although one dealer cut a little ice for refrigerator car purposes early this week but nothing has been attempted in that line for the past couple of days. It is the dealer's estimate that the city of Belleville uses about 10,000 tons of natural ice per annum. As Easter is quite late this year, the local ice dealers are at a complete loss to know whether to take a chance on the present conditions or wait for the ice, which is about 9 or 10 inches thick, or wait and get a little more, in the hope that it will turn colder.

March 15th Last

One ice dealer stated that he had been known to cut ice as late as March 20th but that was a very late date, when he did not cut in quantities until February 15th. The ice in the bay, although it is quite thick, is one of the finest quality ice seen in recent years, as stated one of the local ice dealers. The chances are of the opinion the colder weather is on its way and are awaiting the opportunity when their particular comes. They expect, that they will be able to cut and store the ice about the first two weeks in March. Ten days or two weeks of cutting and storing ice would be sufficient to supply the needs of the local ice dealers, if they did obtain the weather to actually make the ice required. The situation is quite critical at the present moment and the icemen are at a loss to know exactly what to do. Street rumors have it that the Consumers' Pennsylvania Ice dealers are going ahead and filling their ice houses with the present thin ice.

10 Tons Per Day

It is estimated that the city of Belleville's daily consumption of ice, in the ordinary summer season, is in the neighbourhood of 18 tons of natural ice per day. Just what will be done with the local ice famine for the coming season is not quite known as yet. When asked as to the advisability of putting in an artificial ice plant one local ice dealer was of the opinion, that it would not be practical as such conditions, which are unusual, might never happen again with the result, that it would not pay a man to install a plant at the cost of $30,000.00 for one season.

The local ice dealers put away from 2,000 to 3,000 tons of ice each according to their business necessities. Although there is no sign of cold weather right at the present time the local natural ice dealers are of the opinion, that their wants and needs will be looked after before spring arrives as one dealer stated, "We have always had ice in the past and I am of the opinion that we will have plenty of ice before we have much warm weather".

The question still hovers in one's mind as to what the city of Belleville would do in the case of a natural ice famine. Although it is not anticipated that there is still the chance, that anything will happen in the time. Although one dealer is cutting ice for refrigerator purposes, this ice must pass the inspection of railroad officials before it can be sold to them.

PARIS, Feb. 12—(AP)—The condition of General Maxime Weygand, who underwent an operation for appendicitis Wednesday, was reported satisfactory today. A communique said the general "showed marked improvement this morning."

Another Prophecy

"If we don't get some ice in the bay before the 20th of the month, then I'm willing to bet that there won't be any ice at all," declared the local weather prophet this morning when visited in his sanctorum. "Furthermore," he added, "there won't be any snow to speak of, and we're quite liable to have an early Spring. You can notice the sun swinging higher all the time, and then it gets around to a certain point in the sky, then all the cold will go, blow, blow, and stop the warm weather that will come with it."

"When I told the people some time ago that there wouldn't be nine days of zero weather all winter they had a good time laughing about it alright, and if I had been really a betting man I could have made a lot of money, but now with the winter about over I don't hear them yelling so much about what they thought was a foolish prophecy. Now they seem to think there is nothing to it after all. Wait and see if we get any ice after the 20th—and see if I'm right again."

COUNCIL ADVANCE $6,000 FOR RELIEF

Money Will Be Returned When Gov't Sends Appropriation

At the meeting of the city council last night on the recommendation that the Central Relief Committee be allowed to draw on the Bank of Montreal for funds not to exceed $4,000, until the returns from the government grant are received, was passed. This will allow the city to carry on the necessary relief work while waiting for the returns of funds from the government which has not yet been received.

Other recommendations which were adopted were:

That Mr. G. Walters' tender for 12 tons at $24.00 for No. 1 and $23.00 for 2 at $22.50 for Chief, No. 2, be accepted, on condition that all coal is cut and made in Belleville and Belleville labor.

It was recommended that the free open air rinks be closed for the season of 1932 because owing to the mild weather prevailing. These recommendations will be submitted to the regular meeting of council next Monday evening for final passage.

Sluggish Fog Disrupts Traffic

New York, Feb. 12.—A heavy fog which lifted sluggishly, disrupted ferryboat schedules, delayed inbound transport planes and interfered with coastwise vessels today. The Fall River Line boats, the Priscilla, Plymouth, Richard Peck and Chaplin, anchored off Whitestone Queens, waiting for the fog to lift before proceeding to their Manhattan piers. The Washington Lee, of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, scheduled to sail for Boston last night, remained at its pier.

OIL PAINTINGS NOW ON DISPLAY

Works By Miss Aileen Cherry, Painter of Ability

An interesting display of oil paintings, in which a variety of local subjects are strikingly portrayed, may be viewed during the window of Ostrom's Drug Store, and which are creating a great deal of comment among local art critics and connoisseurs of the city. Several of the paintings on display are scenes have been depicted by the brush of Miss Aileen Cherry, who has been rapidly gaining great recognition throughout the country. Besides these artistic effects Miss Cherry has also done some remarkable portraitures of prominent local men and women, who have eagerly accepted her work and for which a ready sale has always been found.

A great number of these paintings have been sold to various people throughout the country, who have taken a fancy to the young artist's work, and in Toronto alone Miss Cherry's lady has purchased dozens of the paintings. A great demand is forecast for the young lady and expectations that several of the well known works will be hung in the Toronto Art Gallery in the near future.

Church Record is Hundred Years Old

Kingston, Feb. 12.—While delving into the historic records of the Parish of Railton this week, Rev. Father Quinn brought to light the fact that on Feb. 8, 1832, just 100 years ago, the grant of the land on which stands St. Patrick's Church and the Presbytery was made by Lawrence Rail, from whom comes the modern name of the parish. The deed transferred the ownership to the "Catholic Church of Loughborough," and the trustees to whom it was entrusted for church purposes were his Lordship Bishop MacDonnell, Vicar-General McDonald and Walter Hanon.

CLEANLINESS
is the Key to Beauty

NIGHT and morning—and during the day, when you wish to freshen your face—you should follow this little program of cleansing:

With a towel or hand, secure the hair firmly away from the face so that hairline and ears are completely exposed. Squeeze a piece of absorbent cotton out of cold water. Moisten with Skin Tonic and dip in Cleansing Cream. Cleanse from the chin upward paying special attention to either side of the nose and around the mouth and chin; work gently around the eyes. Do not overlook the neck. Remove Cleansing Cream with Cleansing Tissues carefully so as not to stretch the skin.

Squeeze a fresh pad of cotton out of cold water, saturate with Skin Tonic and commence patting on the neck. Pat from the center around to the back on either side. Then, from the chin upward to the forehead. Continue for five minutes, giving over the same movements. Dry with Cleansing Tissues.

ICE BLAMED FOR ACCIDENT

Trucks in Collision Near Camnfton Road

Thursday morning about eleven o'clock Mr. Harold Merrill was travelling south in his truck on Camnfton Road and at the intersection of Camnfton Road and Station Street, his car came into collision with a truck belonging to the Belleville public works department, which was being driven north on Station street by Samuel B. Jones.

The left front spring was broken and the left front fender was damaged on the public works car and the rear right fender on the Merrill car was slightly damaged.

Sergeant Arthur Booth of the City Police Department investigated the accident. It is understood that Mr. Barrett states that he endeavored to stop his car, but the icy condition of the pavement prevented him in doing so.

THUNDERSTORM SWEEPS STATE

Services Interrupted By Heavy Downpour of Rain

Buffalo N. Y. Feb. 11.—A severe thunderstorm swept over Western New York state today and left behind it flooded streets and fields and unusually high temperatures.

In Buffalo the temperature was 56 and was expected to go even higher. The storm reached its full force about 1 p.m. when over an inch of rain fell between midnight and 4 a.m.

Air service between Niagara Falls Buffalo and Lockport was delayed, while in Buffalo factory whistles were retarded.

Hamilton also felt the force of the storm, although not so persistently. A barn six miles west of the city was struck by lightning and damage from the resultant fire was estimated at $8,000.

BRISK DEBATE ON WATERWAYS

Quebec Government Will Consult Legislature on Hydro Contracts

Quebec, Que., Feb. 11.—Two developments occurred yesterday as the St. Lawrence Waterways convention was reopened in a brief, brisk debate in the Quebec legislature.

1. The government accepted a request that it grant no Hydro power contract linked with the St. Lawrence waterway without the consent of the legislature.

2. The House "regretted" that a member of the opposition insisted upon production of a letter from the Prime Minister of Canada to the Premier of the province, which the Prime Minister had desired to be kept confidential.

Brain Operation Will Not Cure Moore Baby

New York, Feb. 11—Baby Diana Moore, the child whose mother has demanded that surgeons risk a delicate brain operation rather than permit her to grow up a mental defective, cannot be cured by surgery, it has been definitely decided.

The baby has been under observation at the Neurological Institute for several days and surgeons announced their final decision yesterday.

"The child" said their report, "is microcephalic and has a congenitally undeveloped brain and nervous system. She cannot be benefitted by any operation."

It was said at the Institute that Diana's head is two and one-half inches smaller in circumference than the head of a normal child.

The 13-month-old baby's mother, Mrs. Lillian Moore, had persisted in her determination to have Diana's brain operated upon even when told that the chance of surviving such an operation is remote.

NO DAMAGE TO SERVICES HERE

No serious damage was reported by the Hydro, telegraph or telephone companies due to the recent rains and heavy freshets. Although the telegraph wires were quite heavy both last night and today no wires were reported down in this section of the province, and three companies had their patrolmen inspect their lines very carefully this morning and all reports came into the local offices that the lines were standing up under the strain, in a very fine and capable manner.

Mrs. Edgar Wallace Lands at Cherbourg

Cherbourg, France, Feb. 11. (AP).—Mrs. Edgar Wallace, wife of the noted British author of mystery tales, left the liner Majestic in the English Channel last night on return to London after she learned of her husband's death in California.

She landed here in a stern-to-speed tender which was transferred in making the transit with the steamer Majestic on which she was sailing for the United States. A raging gale was blowing.

TROUBLE SEEN FOR WITNESS

Mrs. Des Antels, Defense, Contends Did Not Give Same Evidence

Detroit, Mich. Feb. 11— Trouble loomed today for Mrs. Genevieve Des Antels star state witness in the Hamtramck vice conspiracy trial, because, the defense contends, her testimony varied from that given seven years ago at a divorce hearing.

In 1925, attorney for four Hamtramck city officials and an alleged vice resort operator claim she testified before Circuit Judge Clyde I. Webster that she went from Detroit to Winnipeg, Man., to marry John H. Dyler, from whom she was granted a divorce.

Testifying for the state in the present trial, she said she married Dyler more than four months before she came to the United States for the first time in 1922.

Judge Webster said he would investigate the possibility of instituting perjury proceedings if the records bear out the defense contention.

SHIP SALMON AFTER SEPT. 15

Amendment Made to Fishery Regulations of British Columbia

Ottawa, Ont. Feb. 11 (CP)—Under an amendment made to the British Columbia fishery regulations by an order-in-Council approved this week, the export of fresh sockeye salmon from the province will be permissible after September 15th of each year. Heretofore, it has not been permissible to export sockeye at any time except in a frozen, canned, salted, smoked or cured condition.

NEW MINES ACT TO REPLACE OLD

Based on Recommendations Contained in Report

Estevan, Sask. Feb. 11 (CP)—A new Mines Act for Saskatchewan replacing legislation which has proved inadequate to cope with the rapid progress of the province's coal industry will be based upon recommendations contained in the Royal Commission report of his Honor Judge Wylie, made public today.

Acting upon both Federal and Provincial orders-in-Council under which he was appointed, Judge Wylie conducted an investigation of the labor dispute in the coal fields last fall, which resulted in a 30-day strike affecting all deep-seam mines and was climaxed by a street fight with police in which three miners were fatally wounded and a score of people were injured.

The most practical solution of the problems facing the lignite industry at the present time, the report of potential market, the commission report finds. A provincial government survey in February of 1930 estimated that on the basis of the price of the coal at that time and after making allowance of best inches smaller in circumference than the head of a normal child.

The 13-month-old baby's mother, Mrs. Lillian Moore, had persisted in her determination to have Diana's brain operated upon even when told that the chance of surviving such an operation is remote.

Arctic Airplane Flying Low Acts as Scout for Mounties

Veteran Northland Pilot "Eyes" Posse Trailing Killer

AKLAVIK, N.W.T., Feb. 11—(CP) The Arctic's famous fugitive trapper, Two-gunned Albert Johnson, breaked through the heavy-snowed region of the Rat River hills last night as pursuing police of the Royal Canadian Mounted drove on relentlessly to capture him for murder.

Ranks of the posse following John son's footprints in the snow were augmented today when Capt. W. R. (Wop) May, veteran northland pilot returned to the chase with several extra men as well as a supply of provisions. Yesterday May brought word here of the mad trapper's escape from his fortified parapet on the Rat River.

Johnson footed it out into the Arctic night while a body of Mounted Police patrolled the district. They had been assigned to watch the trapper until reinforcements arrived from Aklavik.

May returned to the sector where Johnson is loose, about 100 miles south of here, this morning and expected to fly over the outlaw's trail in the hope of sighting the hermit, sought for the killing of Constable E. Millen and the wounding of Corporal A. W. King. When May located the fleeing trapper he will signal the posse.

Johnson's warfare with police is nearing its end, police officials here believe. Since he has been away from his dynamite- shattered cabin for more than two weeks he cannot have much food left and the search has been intensified, they point out to such an extent that the trapper is almost certain to be surrounded by the posse within a few hours.

A. M. SCOTT IS INJURED

His Car Crashes Headlong Into Street Car

Toronto, Feb. 11 (CP)—Arthur M. Scott, head of the group insurance department of the Canada Life Assurance Company, sustained serious head injuries when his automobile crashed head on into a street car early today. At hospital it was said there was little chance for Scott's recovery.

Aged forty, Mr. Scott had been connected with the assurance company for a number of years.

The automobile was demolished and the front of the street car was badly damaged. Forty passengers who were aboard the street car were hurried from their seats by the impact. The motorman escaped cuts from flying glass when he left the front compartment after jamming on the brakes.

Mr. Scott sustained a fractured skull, fractured left leg and internal injuries.

Police Recover Stolen Merchandise

Hamilton, Feb. 11 (CP).—Merchandise valued at several hundred dollars, alleged to have been stolen from Hamilton stores over a lengthy period, was recovered by police last night in Brantford. The goods were found following arrest here yesterday of Elmo and Mrs. Torack, of Brantford, on charges of shoplifting and theft. Police say goods allegedly taken from a local store were in their possession when they were taken into custody.

CAR RUNS INTO FARM SLEIGH

Driver Reeve of Rawdon Does Not See Parked Sleigh

Wednesday night about eleven o'clock, Constable Stringer of the Belleville District Office of the Ontario Provincial Police was called to the eighth concession of Rawdon, near Harold's post office, to investigate a collision which had occurred a short time prior between a car being driven by Mr. Ernest Brown, Reeve of Rawdon township and a farm sleigh owned by Brady which was unattended and parked on the side of the road on a hill.

In coming over the hill, owing to poor visibility caused by sleet on the wind shield, it is said that Mr. Brown did not see the sleigh, which was loaded with wood and other articles.

In the collision a pole pierced the radiator of his car, the front bumper was bent and the fender damaged; the car was also somewhat entangled with the load.

Upon investigations made by Constable Stringer it was learned that the sleigh was the property of Sherman Brady, who had removed recently to a farm close to the scene of the accident. Constable Stringer interviewed Brady and learned from him that he was returning from Madoc township with the load and that on the hill the harness on his team broke and he was forced to leave the load. He agreed to remove the sleigh as soon as possible and in the meantime a light was placed on it. Mr. Brown was taken to his home by Constable Stringer in the police car.

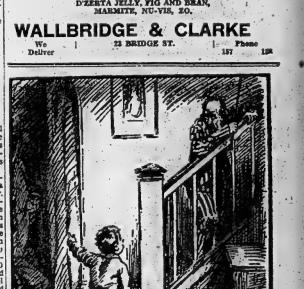
First Settler in Colborne Joseph Keeler Came in 1789

History of Early Life of Village Incorporated in 1859



PIONEER NAMES

The village of Colborne was incorporated in 1859. Joseph Keeler, the "first settler," came from Vermont in 1789. He afterwards in 1793 brought in 40 settlers with him, amongst them Greeley, the surveyor built a saw mill, flouring mill, carding and woollen mill, oil well, and distillery, near the mouth of Keeler's Creek, now Colborne harbor. Joseph A. Keeler, son of the first settler, was the founder of Colborne. He was merchant, postmaster, justice of the peace, and at that time the most important personage in the locality. He laid out a public square and gave free sites for the different churches, built the first flour and saw mill at Norwood, and also at Castleton, Chamahe. Joseph Keeler, a grandson of "first settler," represented East Northumberland from 1867 to 1873 in the Dominion Parliament, established the first newspaper and printing office at Colborne, was major in the militia and owned a large amount of property in the locality. Mr. Keeler erected many substantial buildings in the village.

The Standard Bank was established in 1872. Mr. Keeler established the first paper in Colborne. The Transcript, and the Young Canadian subsequently the "Watchman", afterwards the Express" years were owned and edited by Mr. Keyes.

The first post office was established in 1815, on the opening of a small store by Joseph A. Keeler. Lumber and grain were the principal export; there was also quite a trade in white poplar wood, which was shipped to the United States for the manufacture of paper. The Presbyterian church was built in 1826; church of England (frame) built in 1844 and two Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal (brick churches) erected, one in 1847, the other in 1849. To united grammar school buildings were built of brick and creditable to the locality. Colborne was a port of entry. The grist mills and tanneries were amongst manufactories in the neighborhood. The following names of early settlers to whom grants of land were made along the Rideau were those of Campbell, Richardson, Scripture, Beattie, Cooper, Shaw, Brimson, Turney, Merriman, Rogers, Smith, Gould, Garfield, Vars, Grover, King, Fraser, Steele.—Colbourg Sentinel Star.

A BUSY WORKMAN

When a busy man dies the world wonders at the diversity of his achievement. Edgar Wallace died on Wednesday, the wizard creator of sleuth yarns, plays, short stories and other sketches, his production being remarkably unhindered. His immense output offsets his lack of claim to style.

Yet Wallace was like many another man, able to accomplish a great deal while other men puddle about and really achieve nothing except with the time.

While he made no claim to literary style his work had an entertaining value as many translations into foreign tongues show.

Wallace made himself what he was. He was an orphan in early childhood, a drunken peddler of fried fish. He turned to the army and fought in the first Boer War. Afterwards, toiling he started on his writing career. His early reputation was slow in coming as compared with the great fame which came to him in his days. His youth had been as full of experiences that he was able to use them in his writing and these he turned to good advantage in the coming days. In time he became the greatest of modern adventurer and mystery tales since the time of Alexandre Dumas.

His stories are clean and according to a writer in the Montreal Star, "people of every class, from the clergy and statesmen to the humble peddler of the road, found in him precious hours of solace and of surcrease from care."

THE LEGISLATURE

Ontario Legislature has opened for a serious-minded session, with problems of finance foremost upon the legislators.

Welcome to the municipal councils is the announcement of the federal undertaking of a large share of the Ontario Pension obligations, amounting in a cut of thirty seven and a half per cent in the amount to be paid by the municipalities.

The agreement made between of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board and the Bureau of Municipal Affairs will attract much attention at this time, a plan over which the counties have been showing much concerns inasmuch as it is said by opponents to indicate control of municipal expenditures. Premier Henry himself has made a statement calculated to allay the fears of the public in this regard, explaining that the aim of the legislation is to control those municipalities which have become inadequately staffed, adding that it would have been well if there had been more supervision when the boom of roadbuilding was in progress in Ontario and municipal councils have made clear their fears of infringement upon municipal council rights.

The moratorium of one year upon the principal of mortgages on farms will work out well in cases of distressed owners under restrictions.

The hopeful situation in Ontario with the expansion of the gold mining industry and the steps taken to aid the farm in the financial condition with the over-subscription to the recent provincial loan were noted.

This province looks forward hopefully in this troublous period.

THINKING OF THE HORSE

Some provision ought to be made whereby all the hills and the entire width of all the hills should be sanded or treated with cinders. Horses drawing coal sleighs have difficulty enough in negotiating the hills which are quite steep and would appear as if some small portion of several of the hills could be left with a snow path untreated with sand or cinders. Some attention in this regard has been heard before but so far nothing has been done to help the situation.

A NEW COINAGE

Manchester chambers of commerce is advocating reform of the British coinage to, bring pounds, shillings and pence into the decimal system. It would apparently be a simple change. The shilling would be divided into five parts instead of twelve as twenty shillings would still equal one pound.

The opinion is expressed by the chairman of the Manchester chamber of commerce that British trade is handicapped at present by an antiquated system of coinage as well as by the more efficient decimal system of other countries. It is felt that the present time is opportune for making the readjustment. The chancellor of the exchequer is being asked to submit it to the treasury experts for examination.

South Africa is considering legislation at present to depart from the £. s. d. system of coinage. Action in Britain would possibly induce South Africa to make the reform along the same lines. The spirit of experiment is abroad in Great Britain, perhaps far more than it is on this continent. The change to the decimal system would be a very moderate experiment.—Ottawa Citizen.

WORSE THAN THE DISEASE

By James J. Montague

From my youth I have envied the people
Who suffer no physical ills,
Who, through year after year, are immune to the fear
Of druggists' and specialists' bills.
I was born with a frail constitution,
And suffered a muddle along
Till I made up my mind that I'd go forth and find
The means to grow healthy and strong.

So I studied the subject of diet;
I quit using my spoon for food,
Till I learned the right fare, after which I took care
That each bite should be thoroughly chewed.
But still I was nervous and feeble
And often confined to my bed
With shudder quakes and with brain-racking aches,
Which threatened to wrench off my head.

So I took up gymnastics and boxing
Ran a mile before breakfast each day;
I golfed and I bowled till I caught a bad cold,
Which sapped all my vigor away.
Next I put in hard grueling efforts
A heavy canoe to propel,
And my biceps grew strong as I paddled along;
However, I failed to get well.

Today I am shattered and shaky
And barely can walk down the street;
Little food can touch, and I don't care so much,
For but very few things I can eat.
I have given up all ambition
To gain either wisdom or wealth,
But at last I've found out, past a shadow of doubt,
Getting healthy has ruined my health.

FEBRUARY is a busy month for birthdays and why the Stork should choose such a normally uncertain weather month as this for special deliveries is a mystery. Abraham Lincoln's birthday will be commemorated on February 12, and George Washington's on February 22, giving the Yanks two holidays each close together. Quite a few Belleville people including some prominent in business life were born in February with special honors going to James V. Jenkins, proprietor of the Hotel Quinte, born on February 14, St. Valentine's Day, eighty years ago, and carrying the name of that famous saint. Get your congratulations ready folks for James Valentine Jenkins, eighty years of on Sunday, still going strong, nearly sixty years in business and still keen and competent with the old spirit as well as bell. Many happy returns of the day, Jim.

EDDIE OANTOR thinks that the political troubles of the United States could be solved by having two presidents, one Democrat and one Republican. With two presidents in the White House, Eddie puts in Uncle Sam's domains, for the Republicans could blame the Democratic president for every ill of the body politic, and the Democrats could heap scorn on the Republican president as responsible for bad weather, bad business, bad crops, and all untoward manifestations of this changing age. Eddie would even be willing to take care of the presidential chairs, if the emolument was made sufficiently large, and his wisecracking proclivities were not curtailed.

HOW FAR WILL A DOLLAR GO?

Here's a stunt in high finance. A young man purchased a tie in a men's furnishing store. When he came to pay for it, he found he did not have money enough, so he issued his cheque for a dollar. The merchant endorsed the cheque and turned it over to the barber in exchange for a dollar's worth of service. The piece of paper went through the hands of nineteen more merchants in exchange for goods, etc. The twentieth man took it to the bank, where he found out there were no funds to meet it. He called the other nineteen men together and after considerable discussion, they all decided to put up 5c. apiece and retire the cheque. Twenty people received a full dollar's worth of goods or service all for a nickel. How's that? —Anon.

A COSTLY BUSINESS

Just where the tax dollar goes is always an interesting speculation and in these days when there are many dollars raised by taxation the subject is the more interesting. The Toronto Star utilizing the reports for 1929, has figured out what percentage the average municipality pays of its taxes for education and the result is a bit surprising. Even though most of us knew in a general way that education these days is a costly thing, the extent to which we are now at stake is startling. Here is the list of United cities in the year and the percentage of taxes spent on education:

Dr. Bruce Hutchison, of Victoria, a member of the Board of Education, expressed the opinion that the province could stop one of the grades three of its high schools and never miss them. Only a small part of the pupils ought to be at work. The trouble is that the high schools since the apprentice system seems more or less a thing of the past. If nearly every business had a branch of apprentices around as was the case a few years ago, there wouldn't be any trouble in absorbing the pupils who left the high schools, but nowadays the ordinary business concern has to be organized as they expect too much mostly. Years ago a boy or an individual was paid to teach a trade to a youngster. Now the boy has to be paid and paid well while they are learning the business they intend to make their living at. It is a fact that lies part of the solution of a terrible problem, but certainly it is costing too much now for education in this province.—North Bay Nugget.

HOSPITALS AND THEIR PATIENTS

General hospitals throughout the province continue to report deficits. Unless such institutions happen to possess large endowments, they can scarcely hope to escape a loss on their operations, notwithstanding the grants they now receive from the municipalities for the care of indigent patients.

While this is happening, high costs of hospitalization are leading people to look for relief in schemes that is sorely needed. The fear of being stricken by a long illness involves and hospital bills is causing many to postpone operations which are required if their health is to be restored. They do not wish to be considered charity patients, but they find themselves quite unable to pay the charges for the treatment that they need. Instead, they go on suffering. Multiply this by some cases, go down to premature graves.

Perhaps the best solution to the state scheme of health insurance still remains to be found the remedy for hospital ills. It is not fair that patients who cannot afford to make any contribution to the hospitals must be assured sufficient financial support from the state to be able to meet all of the demands that are made upon them.

The time may yet come when all patients entering hospitals will be given an account for the various services of such institutions will be available to them, whether or not he has enough money to pay for the medical hospitalization, and when no hospital will be compelled to curtail its activities or refuse to admit patients because of financial considerations. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

WILL THEY BE CITIZENS?

Protestant ministers of Ohio met in Cleveland and passed a resolution denouncing the Hitler race theory, effect they would never again participate in it or help to recruit soldiers for the army.

What will the government say about this? That question is the visceral outcome of a case which has been before the United States courts on several occasions.

A nurse, Miss Bland, born in Canada, applied for citizenship in the U. S. forces, and has since resided in United States, applied for naturalization. Her application was refused because she would not subscribe to the section which required her to bear arms in the defence of her country.

This nurse is opposed to war, just as the ministers of Ohio are, but her opposition barred her from becoming a citizen of United States.

If Uncle Sam shook his head at the nurse and refused to adopt her, what will he do to the ministers who take the same ground?—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

China sustains a population nearly four times as large as that of the United States, and that in crops about one-half as large.

THYROID NOT SERIOUS IN EVERY CASE

If Enlargement Not Great Its Presence May Not Be Known

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Many people, especially women, have enlarged thyroids, which is the gland just below the Adam's apple and may be increased in size. It may be the middle part or lobe that is involved or it may be one or both of the lateral lobes. On the other hand, the

LOUIS E BISCH

If the thyroid is not enlarged the condition is unusual in question may not even know it. Sometimes such a slight swelling give a certain symmetrical roundness to the neck and no symptoms. On the other hand, the gland may be pronouncedly big and attract great attention. And it may produce symptoms no matter what the size.

In order to understand the varieties of conditions that may result from Thyroid trouble and what is alike that the gland is made up of a connective tissue framework, somewhat of a house, and that the tiny, secreting glands or follicles are lodged within this framework something like a beehive.

It stands to reason that an enlarged gland as a whole may be due either to an increase of this framework, or to framework tissue or to both. If it is only connective tissue framework that is in excess the gland may be so large as almost to rest on the shoulders but not produce any symptom of nervous or other disorder. Such a condition is merely slight increase of gland substance may give rise to many manifestations.

Generally speaking, thyroid gland inactivity—called hypothyroidism—makes people high-strung and nervous, irritable, unable to concentrate, given to fits of temper, develop nervous indigestion and become emotionally unstable. Such persons are restless also both mentally and physically; they talk and act quickly. They have great difficulty relaxing. The result is that energy is used up and waste, a tremendous amount of energy.

Although all thyroid cases are not serious, and should not be considered times this can be accomplished by the use of iodine, which is found in other measures may be of value. At any rate every thyroid should be examined by a doctor. The services of a doctor nor should there be disturbed by fears. Any way can be obtained at once. Thyroid cases usually are not serious.

It should be pointed out, however, that thyroid gland takes part in regulating pregnancy. This, of course, is a most important consideration. Pregnancy is a time of great stress and sure within the throat, likewise tickling sensations and cough may be produced by the backward pressure of the enlarged portion of the middle lobe of the thyroid.

Not all thyroid trouble is due to overactivity, however. Many cases of underexcretion exist. Here the opposite picture is presented. Instead of nervousness and mental and motor unrest there are sluggishness, mental apathy and general disinterest. The skin may be rough and dry. There is a tendency to obesity, the general disposition and functions are sluggish.

In "hypothyroid" states—that is, cases of underfunction—regular administration of thyroid in capsule or tablet form and in proper doses is indicated.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Neurasthenia means nerve weakness. The term is not employed much nowadays because a progressive fatigue as well as other similar nerve symptoms are neurotic manifestations. Therefore they are future the underlying neurosis must be treated.

DAWN

It comes on tiptoe—swift and gray—
Comes weirdly through the silent town,
Pale, calm mother of the day,
Deep-loving, faithful, glancing down
The misty streets and lanes
Before the dusk — awake and night.
To lead the way of noiseless change.

From out of deathly space and night
The current flows and life revives
First mystery to meet our sight
And stir within our waking lives!
Do early whistles bring the light?
Or is it that the day has dawned
For milkmen? No! It comes—behond!

Heard On The Street

Strange and unusual are some actions at law which are brought into the courts from time to time, but never perhaps has a stranger one ever been instituted against any individual and that the one which is engaging the attention of the courts in New York City at the present time.

Demon-haunted, Charles E. Colton, of that city, is suing the Metropolitan Opera Company for the sum of $40,000 because of one night spent among the horrors which he claims the house building and its night. He attended a performance of The Meistersinger some weeks ago, and through an accident he was locked in the building after the performance of the Abend. He failed to find any exit and was forced to stay in the darkness, wandering for hours. He screamed and shouted at the top of his voice but to no avail.

Spectres, he declared, moved after him up the aisles as he ran screaming. Weird musical notes rang shrill and hollow from the curtained stage. Dead and forgotten operas while the auditorium echoed to the faint applause of an audience that flickered in the darkness like a ghost.

o—o—o—o

As a result of this night of horror, Attorney Colton in his suit, he has since been physically and mentally ill, drowning through his days and lying awake nights for fear that he may hear and see those things again. That's his side of the story and he sticks to it.

o—o—o—o

Away back in the time when ghosts and haunted houses were spoken of more seriously than they are at present and a haunted house, with even a rather doubtful ghost inside it was a thing to be feared in the neighborhood it used to be a gay custom to stand on a hill-top half a mile away and see "the witch and the light blazing in in the windows". If you looked long enough and steadily enough you would probably see the witch and ghost, with the head tucked under the arm, stalking through the halls and tearing maliciously at all in its path—although how a ghost could grip with its hands is a thing that has never been very clearly explained by those who have claimed to have seen one with their own eyes. Anyhow these ghosts were considered very real and dignified, and quick and quiet, their artists they had all other bad actors backed off the boards. One of these haunted houses, I remember, in the neighborhood of the old Fair Grounds, say, and then five minutes later he safely ensconced in some other part of the neighborhood, with perhaps a candle and one of the darkened windows at the terrified peasantry, and rattling the long hunks of chain he generally dragged behind him. And it was said that they are very hard to get rid of, rattle chains. A priest without a good, rattley chain might as well go out of business; he doesn't belong to the union and that's all there is to it.

As for costumes, they are pretty well standardized. Ghosts have to wear one or two colors: if he lives in a neighborhood where there is a rather large Irish element he wears green, but if he lives near a French gray kind of suit, or if that was not in stock he would have to put up with the Scotch plaid. Of course he has to wear a sheet to fill the swankier ghosts. But if the place he occupied was anywhere near the street lights in the city then he had to have a good English plaid, black. Contrast was all, prime objective in the design of the ghostly raiments.

Next came size. Sometimes the ghost would be a little, bent, old man, hobbling about with a cane, but then a fellow did happen to come to grips with one of those little fellows, then the chance of you getting the better of him was very slight indeed. Once a man happened to rap you over the head with the crooked cane he carried, or ambushed you in one of the dark hallways. Sometimes the ghost would be a giant, in the olden days, it seemed, wanted to tackle one of those headless ones, but a few of the boys could muster up enough courage to sprinkle through the house when it was known that there was only a little ghost in it.

Then there were the big-long, lanky fellows, with the yards of cheese cloth sheet, and the ghosts that were dressed in the height of the style—ghosts have always stalked—and the bits of chain dangling from the wrists with the long yards of chain after them just to make a noise as they could. A sort of Lon Chaney noise. Those headless were pretty tough to meet face to face in any match, they be had as they can be crowed off as just being fond of scary but not exactly a real menace to anyone. The last classification of the tribe was the little old ladies who were in the habit of hanging around the house outside and peering in the windows. Maybe if you've been out like some night and were at the wrong block of a party, and you looked in the window and saw a little old lady and either offered to fight or ran just according to the amount you had imbibed. One of the old ladies would be sure to be in the house no other night, and you saw a ghost standing near his driveway when he happened to turn off the highway at night, and in fact all local spirit records for years. It happened this way:

The gentleman in question had been out on a pre-Lenten party. There had been considerable drinking, good drinking, and in fact at the end the cobbled was declared more was forthcoming. Along about the time that the pictures in the room started to dance jigs up and down the walls and the floor started to undulate in a manner that meant music multiplication by four, he began to think that he had had enough. It was a long drive home, but he was sure he could make it and set on them, so he put on his coat and went home. The distance wasn't far from the city limits, and he was sure he did. He was sure at times it was not exactly steady.

Off Catherine street he turned and approached the driveway. He was tired and sleepy and sure he was walked he observed the strange scenery that loomed before him with eyes half shut. Everything seemed to be in a hazy mist, and he was sure he saw a ghost. It was different—something that he had never seen before in that neighborhood stood on one side of his driveway. He rubbed his eyes and looked again, and the thing was still there. He looked again. It was a ghost: it stood there straight and tall—and the ghost was clothed in the conventional sheet, and there was no doubt a face that looked wan and white. There was no time for questioning—the car was on the driveway now, and was on the side. He was scared to yell for help so all of his energies went into that mad race. By the time he had put the car away he had decided that the conventionality of the ghost's dress had nothing was trailing him. Then, gingerly, he retraced his steps. He again reached home. But this time there was ghost and he slipped into the house. Later he was found that the "ghost" had been just one of his neighbors who had been out looking for the family cat who had staged a battle under the window some few minutes before. It was a good cat and the lady had been scared that the cat had been killed. The ghost was the lady. She had stood on the sidewalk looking for it when her neighbor had appeared around the corner. And if she hadn't run down the street, this story would never have gotten into print. To this day, however, he really believes he saw the ghost and his story has lost no fine points in the telling.

WORLD'S SPEED KING PREPARES FOR A NEW RECORD ASSAULT

Sir Malcolm Campbell, intrepid British automobile driver, has returned to Daytona Beach, Florida, to try and break his own world's speed record of 246.773 miles an hour, which he established a year ago. The Bluebird, his famous motor car, has had its nose sharpened and its horsepower increased from 1,450 to approximately 1,500. He has decided to boost his own record because Wizard Smith, Australian driver, is busy preparing to challenge the speed king on a beach in New Zealand. Above are three pictures of Sir Malcolm. Right is a close-up of the daredevil driver, while top, left, and below, are two unique shots. The top photograph was taken this year when he drove a 1903 Rolls Royce at its maximum speed of eighteen miles an hour. The photograph below shows the won derful lines of his racer which can travel at almost 300 miles an hour.

DAM BURSTS NEAR BARRIE

Heavy Rainfalls Blamed For Collapse of Structure

BARRIE, Ont., Feb. 12.—(By tl's Canadian Press)—Collapse of a dam on the outskirts of Barrie last night flooded low-lying sections and caused a partial traffic tie-up. Heavy rains during the past 24 hours are blamed for the collapse. Little damage was done.

Melting snow added to the menace of rising waters in the river which rose three feet and fears were expressed low-lying farm lands would be flooded.

Water Backs up in Sewer and Floods Basement of Hall

ELEVEN INCHES

Public Works Department Alleviate Nuisance By Blowing Sewer

Eleven inches of water was reported on the floor of the municipal transients' quarters in the Memorial Building yesterday afternoon. Under direction of the department of public works a line of hose was run down into the quarters and the men tried, in vain, to force the sewer blockage back. City Foreman Henderson stated that he had never seen the local sewers so filled with water and slush as they have been in the past twenty-four hours. Many basements on Front Street were flooded out but nothing could actually be done to relieve the situation.

The flooding was caused by the sewers blocking up, thus the water was forced into the basements. The water subsided enough last night to allow the transients to get to the quarters by wading in their bare feet. The water, at 8 p.m., was about two inches deep on the floor but the men did not seem to mind that once they were ready to retire.

The question of preparing their breakfast this morning was what was worrying them as the water was quite deep in and around their kitchen quarters. The present conditions which prevail in the sewerage draining of the city is due to the fact, that combined with the heavy rains and melting of the snows, the sewers are not large enough to take care of the surplus water which is at present in evidence on the streets of Belleville. It may take a day or so in order to drain the sewers itself from the city's streets and underground basements.

In the meantime the local merchants and store keepers will have to carry on business with their basements and cellars flooded to a certain degree.

In their return game at Kingston tonight the Belleville Intermediates have added strength when Bill Sherry announced this morning that he would make the trip. Although he would not definitely state whether he would don the uniform, it is thought that since in the Jack Harty Arena nothing will keep the locals hard hitting defence man from entering the fray, the locals' hard hitting defence, for a two goal lead will have to stand strictly to their business of playing hockey tonight. That is if they wish to come home with a victory in their credit.

Whether the Cubs are overtrained or not we cannot say, but we do know that they are not delivering the goods as they did a month ago. The most logical reason, is found in the fact that they had over two months of hard hitting play-off games in all playing nights, ending on Wednesday. All the kids came out of Wednesday night's battle looking in tip-top shape and should, if they get into the game, win from the Bellemeade boys.

Frontenac hiked protesting Bill Sherry if he appears on the ice tonight. That's a real "bad one." The "wise-guys" from the Limestone City are protesting on the grounds that Bill played hockey in the Belleville Intermediate City Series. So what. Why shouldn't he? He is employed by the Gilmour Service Company here in Belleville and plays on their city league team in Twenty. We might add that Bill received permission to play in the games as he is a bonafide employee of the company and not a ringer from the Kingston end of the story at the same address. Besides, the league in Kingston is not affiliated with the O.H.A. Bill Sherry is a fine fellow, good enough, he out tonight and it looks as though the fans will be our friends from the Limestone City.

For the benefit of the sport fans we will have them down a very nice little sport editorial concerned and written by the sports editor of the Kingston paper. Here it is: "And if you want to see some fairly good skates and boots, asserted stick and puck manipulation, just a jaunt to Belleville. For the benefit of a couple of pairs of skates, they might be even induced to take on a couple of members of the ill-fated intermediate team, champions of the O.H.A. (Oh, how we've fallen, oh!)"... Well, well, as Andrew H. Brown would say, "Let us not sample!"... We congratulate the writer and we feel that the Frontenac intermediates did not set the town on fire. But there is a very fortunate thing that Queen's University is not in Kingston, a city twice the size of Belleville, because were it not for the university at Kingston the Limestone City would still be played to the limit with no risk of theirs. People who live in glass houses should not throw burnt matches, 'ere sample!.

Tonight is the night for baseball fans in this district. We are glad to hear the comment which is going around in regard to future baseball, so freely discussed on the streets of late days. It shows that the public are interested in baseball and the night's meeting will, no doubt, be the most successful baseball meeting ever held in Belleville. Better come early and get a seat. The new executive of the Belleville Nationals will be he'd in the Y.M.C.A. tonight. Everyone is invited.

According to O.H.A. despatches the winner of the Kingston-Belleville junior series will line up with the Bowmanville kids in the next rounds.

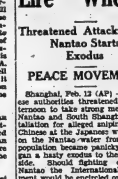
Threatened Attack Upon Nantao Starts Exodus

PEACE MOVEMENT

Shanghai, Feb. 12 (AP) — Japanese authorities announced this afternoon to take strong measures in Nantao and South Shanghai in retaliation for alleged sniping by the Chinese at the Japanese war vessel on the Huntao river front. The population became panicky and began a hasty exodus to the country side. Should fighting occur at Nantao the International Settlement would be encircled on all sides by a battle area.

A new movement for peace, through the mediation of Sir Francis Lindley, Great Britain's minister to China, and the United States and French ministers, was begun by Chinese merchants at Shanghai.



The merchants began by seeking an extension of the truce period which was in effect today for the evacuation of non-combatants and wounded from Chapei.

The Japanese charges said that during the five-hour period Chinese soldiers and snipers fired at least five times on Japanese troops who were standing by in accordance with the truce agreement. It was indicated the charges were handed to the members of the foreign consular corps by the Japanese consulate officials.

Japanese military officials denied there was any intent to extend the truce, although they declined to say whether hostilities were likely to begin anew.

Admiral Nomura, Japanese fleet commander, conferred with British cruiser Berwick lying off Woosung to move from there by 7 p.m. This was taken as an indication the Japanese intended to begin another intensive bombardment.

It was "Easter Morning" for the two lifeless cities of Shanghai and Chapei. As the pallor of dawn crept through the sky in the east they rose from the dead for four brief hours, while mercy stayed the

In Hongkew, as a truce was declared at 8 a.m. to permit a search of flattened Chapei for imprisoned combatants and sick and wounded, the streets which had been deserted since the outbreak of hostilities two weeks ago suddenly teemed with life as though someone had said: "Lazarus, come forth!"

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A Bad Glad Time
By Thornton W. Burgess

The difference twixt me and you
May merely be the point of view.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

How can a bad time be a glad time or a glad time be a bad time? I don't wonder you ask. You see it all depends on the point of view. The very same thing can and often does arouse emotions that are exactly opposite. It is a time that brings me joy may be a bad time for you, or it may be the other way around. It was just this way with Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face the Barn Owls and some of the little people of the Green Meadows, the Old Orchard and the Old Pasture.

Monkey-face and Mrs. Monkey-face had established themselves in Farmer Brown's big barn and were very comfortable there. They had left the neighborhood wherein so far they had spent their own and Grandma Owl's nesting days in order to reach Farmer Brown's. They had moved because gossip enough had promised to be easier than those where they had been living.

The promise was realized. There were very many Meadow Mice under the snow that covered the Green Meadows, the Old Orchard and the Old Pasture. There were many rats around the barn and buildings in spite of Black Pussy the Cat and Pilp the Terrier. Yes, indeed there was plenty to hope for such clever hunters as Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face. The latter had not intended to stay. At first she had been homesick and had fully intended to go back to her own as she was reared. But the hunting was so good, and the joy of putting off the start back until it had also ceased to think about it. You see she was no longer sick. The truth is, she was smart enough to know that she had a far better home inside that big barn than she did in the dim old church belfry in which her home had been.

So it was a glad time for Monkey-face and Mrs. Monkey-face. Yet that very same time had made the Owls glad was a bad thing for Danny and Danny Meadow Mouse and all their relatives and friends on the Green Meadows, and for such of these as lived in the Old Orchard, the Old Green Forest. Also it was a bad time for the Mice and Rats who lived around the Farm buildings.

Danny and Nanny shook their heads when they talked the matter over. They had made a mistake enough to see Monkey-face when he first arrived and from that time on they were constantly on the lookout for him. They had not known him when he went back to get Mrs. Monkey-face and had rejoiced, thinking he had gone for good. But this didn't prevent them from keeping watch just the same, so it was that they soon knew that Monkey-face returned and that he had brought Mrs. Monkey-face with him.

"It will get so that we will need eyes in our tails," said Danny with a little sigh. "It was bad enough as it was, goodness knows! I don't know what the world is coming to. It is a blessing that Owls can't see down through the snow. From now on we will have to keep to our tunnels pretty closely."

This is what Danny and Nanny did. Often they were tempted to climb up to the surface, but would remember the great claws and the strange face of the stranger Owl and that would be enough to keep them below. Almost every day they heard of one or more of the neighbors who had failed to return home and they guessed why. So if you had asked Danny he would have told you that this was indeed a bad time for the Mice.

There was another who had no welcome for the new-comers. "As Mice are not hard enough now without having them made harder by adding two more to the list of enemies," grumbled Reddy Fox to Mrs. Reddy when he heard of the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face. "I heard that Mice are their favorite food, as they are ours, and every Mouse you kill is one less for us. They are just making bad times worse."

HOME FOR YOUR CHILD

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Someone has said that it isn't so much what happens to us as how we take what happens, that counts, and the more years I've talked to lately the more it dawns on me that in the moment when we're not job throwing money around as we did a few years ago, there has come a stimulating challenge to our game-need and ingenuity.

A child has a right to a lovely, attractive home, and by that I don't mean a luxurious home as much as a home which puts its best foot forward according to its monetary ability to do so.

Rooms which are tastefully furnished, balanced as to color and points of interest, meals which are well cooked and often make up what they lack in luxury.

I had occasion to visit a gallant little mother last week and she showed me some curious bags and boxes which consists of five rooms in the upstairs of a ramshackle old house. It was almost a wish she had a child and with very nearly nothing, for the father had had his work for necessity's sake.

The cretonne curtains and table-cloth had become so bastered that she felt she must have new ones. With the assistance her clever planning, is a delightful, colorful kitchen, gold and white cretonne, gold colored oil-cloth tacked over the kitchen table, a splash of corresponding color painted artistically on the rungs and upper parts of the chairs and for which created an atmosphere conducive to pleasant meals which must be eaten in the kitchen. The entire cost was fifty cents.

And efforts such as these are brave, fearless gestures on the part of mothers. This resolution to keep clean, attractive homes for the children, at times when it requires brains more than money is at least one valuable thing we can salvage out of the wreckage and know we had saved something of exceeding value for our children.

ALUMNAE DANCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our Alumnae are giving a dance soon. Of course I am going to ask a friend of mine to be my escort on that night. Here is my difficulty. Should I pay for the tickets, should I let him know how much they are, therefore letting him pay for them, or should I simply pay for them, since I am asking him? I am in the throes of indecision. Will you tell me please?

When Middle Aged Gets Coy

Dignity is a sort of cold potato virtue. It doesn't make pulses purr. You don't give much support to sagging tummie laughs out of it. But it appears to be what is expected of middle age. After you get to be forty you aren't supposed to play hop scotch, jump over fences, make faces, or do anything like that. You have to come up an small form of playfulness that doesn't imperil dignity.

Being forty, or fifty or even sixty is no guarantee against impulsive young feelings that stir one to a desire to rattle up and down the street on roller skates. Or to pick a sailor hat and a false moustache and set up. Believe it or don't, the charming old gals and old fellers going on this zone have these impulses. They don't indulge in them because they don't want to be dragged away by padded cells and embarrass the family. Feeling skittish now and then is a lovely emotion. One can't indulge in skittishness, but there's a satisfaction in knowing that nonsensical ideas still seize one.

There's many a gay old pal who wouldn't change places with any young thing who is burdened with a sinlessness sour-dough face.

Being kittenish is something else. It isn't created by inclinations that are born of a sense of humor. It is make-believe, play-acting, a sort of farce, and nothing else.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Mary Lou: Let me be a young man's caroler of his dress, dodges social affairs, misses engagements more often than he keeps them, and seems to be absent-minded. It seems he is more interested in the science of astronomy than in every day life. They are engaged, but by no means. Mary says she loves this man, but I see she wants him to be like others.

Mary, my dear, I can see your side very clearly. And I can sympathize. But where is this marriage that you have in mind with a scientist. Let me be blunt. Do you want him to go into an office, starting in at the bottom? Of course, you are loved by him. Scientists have an ideal of a home and fireside just as much as is an art, and if you marry him, you have to give up things you love.

If you are not prepared to do this much for love of your man, you had better look for another. Be sure of this, your young man knows what he wants. He has chosen a profession that doesn't pay handsomely in dollars, but it is steady and the highest-paid men have only a comfortable height of his kind. Go along with him whole-heartedly, or give him his liberty.

I have in mind another couple. The young man was rejected by being positively ugly. He was shy with women. He did not keep an engagement to marry. Apparently, his was a well developed case of introversion. Now, though that was not heard of in his day. But while he had no looks, he was a rising young lawyer. Men as a rule loved him.

The young woman was well bred, handsome, and of good family. As a social life, she might be termed a headliner. It is a fact that she was considered a most desirable parti. Despite a good dancer. In a word, she was desired by many men. And it is no exaggeration to say that she could have made a brilliant marriage.

But she loved the man who failed to keep his wedding engagement with her, and "married" him. Months passed. The girl waited. Friendship developed into love together. The thing was patched up. An immediate marriage was brought about. Mary, you see, was very wise in the life of the man's income. There were two of them to count. Children came. The man grew.

Years passed after her marriage, this woman had faith in her man. She believed he was destined for greatness. Her faith always laughed at when she made her prophecies. Tongues of malice were busy about these two. Indeed, there is little to the existence of a groom that fails his bride.

But prophecy alone doesn't count for much without courage and faith. This woman was Mary Todd—and her husband Abraham Lincoln.

Slight Depreciation In Wholesale Prices For January

Ottawa, Feb. 12 (CP). — Wholesale prices in Canada, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, moved downwards in January, the index number was 79.3 in December and 80.4 in January. Sixty quotations were higher, ninety-three lower, while three hundred and forty-three remained unchanged.

Vegetable products advanced from 85.6 to 3.7, gains for oats, rye, oatmeal, rolled oats, cottee and chicks more than counterbalancing losses for flax, barley, wheat, flour, bran and shorts.

Animals and their products fell from 68.3 to 63.4, losses for steers, cured meats, milk, butter, cheese and cream, more than counting the index more than gains for calves, hides, and cured and rendered fats. Fibres, textiles and textile products were unchanged at 71.8.

ONLY TRICKLE OF BUSINESS

Toronto Exchange Idles Along Without New York Mart

Toronto, Feb. 13—Lacking the leadership of capricious Wall Street, Toronto Stock Market this morning withdrew into itself and only trickles of volume appeared on the tape. Prices were firm, but only small fractions varied from those at the close last night.

The unexpected buoyance in New York Thursday gave spirit and tone to the local market, but Canadians are not inclined to pursue the advance further until they have some definite proof of what reaction there will be in New York to the sudden rise in prices, which has been the subject of much heart or whether the bears will make another concerted drive.

Most of the leaders were slightly firmer in the morning trade. Gridoil, Steel of Canada, Consolidated Paper, Abitibi, Price, Brazilian, Foods and chain store stocks were quiet and firm. Mulrhead rose another ¼ point to 2, up a full point this week.

E. S. Banks Closed

New York security and commodity markets, as well as the banks were closed on Saturday, it being a legal holiday in thirty states of this country. Aside from the New Orleans cotton market, there were no major exchanges functioning in this country.

Notice to Investors

We execute orders to buy and sell stocks on all exchanges exactly as we have done, and through the same connections. We have, however, discontinued our private wire service, as conditions do not warrant it, nor are day to day price changes of sufficient moment. Neither do we wish to carry Margin Accounts.

In the meantime we advise the purchase of Government and High Grade Municipal Bonds, because, in our opinion, there can be no stock movement of any consequence, and no permanent recovery without good bonds firming up considerably first It will then be time enough to see which industrial concerns will be able to withstand the present period of unprecedented deflation. Many of them will not be able to.

Our Stock and Bond connections are with the most reliable houses, who have been in business for many years. We have their daily information and advice, and are glad to pass this on to you for the asking. We will be taking part in all reliable Bond issues, as they are announced in the press. Clients should telephone their orders, at our expense, and every care will be taken to have them execute promptly.

FORD MODELS SOON TO SHOW

Two New Models Will Be Presented to Public

East Windsor, Ont., Feb. 12. — The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, subsidiary of the Ford Motor Company in the United States, now will present to the public two new model motor cars, Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Canadian Company, said today.

His statement followed the announcement that the American Ford Company soon would begin production of a new V-8 cylinder car and an improved 4 cylinder model. The two engines will be interchangeable in the same chassis.

It is expected the first public showing will be made in March. Both cars will sell in the low priced field, which has been dominated by Ford for many years.

While the new cars will be new design, will be roomier than former Ford models. The chassis will be low slung, of the "step" type and with heavier frame.

FOUND DEAD IN HER BED

Miss M. Mitcheison Suffered From Weak Heart

Miss Mina Mitcheison, 58 years old, was found dead in bed at her home, 61 Cedarla Street, near Rosemary Street Church, at eleven o'clock Friday morning by a neighbor, Mr. F. H. Post, who immediately summoned Dr. Sheehan. She was found to be from natural causes and the body was removed to a funeral home.

The late Miss Mitcheison lived alone, she is survived by a brother and the house where she died for thirty-eight years.

The house in which she lived is the centre one of a three-house terrace. Mr. Post, who lives in one of the houses said that members of his family had heard Miss Mitcheison come from the upstairs of her house to the kitchen to get the milk bottle out for the milkman, who usually arrived at 7.00 o'clock.

During the morning no stir was heard from the house occupied by Miss Mitcheison and Mr. Post became anxious about her as she is said to have suffered with a weak heart. He went to the house and entered the front door, which was unlocked. He found the late Miss Mitcheison down stairs Mr. Post said that Miss Mitcheison had died in bed dead.

It is thought that after putting the milk bottle out, the old lady ascended the stairs to her room and went back to bed.

Dr. Sheehan, Deputy Mitcheison died naturally; passing out in her sleep. Mr. Post at once communicated with Miss Mitcheison's sister of Napanee, who, it is understood, is a niece of the late Miss Mitcheison. Mrs. Wallace will come to Belleville today.

NO EVIDENCE OF DIRECTSALE

Mike Wosslazyn, Point Anne, Not Guilty of Sale

"Mike" Wosslazyn of Point Anne appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning charged with illegally selling liquor contrary to the Liquor Control Act. The accused pleaded not guilty and after quite a few witnesses had been heard His Worship was of the opinion that there was some doubt as to where the beer had been purchased and found Wosslazyn not guilty. C. J. Frame, K.C., appeared for the accused and Mr. Gallagher represented the Crown.

Daniel Lowen was the first witness called by the Crown and he testified that he had, on the 6th day of February purchased two bottles of Dominion brew beer from the accused, about five o'clock in the afternoon, that he returned to Wosslazyn's home at 9.30 p.m. and purchased five bottles of home brew and while on the street in Point Anne, was arrested by Constables Kelly and Stringer of the Provincial police.

Constable Kelly stated, that he arrested Lowen on the street in question as he showed signs of intoxication, when upon the search of Lowen upon making the arrest the officers, Kelly and Stringer, found five quarts of home brew beer in his possession. Lowen stated that he had purchased the beer from one known as "Mike" and a check was then laid against Lowen and the next day Constables Kelly and Campbell searched Wosslazyn's home and found 106 quarts of home brew. Samples were sent to Toronto for analysis and the report showed the beer to be from 4.2 to 4.3 alcoholic strength. Constables Campbell and Stringer corroborated the statements made by their fellow officer.

Several witnesses were called for the defence but the main witness was Mike Wosslazyn himself, who testified that he had never seen Lowen there on the day in question nor had he been there to his knowledge. He stated, that he could make over 100 quarts of beer in the sum of $2.72 and had a government permit for the manufacture of beer. His wife and brother both swore that Lowen had not been in their house, that night as they all had retired about 9 a.m.

Joe Chayowski, a cousin of the accused, swore, that he was reading in his room until about 11 p.m. and he never heard anyone come into the house. All witnesses testified, that the 106 quarts of beer in Possession on the 7th February by the officers had not been placed in the house, but around eight o'clock on the night of the 6th of February. His Worship weighed the evidence carefully and stated, that it was of the opinion that it was Lowen's evidence against that of Wosslazyn. As there was no direct evidence to prove the charge against Wosslazyn handed down a verdict of not guilty to the accused.

Daniel Lowen, who appeared before His Worship on a charge of having liquor in his car, and was seen other than in his place of residence, was fined $100 and costs and the usual fine of $100.00 and costs was imposed for intoxication, three months in the common jail. As the accused could not pay the fine he was taken to the jail.

Twenty-one days in the local jail was the sentence received by a resident on a charge of intoxication, when he was unable to pay the usual $15.00 and costs. The accused was accordingly sent to jail in state of intoxication, on Campbell Street, late last night.

IN MEMORIAM

ASHLEY—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, George H. Ashley, who fell asleep, Friday 12th, 1931.

While midnight stars are gleaming
On a lonely silent grave,
Beneath it sleeps a loved one.
The one we loved but could not save

His many hours, his days of pain,
His troubled nights are past;
His eyes patient, worn and frame
His found sweet rest at last.

Lone days, lone months have bore his pain
To wait for cure, but all in vain;
Till God Himself knew what was best
He took him home and gave him rest.

Now ever remembered by Wife, Sons and Daughters.

LOADSMAN—In loving memory of our dear father, Thomas Loadsman, George Edward Loadsman, who passed away, Feb. 12th, 1929.

We often sit and think of you
And think of how you died
Without a word to say good-bye
Before you closed your eyes.

You were always a loving father,
Faithful kind and true and
Until we meet again dear father
We shall ever grieve for you.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Daughter. 712-15

Cheese Patrons of Central Ontario Organize to Co-operate in Production

First Association of its Kind in Canada and Will Be Helpful

AIMS ADVANCED

John Elliott is President Pro Tem, and F. R. Mallory, Secretary

Despite one of the most inclement days experienced in Belleville and district in months, rain, fog and slushy roads, the meeting held at Belleville yesterday afternoon, was a marked success, both from the point of representative attendance, and the interest taken in the instructive remarks of the various speakers. The meeting was mainly productive of the formation of an association of the cheese factory patrons—the first in Ontario—to promote their interests, the preservation of cheese in general and hence the advancement of the entire dairying industry. Aside from that, there is abundant food for consideration addresses, depicting the inter-locking and inter-relationship of the various branches of dairying, authoritative information regarding the cheese market of Great Britain, as well, as sound advice how Canada's once predominant place in that market might be recaptured. The three of the speakers was organization, and with organization, co-operation, this being brought out and developed by them, in showing what had been accomplished in other branches of agricultural production by its employment and the success attained. J. F. Griffin, provincial secretary and manager of the Ontario Milk Producers Association, L. A. Zufelt, district representative of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School, A. H. Willard, Toronto, agricultural sales promoter and cold storage specialist, and dairy expert of the city, for years identified with the the welfare of the cheese industry in Canada, were the speakers of the afternoon.

F. R. Mallory, Presides.

There was a scant half dozen in the hall at 1.30 o'clock, the time set for the meeting, but in the course of a half hour, some sixty five cheese men had arrived and the gathering transferred to the Council Chamber. Fred R. Mallory, secretary of the Belleville Cheese Board and Town selected by the promoters of the movement to act as chairman and secretary, the appointment, stated concisely why the meeting had been called, and dealt with the two matters to come up. He wished, however that the question of cheese marketing would not be brought up for discussion at the meeting as the gathering had been called primarily for organization. Summarized Mr. Mallory's remarks were:

The patrons of cheese factories are like everyone else, interested in finding body of men in Canada as far as agricultural experts are concerned, Yet the Honorable Minister of Agriculture speaking at Belleville in early February decided that the cheese factory patrons of Ontario need no organization to discuss their needs, present their views to those in authority as well as to discuss our own business methods and seek remedies for the same where they be fair to it, and send his milk to the factory throughout the entire season, instead of taking a higher price for cream for a few weeks when the factory must needs lie. In the long run the milk producer would get more for his product by staying with the cheese factory. What was the factory's interest was his interest.

Relative to cold storage Mr. Elliott said Belleville was happily situated, the steamboat companies would pay the handling of the cheese from the warehouse to the docks if grading and coding was to be carried out there.

Mr. Elliott felt that today's meeting was a step in the right direction. In the Premier of Ontario, the farmers of the province had a friend and adviser. Mr. Henry was a practical farmer himself and delegations interested in agricultural matters would always be assured of a cordial reception from him. It was advisable, however, to limit requests over deliberately, appoint small delegations and arrange for hearings through the local representatives of the district. Organization will make either unnecessary. He concluded with words of the industry seeking rights of its own from it.

Dawn of Dream.

Mr. J. F. Griffin assured his hearers he was more than pleased to be present, this afternoon meeting was the dawning of his dream for the past three years, the organization of the cheese patrons of the province. The Milk Producers Association had two branches well organized, that of milk shippers to towns and cities, and shippers to powder manufacturers and milk condensing plants. The cream shippers were scattered and had no form of organization. Mr. Griffin gave two examples of what his association had accomplished by being united and welded together whereas had separate, similar organizations gone about such tasks little would have been accomplished. They had gone to the government relative to the inspection of dairy herds, producing milk for U.S. consumption and had carried their point. The other was the question of sales but a year ago certain milk products and ice-cream manufacturers had been threatened, felt to be a grievance that would have been a serious matter for control to the milk industry. A delegation went to Ottawa, interviewed the Minister of Agriculture who saw their reasoning, arranged for a hearing with the Premier and a cabinet meeting that night the matter was taken up and before leaving the capital the delegation was assured their grievance would be remedied.

The improvement increase this quantity of the raw material supplied to our cheese factories.

2 To work for the establishment and amalgamation of our present manufacturing plants with the view of having them operating twelve months in the year, that is, to have a sufficient number of properly equipped plants located at central points to take care of our surplus milk during the winter months.

3 To work for the establishment of one or more central storage plants where our cheese can be assembled, cooled, weighed and graded before being sold and also to arrange for more equitable and up-to-date system of marketing.

4 To work for the elimination of duplication of milk and cream transportation, the extra expenses of which are borne by the producer and consumer in the final analysis.

5 To hold meetings and conventions, to consult and advise with the Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture on all matters pertaining to the cheesemaking industry in this jurisdiction.

6 To discuss the advisability of sending a deputation to Ottawa to ask the Government to grant a bonus on all cheese exported in view of the fact that a subsidy of 4c per pound is being granted to the wheat growers of Western Canada. The Ontario Milk Producers Association were favorable to a bonus on cheese, yet the cheese producers are not organized enough this, nor have they done anything themselves to promote it, as yet.

7 To do any other act which had for its object the improvement or betterment of the cheesemaking industry as a whole.

John Elliott Speaks.

The chairman then introduced Mr. John Elliott, who addressed his remarks relative to his activities and interest in the cheese industry in Canadian and the Bay of Quinte district and Belleville Cheese Board particularly. He began and dealt only Saturday last, he had been in conference with Mr. Bennett, chairman of the Marketing Board of Ontario, in Toronto for two hours, and that he had a scheme of a somewhat similar nature to the one being brought this afternoon for the welfare of the cheese factory patrons, and had assured Mr. Elliott that the Provincial government would assist the industry in every way possible. Cheese boarded at Belleville was a standard product, being all other cheese in England here was no cheese board in the world sold at a better price of cheese than the Belleville organization. The cheesemakers association had done much to improve the quality of cheese since its formation. Great Britain, New Zealand is Canada's only competitor for the cheese trade and Canada's cheese always kept so purchased there and likewise there will always be for it being cheese but Canadians can have the market if they wish to re-establish it; even if sold at a loss for a year or so that loss must be explained. Now was a favorable time to start in. England had on hand 171,000 boxes of cheese increased with 196,000 boxes a year ago, therefore there would be an increased demand to make up this shortage. The factories were run to full capacity, overhead would be reduced. The output being large quantity of milk the cheesemaker could produce more economically. When a factory operated the 10th of April a patron should are found at fault.

Alms and Objects.

The cheesemakers have a good standing organization. The city milk supply producers have a large and aggressive organization. The creamery men have their organizations and the Montreal Produce Association governs the cheese market situation, yet the patrons of cheese factories as a unit as yet individuals with no collective voice to express their views or guard their interests.

We, therefore, decided to invite you this morning to discuss the advisability of organization and if the meeting approves to take the necessary steps.

What we might accomplish if organized, I would suggest:

1 To advance the interests of the Milk Producers connected with the cheesemaking industry.

WARNS OF PERIL IN HOME WILLS

The pitfalls resulting from persons not drawing their own wills but drawing up their wills were outlined by Terence Shortt, head of the Estates Department of the National Trust Co., in an address to the Provincial Club in the Royal York Hotel.

"He dictates," he advised, "and the lawyer's real power is reduced to a make a will, the law governs the disposition of his property. Out of wills one may make, and how many are not exemplified in the Succession Duties Act, is arrived at."

MAD TRAPPER NOT CAPTURED

Police Fear He Will Be Frozen When Found

Aklavik, Northwest Territory, Feb 12.—A band of heavily Royal Canadian Mounted policemen raced with death through the Arctic hinterland today in search of Albert Johnson a bush-crazy trapper who killed one of their number, wounded another and defied their combined efforts to take him alive.

The officers, forging ahead through icy gales into the land known as the graveyard of the north," practically gave up hope of overtaking Johnson alive, but were determined either to get him that way or to find his body.

They believed it impossible for Johnson to exist much longer alone in the frozen barren land of misery into which he had escaped. They hoped however, to catch him before he froze to death or starved.

Capt. W. J. May joined yesterday in the hunt with his Bellance airplane but the weather was so bad that little progress was returned and flew back again today, but did find way to where he could not locate even the posse.

EVERY WOMAN faces this question

How do I look to other people? If you have a lovely skin, attractive eyes, and plenty of enthusiasm, you needn't worry.

But many women, though rich in their beauty by neglect of constipation. It often causes loss of pep, sallow skins, dull eyes, pimples.

Yet constipation can be overcome by eating ALL-BRAN regularly. Several provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines. And vitamin B which tones the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Special cooking processes make it thin and easily digestible. It is not habit-forming.

Simply this is enough to bring the system with pills and drugs—often hide-bound.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation.

If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Death Aboard Submarine is not an Agonizing One

Men in Undersea Least Effected By Tragedy of Craft

FEAR OF PANIC

Grow Indifferent to Fear of Death in Service

By Lieut. William Guy Carr, R.N.R. (Ex-Submariner)

The recent submarine disaster stirred the emotions of the world. The loss of M-2 and her gallant crew added yet another list of name to the tragic roll of honor of the British Submarine Service. Perhaps the only people in the world who are least affected are the men of the undersea service who know such things as part of their day's work.

Men who go under the sea in ships realize the dangers and accept the risks they are forced to run because they are patriotically inclined and temperamentally suited for the duties they are asked to perform. The thought of the possibility of a slow, lingering death does not cause them any greater fear than the knowledge that we all have to die sooner or later does for the rest of us. From my conversations I have heard in office, home and street cars, I am of the opinion that the average citizen has suffered more fear than the crew of M-2. The public knows little or nothing about submarines and they have given themselves a lot of unnecessary mental torture picturing the imaginary horrors which they thought to suffer when entombed in a steel cylinder at the bottom of the sea. As a matter of fact death in a submarine is no more than in any other form.

Panic to Fear

There is only one thing to fear in a disabled submarine and that is panic during the first few minutes. Having lived with the officers and men of the submarine service for a number of years and having studied the medical record of their successes and disasters probably better than any other living man, I can say that the possibility of a panic leading to fear amongst the crew of a British submarine is so remote as to be absolutely negligible. The officers are men who are finally accepted for service aboard ever-going submarines are tried and tested thoroughly before being accepted. They are known to be physically and temperamentally suited for the work before they are appointed as a member of a submarine crew. Once appointed they are tested again to make sure they are "submarine minded." By that I mean that the men who are retained in the submarine service feel as much at home and comfortable and as much at home in submarines as they do in their own dens in his own home or when driving a car.

The men who serve in submarines no more fear mysterious disasters peculiar to their calling than the rest of us fear being killed while crossing the street. A number of people will be killed this next year while crossing the streets, a greater number of men will die as a result of their service in submarines, but it is all one and the same thing. The fact does not worry one much any more than it does the other.

Death Usually Sudden

Provided men are of the right type and temperament, to die cooped up in a submarine is no worse than to let go the threads of life under the influence of pneumonia, which is so often resultant from exposure in war front. It is only on rare occasions, however, that submarines meet with slow death, usually death comes suddenly.

If a submarine is sunk owing to collision then the chances are that she will heel over and flood and sink before any of the water-light doors in the various compartments are closed. If salt water reaches the batteries chlorine gas is formed and it snuffs out the lives of the dozen or so men in an instant, in most cases they either drown, or die of gas.

Let us consider the case of those men who shut themselves up in a compartment. When I was in prison compartment in a submarine from which the inrushing water cannot escape provided the depth of water is not too great. There is hardly a place in the North Sea deep enough to prevent a man's escape from a submarine but there is little use getting out of the submarine unless you have certain things. Submships are on the surface waiting to pick you up. Even Greeve Yeager would find his abilities as swimmer taxed beyond his capacity if he were asked to swim even half way across the North Sea.

Unless those on the surface know of their predicament, and are able to make contact with them the men might just as well remain inside the hull of the submarine. I have read the records of men who died slowly and who, in a submarine that I have lived with and spoken to men who have undergone the slow process of dying. Some of them have told me that strange if unconsciousness and were then miraculously saved from death.

Death Not Bad

I know these men rarely ever quit the submarine service following an experience of this kind. Most of them are proud of it. I was one man who survived the loss of the Russian submarine the Chine. According to the records left by men who died in the compartment of the men who lived after being near death, the process of dying in a submarine is not nearly so bad as we people imagine.

As the oxygen is consumed a sort of tired feeling overcomes the men. This gradually increases until it becomes a sort of lethargy, which finally develops into a state of coma. It comes upon them so gradually that they are not aware of it. First the men are fully occupied with their duties trying to correct the damage which has been the immediate cause of their plight. As the oxygen is used up the simplest movements become equal to the greatest exertions. Men become exhilarated. The men first grow tired, then indifferent. They could not force energy over them like the effects of a drug; they fall asleep, and their sleep deepens into the coma which precedes death itself.

Most people deliberately avoid the thought of death except when it is brought home to them by such disasters as overtook M-2. During the war men were forced to live with death as their constant companion. Men were compelled to avoid thinking of death. Having served various campaigns in a period of years and thought of the possibilities of dying cooped up inside of one, I tell now as I did then. If I have to die I would just as soon die in a submarine as in any other conditions, men you could trust and admire, as surrounded by doctors, nurses and the odor of a sick room and, perhaps, racked by the pain of cancer or ravaged by fever.

Grow Indifferent

Men who live so close to death grow more or less indifferent to the thought of death. If they are brought face to face with death they usually send for a friend with the scythe and hour-glass calmly. Why would they not? What good would it do them if they lost their nerve and went mad? Death would simply throw away any chance there was to take advantage of outside assistance which is arrive in time.

I have seen how a British submarine crew died after their efforts to escape had all failed. They died like men. I also saw how the crews of two enemy submarines died after a number of them had lost their heads and gone into a crazy panic. The one crew died sleeping in the positions they had occupied while active. The members of the other crew, including the officers, had been disturbed by revolver shots, while suicide had been the way out for the rest.

"Who is the Canadian Pacific pensioner with the longest service record? A controversy recently raging has been ended by the official statement that John Cassar, of Vancouver, is the "grand old man" of the company, with 42 years of service, closely followed by W. J. Grant, of Hamilton, with 41. They are respectively 81 and 78 years of age.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

What did she know of him after all? He was rich, and she had idly dreamed of becoming his young and adored wife, queen of the beauty that as Mrs. Steven Barclay she could bring into the lives of Mary and Molly and baby Mike. Dreamed, too, of herself in thin, gay frocks, never chosen for sitting, moving in the pleasure spots of the world with never a thought of work or care.

She stepped into Dreamland and ran straight into Jack Salomon. His face broke into a wide grin.

"Hullo you're back. And with the dress, too, I see. Quick work, kid!"

Helen's chin came up.

"I might as well tell you," she said coolly, "that I intend to work here only temporarily. For three weeks at the most."

"That's ok, by me, kid. But since you're here I suppose you won't mind obeying the rules like the other girls. Or will you?" wheezed Mr. Elkonzy more.

"I won't," Ellen replied, ignoring his heavy-handed sarcasm.

"Guess this is the only one I didn't tell you about."

He pointed to a sign on the bright pink plaster wall. Ellen read that the hostesses were permitted no conversation while dancing except "yes" or "no" in answer to questions. She turned her amazed face to Salomon.

"Does Neal funny," he chuckled still grinning. "But there's good sound business back of it. The hostesses can talk when they're sitting at the tables with their partners here. And when they're sitting they order things to eat, of the genie will stand for it. They mostly will."

"Oh," said Ellen blankly.

"Our specialty's chop suey," he continued imperturbably. "Only 45 cents to one, 25 cents to the hostess. Thirty-five if the chop suey isn't extra but that means you can't mess in it with your fork. It has to be good enough to serve again."

Ellen gigged.

"The joint's straight," he assured her seriously. "We don't serve liquor. We don't even admit men that have been drinking —much."

She was a little perturbed by his cheerful outspokenness but she meekly allowed him to pilot her to a cramped dressing room and to introduce her haphazardly to the other girls, some 15 in number. He used no last names. The girls were Alice and Dolly and Sunny and Anne and Maxie to him. Ellen assumed they were to be that to her.

Salomon had not knocked but nobody appeared surprised. A few of the girls reached for kimonas with mechanical squeals of dismay but most of them serenely continued their toilets. One had little young-ster, wiser, Ellen thought, stuffed her deliberately pulled her one-piece dress over her head and stood in brief shorts and a soiled slash up-lift, grinning at them.

A brightly painted screen, gaudy with peacocks and pagodas, concealed a washstand in one corner of the small, hot room. Ellen went behind it to dress. The quarters were cramped and stifling but she did not mean to risk another of Salomon's unconventional entries.

When she emerged only two hostesses were left in the room — Tony nad a languishing blond called Anne. They shared a wicker bench where they sat smoking and gossiping to have a first-hand look at the new hostess.

Ellen looked toward Tony—and met a pair of cooly hostile eyes. A diafs ist eaNdeiehfw ehfcbeb I

CHAPTER V

Ellen sensed the antagonism of the two girls. She ignored it. They were staring at the ivory gown. Let them stare! Her own pleasure in the gown had been destroyed. She neither knew nor cared how beautiful she looked in the soft ivory tafieta which swept around her.

Tony, half-eyed small and brunet, was barely covered by a wisp of chiffon and clearly revealed her breasts and young unformed legs. Her air of brutality, a sullen purely feminine sigh, turned swiftly to envy as feminine.

"The customer is going to be fierce tonight," she whispered loudly to her platinum-haired companion.

"Maybe she thinks she's going to be presented at Buckingham Palace," countered Anise, flipping her cigaret to the floor.

Tony chuckled gleefully.

"The queen," she said, giggled. "And in a dress from Chanlel or 1711 ssi ny favorite lipstick."

The youngster jumped to her feet, ran across the room and before Ellen understood her purpose she had pulled down the back of the dress to examine the label.

"It is a Chantel," she confirmed in an awed voice. "Gee, how you get it? How come you to wear a dress from Chantel to dance in a dump like this."

Ellen felt like tearing off the dress and stamping on it. She was angry and humiliated. A good part of her anger was directed at herself. She should have known better than to wear a comfortable garment merely because it was becoming. She had come to Dreamland to work—not to be comfortable. It was for girls who were protected and cared for—for girls who would have been scornfully amused at the notion of dancing at Dreamland to earn money for rent.

"Go away," she fiercely addressed Tony. "Go away and let me alone. And take your hands off my dress!"

"Aw, I'm sorry if I hurt your fings," apologized Tony, with a little distressed flush. "I didn't mean to. I'm sorry. Don't be sore. I was only fooling. You look swell." Her small face was puckered with earnestness. She slipped her brown hand in to Ellen's hand and gripped up at her engagingly. Anyone would have been forgiven Tony in that mood, as Tony well knew. Ellen forgave readily. She thought Tony a good sport and recognized all her other-wise hardness, worth a dozen of the languishing Anises.

Anise was still sulky and aggrieved when the three girls walked to the ballroom. But Tony had forgotten completely that she had ever been jealous of Ellen and was cleverly babbling out amazingly sophisticated advice and instructions.

The hostesses sat at empty tables, one girl to a table, and waited for men to ask them to dance. Most of the girls had regular patrons. Tony's interrupted dash in for their methods for "cinching regulars". These men would buy a whole string of tickets for the privilege of dancing with a particular girl for an hour or so. After each of the short dances—the fastest couples barely managed three turns of the room before the orchestra stopped—the girl would gravely detach one of the tickets from the long string proffered by her escort.

Ellen took the table close to Tony's that Tony was gone almost immediately away like a green flash in the arms of a tall youth. She made a wry face over her partner's shoulder to indicate to Ellen that she did not favor him.

Ellen sat alone for some time. The music, once she became accustomed to its loudness, made her want to dance. She was surprised to observe that for once in her life she was an undeniable wallflower. The large majority of the other tables were quickly occupied. Still no one asked her to dance.

A great many of the men who stood around the walls watching the dancers or waiting their turn with Sonny or Anise or Tony or Maybelle danced toward her but no one approached. Ellen's very beauty and air of cool aloofness intimidated them. At last a bold spirit sought out Salomon and came over for an introduction. As she acknowledged the introduction Ellen realized there were worse things than sitting alone at a table while others danced.

One of them was dancing with Joseph K. Landis. He was clumsy. His was crude. He held her so tightly that she could hardly breathe. He pressed his damp face against her cool cheek no matter how insistently she ought to avoid the juxtaposition. And all the time he babbled in her ear inane compliments.

"Where've you been all my life, little one? At home taking care of the kids? I thought so. Pretty little thing, like you should have a better job. Take me for instance —go right ahead and take me. I'll see you don't get trampled in his rush.

"You're holding me too tightly," she said forlornly.

"Naughty, naughty! You're not supposed to talk. I can hold you tighter than this. See."

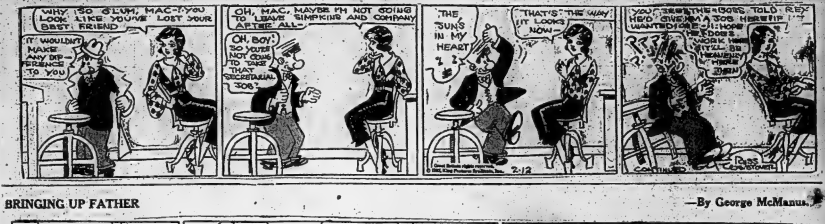
His closed his arms around her, moved his face forward and kissed her squarely on the lips. Ellen struggled free, slapped him across the mouth and was off the floor and back at her table before Joseph K. Landis thoroughly understood what had happened.

Jacob Salomon was very angry. He stood before Ellen's table, his fat face red, his arms gesticulating, as he explained in detail how angry he was.

"I don't care if he did try to kiss you," he snapped. "That was no excuse for slapping him. You gotta treat patrons decent, Kid 'em along, but you don't have to dance. Mr. Salomon, not to be insulted," she replied, "but I'm not a dancing doll. I'm not a dancer at all. I'm a girl who has to earn her living and I'm willing to do it honestly, but I'm not willing to be insulted."

She got up from the table and had begun to say that perhaps she could find another job to take her place, one more amenable to his ideas of dancing, but Salomon was a small disturbance near the door. There was a general stir and they all grouped near the ticket booth. The orchestra was playing plainly without a tune but the third, the one in flannels, just as plainly was not the dancing kind. Evidently Ellen saw Salomon straight across the crowded floor, regardless of the dancers amongst his path, toward her.

He was a young man of 26 or 30 with a pleasant face in which weakness was oddly mixed with something almost boredom. His hair was thick and red. Ellen had a strange feeling that she would always remember his features, even after the floor, that it would remain forever in her mind, unalterable, unchangeable.



She continued talking to Salomon, who had his back to the newcomer, but she was hardly conscious of what she was saying. She talked she was aware that all her attention was focused on the approaching and that she was asking herself the cause of the contradictions in his face, deciding it was due to the sulky, bored mouth beneath such eager eyes. Were they blue or gray?

Jacob Salomon did not observe the young man until he was within a few steps of them. Then he understood immediately.

MR. AND MRS. JOE GETS A NEW LID (CONTINUED FROM YESTERDAY)

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 33. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service). By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

About three o'clock in the morning the Swede brought the boat's nose to the shore and they landed before a clearing, where, in the moonlight, could be seen a cluster of native huts. Helping Jane ashore he led her to the village gate. Evidently they had expected him for the wife of the chief admitted them, bringing food and a gourd of goat's milk for the baby.

As Jane received the welcome food, the Swede spread the blankets on the ground and himself lay down to sleep a little way from her. It was some time before the girl could find a comfortable position on the hard ground but at last she fell asleep from sheer exhaustion. When she awoke it was broad daylight. About her were clustered a score of curious natives.

When she saw they were friendly, her face lighted with a smile of radiance that had helped to make her beautiful famous both in America and England. The baby still slept. The natives had withdrawn at the command of their chief who now stood talking with the Swede a little apart from her. Surely there must be something deeper in his intentions than he had yet disclosed.

As she was thinking of, these things, there came a gurgling coo from the wee bundle in her lap that set her heart in rapture. The baby was awake! Now she might feast her eyes upon him. Quickly she snatched the blanket from before the infant's face. The Swede watched her as she did so. He saw her danger. Holding the baby at arm's length from her, she gave a piteous cry and sank to the ground in a swoon.

Emma", Marie Dressler's first picture portrayal since Min and Bill" which won Miss ler the Academy award for best feminine performance of the picture presents an intense drama of American family life es rises to an stirring a climax as been seen on the Belle screen some time when Miss Dressler land on trial for murder.

The direction of Clarence Brown further asset to the production, the tense courtroom sequence shows the same fine sense of ance that marked his handling a similar episode in "A Free Soul", one of his outstanding directorial achievements to date.

From the standpoint of story, cast and direction, "Emma" does head and shoulders above the average screen effort but above all it is another triumph for Marie Dressler.

BOX WHO COULDN'T ... TAKE PUNISHMENT

"Maker of Men" the picture showing Saturday at the Capitol Theatre stars Jack Holt in the role of a college athletic coach—a builder of American youth—and features Richard Cromwell as his son.

A father and son drama, the story reveals the struggle of the boy to reconcile his own fears with his father's ambition to make a great athlete of him; He does not share his father's love of sport. To him it is brutal play with a heavy, set body poor reward for empty glory. He can't take physical punishment, and he doesn't see why he should be called "yellow" because he doesn't want his body battered!

Why can't his father understand his terror that—paralyzed him? Why he be a craven all his life, or will he find his manhood in the depths of despair to which his failure plunges him? These are some of the interesting questions put forth and answered in "Maker of Men", an original story written especially for the new team of Jack Holt and Richard Cromwell by Howard J. Green and Howard Sedgwick, the latter also director of the picture.

ARMS DETRIMENTAL TO PEACE, SAYS PERLEY

Armament Reduction and Security Allied Time for Cut Arrives

Sir George Perley Tells Arms Conference of Canada's View

CANADA SECURE

Happy Contribution of Circumstances Make For Peace

By George Hambleton
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 13 (C. P. Cable).—"Canada will wholeheartedly support any constructive proposals for the limitation and reduction of armaments..... and we believe that action towards this end should be taken, and taken now. Further delay will be fatal."

George Perley, Minister without Portfolio in the Dominion Cabinet and chief Canadian delegate, placed Canada's position before the world disarmament conference today.

Canada, Sir George pressed, had a deep and sincere interest in the reduction and limitation of armaments as a contribution to world peace. She was united in urging with all the powers the command that something practical should be done at the present conference.

Canada Is Aid

"Her delegation will be proud to give any assistance within its power in the solution of any problem which may be decided upon," Sir George said. "We humbly realize the responsibility for what the conference does or refuses to do. On every country represented lies the solemn obligation to make this result one that will benefit humanity."

Nowhere was the obligation taken more seriously than in Canada, either by government or people. No country had a greater interest in the conference, nor had a greater desire for its success, he declared. Canada took the conference seriously because its delegation would provide the alternative to war, and Canada had been forced to take war seriously.

Time for Cut

The Canadian government was convinced the time had come for general reduction and limitation of armaments, and believed that the draft disarmament convention before the conference, though it included details requiring careful examination, provided a suitable basis for discussion and consideration he said.

"Our experience has taught us," Sir George continued, "that reduction of armaments can in itself be a source of security. The two are indeed inter-related and inter-dependent. Certainly, the record of history has proved that every effort made to reduce the force of security meant insecurity for some one else."

Canada's Situation

Canada was relatively without armaments when the fell storm broke. In some measure this security was the result of her geographical position, of geographical, historical and political circumstances. To the south and west, Canada faced oceans. To the north was the Arctic. To the south she had as neighbor a great and friendly nation with whom she had developed a tradition of arbitration and conciliation. the successful functioning of which, he pointed out, was causing the peaceful settlement of disputes to become a habit rather than an event. Canada's experience was that these friendship and goodwill of neighbors was the best insurance against war.

"We make bold to declare," Sir George added, "that armies on our frontiers or navies on the inland seas might prejudice the beneficient effect of these favorable circumstances. We think further that the organization of the league can best be achieved at this time by emphasizing the prevention of conflict, rather than the punishment of aggression. Wright Hargreaves' address to a few cents from last night's final test both Trudeau and Grandin were up 5c and Lake Shore and Hollinger 10c each. Among cheaper golds Kirkland Lake gained a couple to 48 and Sisco, Moneta, McLeod River and Bankfield recorded small advances. Vimy Ridge and Alexandria a little around.

International Nickel sold up 3/8 on outside buying and Noranda and Hudson Bay Mining displayed minor gains. Mining Corporation recovered another couple to $1.10 and Eldorado was up a cent. In the oil section Ajax and Acme sold slightly higher.

Trapper Flies to Yukon Barrens

Aklavik, N.W.T., Feb. 13 (CP)—With trailing mounted police at his heels, Albert Johnson has reached the low mountain divide separating the northwest territories from the Yukon and today carried on his flight over the bleak Yukon barrens. The trapper, wanted for the murder of a Mounted Policeman, crossed the boundary line yesterday.

According to word reaching here today a posse led by Staff Sergeant Millen of the Royal Canadian Signals and consisting of four troopers are chasing the desperate hermit and also have crossed over into the Yukon. The building of the trail for the Rat River trapper have hollered not demeaned, Indians reported, is thought to be near.

STANDARD BD. SHOWS BETTER

Gold Stocks Are up Few Cents Per Share on Saturday

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 13— Firmtone and a slight upward movement near the close marked action on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in today's short session. Wright Hargreaves added a few cents from last night's final test both Trudeau and Grandin were up 5c and Lake Shore and Hollinger 10c each. Among cheaper golds Kirkland Lake gained a couple to 48 and Sisco, Moneta, McLeod River and Bankfield recorded small advances. Vimy Ridge and Alexandria a little around.

International Nickel sold up 3/8 on outside buying and Noranda and Hudson Bay Mining displayed minor gains. Mining Corporation recovered another couple to $1.10 and Eldorado was up a cent. In the oil section Ajax and Acme sold slightly higher.

Students Desert Classes as Protest Against Grant

Vancouver, Feb. 13—Cancelling all lectures by the simple method of absenting themselves, students of the University of British Columbia today began a campaign to obtain 150,000 signatures to a petition requesting the provincial government not to make the 50 per cent. reduction in the grant to the University which it has proposed.

Leaders of the student campaign declare that each student is allowed a certain number of "cuts" or absences from lectures before incurring penalty and there is no rule preventing all from "cutting" on the same day.

The petition concludes with a plea that the Government grant for next year "be not reduced below an amount which, after affording all reasonable economies" will enable the university to function as a first-class educational institution."

INCOME TAX

Prof. McDougall Discusses Problems of Standard of Living

"Income Tax is here to stay, as being the fairest type of tax yet evolved for the ordinary man"..... "Taxation is necessary to maintain civilization. A fair tax should not be regressive—it should not lean too heavily upon the poor. Regressive taxation is not good business—At one time many held that the decadence of the accident upon the poor workman who was caught.

In the present time compensation laws have transformed that, so also has the decadence of other forms of older systems of taxation on the poor, except only to the present system which has been evolved as a satisfactory method of raising funds to carry on the necessary work of the community.—Business is a matter of equating things in time and place.

12th Annual Meeting

With this part of the address given by Professor J. L. McDougall of Queen's University to a large number of the members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at the 12th annual meeting held in the Hotel Quinte Friday evening. Mr. McDougall, who is professor of Economics, Sociology and all forms of Governmental Psychology, was the guest speaker at the dinner and gave a talk that will be long remembered by the 100 or so members who were privileged to hear him.

It was, in the points, remarkable at time; trite, full of similes, withal a delightful way and carried away as the speaker went on and delved deeper into the deep problems confronting us at the present day. He drew a gloomy picture—and closed by lowering over the business horizon, looming ever closer, looming by fog and depression—as the apathy of the business man and the lack of faith in the government and a keener and greater interest taken in the government of the country. Particularly he applied to the major question of taxation—which question is the cause behind every working man, no matter of what trade, in the country.

Lower Living Standard

"If things go on as they are now," declared Mr. McDougall, "two things must inevitably happen: first a lowering of the standard of decline in the standards of living by the people of this country for cars, radios, nice homes and good clothes, and secondly, there will be no cars, no radios, plain foods and the simplest of surroundings. The contentment of the people in the interim makes one think. Think of what it will be like when it will be the end of fifty years ago!"

"Canada of today will be no standard of security. There will be no time value of anything. Paper money will be the paper; the value of anything will be dubious. Barter may help, but—

Down to Work

"All this may happen, unless business moves out of the stagnant pool it is in and becomes as realize our inter-relationships with other countries we will inevitably follow along this path. We have plenty for you. One can't act like a boy with a chip on his shoulder and the countries have been doing—we've got to get right down to work—expand our business; get trade going again, then our problems will be solved.

"As for taxation, it is a pressing problem in the country and there have been $120,000,000 growth to direct in a year. Personal liability

SNOWSLIDES CAUSE DAMAGE

Result of Abnormal Snowfall Followed By Thaw

NELSON, B.C., Feb. 13. — (By Canadian Press)—Mine buildings have been partially wrecked, at least one mining operation has been temporarily blockaded, and general traffic has been interfered with by mammoth snowslides in the Salmon Valley district in the last few days, as the consequence of an abnormal snowfall this winter and a recent thaw.

Wednesday afternoon a huge slide from Mount Sentinel swept down upon the mine buildings of the Yankee Girl Company on Wild Horse, and the big compressor House was badly wrecked, and an adjacent warehouse was damaged. The office building also suffered.

A slide occurred at the Reno Mine blocking road, and slides are reported below the Wilcox Mine near Ymir, in the Coffee Creek area and in the Slocan district.

Mrs. Charlesworth had spent the evening at the home of Mr. McGeech, a neighbor, and was returning home, accompanied by Mrs. McGeech, who apparently had gone along to assist her in crossing the street, when they were struck by a truck driven by Andrew Moore, also of Egmondville, proprietor of the Egmondville Hotel.

The accident will be investigated by Constable Whilende of Goderich

Fist Fights in Scottish Game

Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 13 (CP)—A continual series of fist fights marked the play in the Scottish Football Association Cup competition at Motherwell where the Glasgow Celtic team were beaten today. Police were present throughout the match separating the rival clans, while ambulance men were called on to remove people injured in the milling crowd. A number of women fainted. The attendance was 30,000, but twice that number tried to gain admission. The result of today's match started the fans overflowing from the stands on to the pitch and gave a lot of trouble to the police who had to use their batons to keep order.

Chinese Commander Visits Battle Front

Nanking, Feb. 13 (AP)—General Chiang Kai-Shek, former president and commander-in-chief of China's armies, arrived at Pukow, opposite Nanking, this afternoon and spent the rest of the day conferring with Chinese government officials, including Ho Ying-Ching, minister of war, and Chen Ming-Shu, former commander of the Nineteenth Route Army, which is now defending Shanghai.

There was a flurry of excitement over the purpose of the general's visit.

JAPANESE WILL LAUNCH DRIVE ON SHANGHAI

Withdrawal of Chinese Only Means of Preventing Attack

NEUTRAL ZONE

Japan Will Give China Stated Time to Leave Zone

Tokyo, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Japanese military forces, already by a new division of reinforcement troops, will open their big drive upon the Chinese at Shanghai next week, it was stated in government circles today, unless a new proposal for thecreation of a neutral zone around the city and the withdrawal of Chinese troops is accepted.

The proposal will be made to the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, the United States and France, who are also at Shanghai. They will be asked to request the Chinese to withdraw to permit the establishment of the neutral zone if they decline to make the request, it was said officially, the Japanese themselves will demand the withdrawal of the Chinese within a stated period.

Contingents

The last contingents of the reinforcement division, are expected to be landed at Shanghai by the end of week.

The proposal to the ministers of the powers, will be made by Lieutenant General Kenkichi Uyeda, commander of the military expedition, who arrived at Shanghai today, it was declared.

In the meantime, a spokesman for the foreign office said Japan would remain in the League of Nations, even if China demand for consideration of the Sino-Japanese question is brought before the full assembly next week, unless the word "direct out". She would fight her case, he said.

Anxious For Settlement.

Japan is anxious to have the Shanghai problem settled by international negotiations, the foreign office spokesman said, the scope of which would be limited to Shanghai alone, without bringing in Manchuria or, touching the broader issue of the anti-Japanese boycott existing in China, or the boycott on Japanese goods. Japan also wants the nonmilitary authorities in Shanghai included in any such negotiations, he said, in order to discuss their departure, and to divide them from the Manchurian issue.

To Bitter End.

Canton, Feb. 13 (AP) — General Tsai Ting-Kai and the other Chinese commanders at Shanghai all of whom are Cantonese, have informed their families here they will resist the Japanese "to the bitter end", members of their families said today.

The officers, they said, have made provision for their wives and children to leave Canton if they are killed during the campaign.

JAPANESE WILL LAUNCH DRIVE ON SHANGHAI

Withdrawal of Chinese Only Means of Preventing Attack

NEUTRAL ZONE

Japan Will Give China Stated Time to Leave Zone

By Glenn Babb
Copyright, 1932 By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Japanese military forces, already by a new division of reinforcement troops, will open their big drive upon the Chinese at Shanghai next week, it was stated in government circles today, unless a new proposal for thecreation of a neutral zone around the city and the withdrawal of Chinese troops is accepted.

The proposal will be made to the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, the United States and France, who are also at Shanghai. They will be asked to request the Chinese to withdraw to permit the establishment of the neutral zone if they decline to make the request, it was said officially, the Japanese themselves will demand the withdrawal of the Chinese within a stated period.

Contingents

The last contingents of the reinforcement division, are expected to be landed at Shanghai by the end of week.

The proposal to the ministers of the powers, will be made by Lieutenant General Kenkichi Uyeda, commander of the military expedition, who arrived at Shanghai today, it was declared.

In the meantime, a spokesman for the foreign office said Japan would remain in the League of Nations, even if China demand for consideration of the Sino-Japanese question is brought before the full assembly next week, unless the word "direct out". She would fight her case, he said.

Anxious For Settlement.

Japan is anxious to have the Shanghai problem settled by international negotiations, the foreign office spokesman said, the scope of which would be limited to Shanghai alone, without bringing in Manchuria or, touching the broader issue of the anti-Japanese boycott existing in China, or the boycott on Japanese goods. Japan also wants the non-military authorities in Shanghai included in any such negotiations, he said, in order to discuss their departure, and to divide them from the Manchurian issue.

$2 to $15 Share Rise on Wall Street

New York, N.Y., Feb. 13—Wall Street took the worst and the best Street—and Main Street, too — dumped huge buying orders in to the New York Stock Exchange to change hopper today and excitedly watched the ticker-tape machinery grind out juicy profits that had the flavor of an old fashioned, mild bull market. When trading closed at noon, after two hours of frenzied activity, prices were about $2.00 to $15.00 above Thursday's final quotations.

The rally seemed along under enormous momentum, picking up the points on a snowball grows snow as buyers stampeded to ride the tide boomed by the government's drive to make the federal reserve system more flexible in this time of stress.

Slips Into Cold Creek Which is High, Trying to Recover Pail

TRENTON, Feb .13.—While on his way home from school, Stanley Anderson, aged 7 years, son of Mrs. Ella Anderson, stopped with several of his school chums and as he stood on a log near the Bank of Cold Creek, down town seeing the boys sitting so close to the stream called to them to come a way. Young Anderson on getting up dropped his lunch bucket, which rolled to the edge of the stream, on stooping to pick it up he slipped and fell into the foreign office said Japan would the high water now than usual as the previous night the dam stop logs were removed to keep it from breaking after the thaw. So the water was very swift and the depth of 6 or 7 feet. Up until late last night the body was not recovered but they expect to find it to-day.

Seaplane to Meet Liner and Bring Pictures of War

Montreal, Feb. 13.—A week from tomorrow 300 miles west of Victoria, B.C., Captain L. D. Douglas, R.N.R., commander of the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Asia", will bring his big ship to a stop long enough to allow a Boeing seaplane to taxi alongside and receive a very valuable tin can from the hands of Purser W. P. Taylor.

The Empress of Asia, which left Shanghai Feb. 8, is rushing news reel pictures from that city, and the mid-Pacific rendezvous is another link in the chain of rapid transport. The transfer will be a matter of seconds only, but represents a saving of 24 hours in the transmission of news pictures of vital interest. The seaplane will return direct to Seattle where a fast overland plane will be waiting to rush the news reels eastward.

Flames Under Control at Alexandria After Spreading

LOSS $130,000

Blaze Confined to One Side of Street But Many Homeless

Alexandria, Ont., Feb. 13 (CP).—Early this afternoon, after a battle of many hours, fire which took a toll of $130,000 in Alexandria's business section, was under control.

After making a clean-sweep along a block and a half on one side of the main street, the flames were checked following the destruction of the Dever Building, the largest structure in the town. Buildings on the opposite side of the street, threatened for many hours, were in great danger, and firemen stood by ready to check any fresh outbreak.

Ten places of business, dwellings and outbuildings were either destroyed or badly damaged, and several were rendered homeless. No one was injured.

Terrible West Wind

Alexandria, Ont., Feb. 13 (CP)—Driven by the fury of a terrific west wind, fire starting at 5.30 a.m. threatened the complete destruction of the town. Starting in the A. Mariseu garage, in the centre of the town, the flames quickly spread to adjoining premises and four hours later were still beyond control.

Five stores, several dwellings and barns had been destroyed at 9.30 o'clock with an estimated loss of $100,000, and the flames were spreading to other homes and offices.

Every man in town is engaged in the fight to stem onrush of the flames.

Confined to One Side

So far the fire has been confined to one side of the principal main street and every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of flames to the opposite, where there are a number of stores, hotels, banks and a few dwellings.

Several families are homeless, their dwellings destroyed but all escaped injury and the women and children have been sent to homes on the outskirts of the town away from the danger zone.

Those who have so far suffered losses are:

A. Mariseu, garage; Dave Marleon, store, dwelling, barn and warehouse; A. Chevrier, furniture store; Dr. M. Markson, office; K. J. Dever, store; A. Lalonde, store and dwelling; Mrs. K. Archambault, dwelling; Bertha Dever, store; Mrs. Lacroque, store and ice cream parlor; A. Shaikin, store.

VILDE'S COMEDY AGAIN PLAYED

To a crowded auditorium last evening the Literary Society of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School repeated the presentation of Oscar Wilde's "The importance of Being Earnest," with gratifying success. The audience was delighted with the production and the clever dialogue met with gales of laughter and hearty applause. It is the opinion that this is one of the best productions given by the Collegiate, as was certainly amateur acting at its best.

The cast was the same as that which took part in the play on Thursday. Miss Betty Twist again took the part of Cicely with distinction. The various players gave splendid impersonations of the leading characters. Miss Merry, who directed the play is to be congratulated on the success of the production and it is to be hoped that the players will be seen frequently on the amateur stage in Belleville.

Harold Forward gave a delightful vocal number, while Alex Worden contributed a number of piano selections in his pleasing and brilliant manner. The program was in charge of Harry Seager and Bert Langdon. Leonard Reid and his energetic committee had charge of the refreshments, while Miss Brown, president of the club, presided at the affair.

WORK PROGRESSES ON CROWE RIVER

Considering the high water this winter Messrs. Duff and McDonald have made fine progress with the construction of the dam across Crowe River, at Marmora. Herald. The section of the dam in front of the flumes leading to the mill and the fire pump has been almost completed and is a substantial structure. When the pump has been placed it should hold back all the water in that part of the stream. Part of the retaining wall has also been completed and work started this week on the main dam. It will be 22 feet wide at the top and 28 feet wide at the bottom and will take nearly 1000 yards of concrete and rock.

The condition of Mr. Ed. Ahern of Smiths Falls, who was reported in this paper yesterday as being in a very critical condition in the Smiths Falls hospital as the result of injuries sustained in the yards of the Canadian National Railway of that town some time Thursday morning, still remains unchanged, according to word received in this city today.

Mrs. Ahern, mother-in-law of Mr. Will Doyle of this city, and the mother of the unfortunate Mr. Ahern left this city early yesterday morning to attend her son in the hospital, there and expects to be with him for some time. It is reported that while his condition is serious and hopes which are held out for his recovery are very grave, there is just that he may pull through and survive the injuries he received.

NO PARKING IN FRONT OF HALL

Six local motorists returned to their automobiles last night, after they had parked them across the street from the No. 2 Upper Fire Hall, to find that they had been summoned to appear at the local police station. When the unfortunate owners called at the police headquarters they were informed that there is no parking law in the vicinity of the upper fire hall and that $1.00 are costs to learn that they must not park their cars near a fire hall. The local police have been given orders to clamp up on this practise as it is hazardous to the fire department should they receive a hurried call.

One point difference now separates Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria schools hockey teams for the leadership of the public schools hockey league. The Pine Street "students" defeated the Dr. Mitchell's puckchyers by the score of 3 to 0, at the Belleville Arena, this morning. In the second game Queen Alexandra's defeated Ontario by the league race when they defeated the Prince of Wales' team by the score of 4 to 3, Mr. Pinkish acted very impartially as referee. The deciding game will be played in the loop next Saturday morning and a large crowd is expected to witness the tilt.

PENNY BANKS

"Not How Much—But How Often," a slogan of the schools as applied to the penny bank deposits of this city seems to be well taken by the pupils of the city as evidenced by the increased deposits for the children over the past two months, and the greater amount deposited over that of the past year, in the penny banks of the schools of this city.

For the Public Schools of the City King George School still retains the lead by a great majority as shown by a recent circular issued by the Department of Education for Ontario. The following list shows the comparative ranks of the schools of this city, on percentages of deposits.

King George	74
Queen Mary	46
Victoria	44
Queen Alexandra	35

Out of a total of four hundred and seventy-five pupils there are listed as being on the penny bank rolls which may account partly for the decided increase although in Belleville a decided gain has also been shown. Last year the amount on deposit was $4,038.66. This year it has increased to $5,097.14. which show a substantial increase by the children.

TRENTON YOUNG MAN HONORED

Harold G. Crowe Recently Elected President of Underwriters

Harold G. Crowe, son of Dr. W. H. Crowe of Trenton, was recently elected president of the Underwriters' Association at Belleville, the youngest ever to hold the office.

A Trenton exchange refers to him as follows:

HAROLD G. CROWE

"Trentonians will be pleased to hear of the success of one of Trenton's well known young men, Harold G. Crowe, son of Dr. W. A. Crowe, who last year was promoted to the management of the Belleville Agency of the Continental Life Insurance Company. During the year 1931 he was the fourteenth leading producer for his company in Canada and under his supervision the Belleville agency leaped from twentieth to seventh place in the Dominion, which is certainly a remarkable record for such a short period and incidentally was one of the few agencies to show an increase over 1930. He was also recently elected President of the Underwriters' Association at Belleville and as such is the youngest President to ever hold office. Mr. Harold has been in the insurance business for three years."

Mrs. William MacFarlane, resident of Tyendinaga township practically all her life, passed away at her home on Friday after an illness which had extended for some time. ANNUAL GRANTS TO BE CONTINUED

Horticultural Society is Notified to This Respect

Mrs. George Bonisteel, Belleville's delegate to the Ontario Horticultural Society's annual meeting, which for the first time concluded in Toronto, arrived home late last night high in the praise of the great work, which was accomplished and in the interests of the provincial body in Toronto.

Mrs. Bonisteel reported that the local branch of the Horticultural Society, that the Toronto meeting was the most enthusiastic and successful one held in the province of Ontario. She also stated, that the Ontario Government, would not discontinue their annual grants of financial assistance to the various municipal societies throughout the province. Mrs. Bonisteel also received this news with much enthusiasm as it was thought that these annual government grants were also all, that saved the existation of the smaller society in the rural districts of the province.

The local district representative of the Horticultural Society has not been named as yet as the districts throughout the province are to be changed this year. Just where the new districts will be divided is not known as yet.

Mr. Wm. Harvey of this city was the district's representative last year.

He is not idle who does nothing, but he is idle who might be better employed.

SALES TAX IS PREFERRED TO TURNOVER TAX

$300,000,000. That has to be made up. The problem is getting money in one way or another.

Sales Tax.

"The talk to-night is on Sales Tax. . . . Sales Tax—which is the best? How will we make up this enormous loss by new taxation, without tearing down existing taxation—with additional unemployment? . . .

"First, we should not place any tax on such reliance on only one source; second, a flexible source where you need increases in the amounts needed can be gotten at without tearing apart any existing taxes arrangement. Third, a tax should interfere as little as possible with the man who is really trying to save up for future needs. Yet I can see nothing in the favor of the "Metty Green" method of saving. It should be recognizable as saving—economical saving to the point of peril. A man who can save is a public servant, yet saving should be sensibly done.

"With the above as the taxation is brought directly to the attention of the people in a number of different ways a day. Then, in place of this, why not a 5 per cent. sales tax instead of a 1 per cent. turn over?

"As this meeting is a meeting for discussion by the members, I'm going to ask them to kill it over with me."

Mr. W. B. Deacon then arose, thanked Mr. McDougall for the enlightening speech, and then pointedly outlined some facts pertinent to his own business— the tobacco business.

"The skies seem black in some lines of business, but in tobacco there can be seen patches of blue. There are two things that ever increase ourselves on: Sales tax or turnover tax. Also there are two kinds of expenditures: First ours, of Mr. G. Dougall's address of: Don't throw money in the middle of the stream!"

"I don't think the Chamber of Commerce should pass on this question. That is the government any advice on it. Why?

"In Toronto, I am told, there are one hundred and thirty-five specialties—since the war. In England so I am told again, the Chamber of Commerce in London practically dictates to the government measures to be adopted. Yet, nine out of every ten members of that board, are foreigners, from the London center country, and whose hearts still belong to their countries.

"What happens? Take 75 per cent. of the goods (cloth); it comes in a dry, unfinished. Labels are put on it in England after it is finished, and it is sold as British-made goods—yet bought from all countries on the globe. We here can't compete with that; the cloth is made in Czechoslovakia say, by workmen who get ten dollars a week—how is a Canadian manufacturer going to pay his men thirty-five?

"We've got to have a high tariff for protection. An intelligent one; a scientific one—if we are to get along. . . . Industry may be in the dumps right now, but it's recovering fast. It's coming back.

Mr. McDougall replied to Mr. Deacon and cited the case of a barrel of flour and a barrel of beer on over tax would affect him.

"If the tax on a cake of soap he pays a small tax—yet it is noticeable to him, and it would not be what he consumed. It is like the Irishman's example. Ports of entry to this country, are few and are fully watched. It can be taxed. Scoring gas is practically unknown here; yet on the American side an enormous amount of it is bootlegged from state to state, where taxes on it vary, and it is sold without control.

The same would apply here. There would be difficulty in enforcing it; hundreds of chances for the evasion of paying the tax, and the work entailed by auditing of accounts would eat all the proceeds up.

"In England the new beer tax has sent them from the pub to the movie houses. It is regretable that things should come to that point. . . .

"I think, in my own humble opinion, that this Chamber is quite capable of advising the government, and I believe the government would be grateful to receive such an expression."

Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce said:—"The subject was brought up for discussion and while I, as an officer of the board, am not in the position to discuss it, yet I would like a motion along that line."

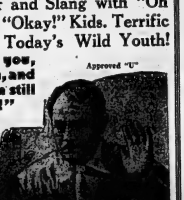
Mr. D. Waite, chairman, remarked:—"I believe, we have a hundred and five in this organization, yet now there are only a small few of that number here. Would it not be better to wait and take up the resolution among them at its?"

Mr. Eugene Illsley said: "I don't believe that that expense is necessary. . . . We are a typical cross-section of the Chamber and the view here should be sufficient. Also with the tried and proven system in existence now in evidence, I think that should be taken into consideration."

"I think that the government would be delighted to get the votes of the Chamber on this matter, so I'd like to make an amendment to the motion made by Mr. P. S. Deacon, that a referendum be taken among the members to find out what their desire is. My amendment would read: that the question of a sales tax is preferable to a turn over tax, and that in the opinion of this Chamber of Commerce the government would be well advised to collect expenditures rather than seek out new methods of taxation." This amendment was seconded by Mr. G. A. G. Web. It was further recommended that a letter of a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Mr. Tummon. This was unanimously carried by the members present.

The opening of the meeting was given over to general and afterial business of the Chamber. The minutes of previous meetings were adopted as read, as was the manager's report with the report of the treasurer. Mr. Eugene Illsley presided. When the meeting was thrown open for general discussion, Mr. Chas. E. Hanna lauded the past work of the Chamber as being a very important branch of the city's activities, and a necessary one. He then went on to state that was necessary and that was that there should be greater membership.

Mr. C. A. Cameron concurred with the above views and stated that the organization was handicapped by lack of attendance at the meetings of members of the Board of Directors they have tried in every way possible to curtail expenses of the Chamber but it seemed to be a losing game. There was a definite, not a great one, but still one that gave them considerable concern. His opinion was that it was up to the members to canvass for new membership.



Mr. D. Waite, who occupied the chair after a few preliminary remarks anent the activities of the organization then introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Professor McDougall.

At the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Friday evening the the reports of the year 1931 were presented. Progress in spite of depression was marked. Local activities have held up very well and an impressive volume of business is reported.

President's Address

President Fairfield said in the course of his address:—

The year 1931 is here history. A great many would like to forget it. Others can look back with pleasure and satisfaction on having accomplished much good in materially assisting in the building up of Belleville, in securing new industries, and by co-operating with those we already have. The past year has been a most difficult one owing to depression but in spite of it all Belleville has moved forward.

May I suggest, as President of the Chamber of Commerce, that the directors endeavour to present at all meetings, also to put forth every effort to secure a larger membership.

A greater opportunity awaits us in 1932 and, with the co-operation of all, we can make it a greater success and build up a Bigger and Better Belleville.

H. E. FAIRFIELD,
President.

Past President

Past President Tilley's remarks follow:—

It would be both incorrect and unfair for retiring officers of the Chamber of Commerce to claim any particular credit for the results obtained during any single year. The work is so continuous and interlocked from year to year that the meeting of one Board of Directors may be the reaping of another. For this reason no claim is made for particular achievements during the year 1931, but it is reasonable to claim for the members of the group of directors could have more faithfully applied themselves to the by-laws of the Chamber than did the directors whose terms of office expired in December. Recognition of this fact may perhaps, with all modesty, be claimed in the results of the election. Once held whereby all five of the directors retiring in 1931 were returned for a two-year term, though each of them would gladly have resigned.

The year was an extremely trying one for all walks of life, but, the prime Minister has just publicly pointed out, Belleville is in exceptionally favorable position by comparison with other municipalities and there is no section within Canada in our opinion more highly favored than our own Belleville district.

In the retail field there has been extremely keen competition and lowering of prices that has made it very difficult to show an even breadth on the year's operations; nevertheless, our merchants recognize that deflation in values had to come, and they have stood up to their difficulties sensibly and intelligently.

Our manufacturers have also had to absorb losses on inventories, and endeavour to keep their organizations intact or reduced as little as possible, in spite of hand-to-mouth purchasing for the past and a great let-down, particularly in the building trades. Notable in our business history has been the advent of two of the world's greatest hardware manufacturing concerns,—Messrs. Sargent and Company of New Haven, Conn., and, the American Hardware Corporation of New Britain, Conn. The establishment here of Canadian branches of these two corporations means more to us than perhaps we realize. It will continue on an enlarged scale the outstanding contribution to the city's industrial welfare made for so many years by their predecessors, the Belleville Hardware and Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited, and The Sargent Lock Company, Limited. We have to-day a branch unit of both these Company, Limited,-located here a few months back which will be an important employer of labor, and purchaser of farm products.

Special efforts have been made by the directors during the year to bring about a greater revenue from tourist traffic, so much of which has been allowed to pass through Belleville when all the time with a little effort we could make this city and district a terminal point for hundreds and thousands of tourists who are willing to pay well for the pleasures and benefits we are in a position to provide them.

Economic conditions may make it impossible at the present time to add to our hospital equipment in Belleville, but, when the time is opportune, we should line up strongly behind the board of governors, the Belleville Medical Association and the Women's Christian Association to provide more accommodation and equipment, and also to provide clinical and hospital facilities for the better care of those in the city and district stricken with tuberculosis. Even from a commercial standpoint hospital facilities are a highly paying investment.

It has been a real pleasure to work with the Belleville Industrial Council, and it may not be an idle repetition to point out that the work of these two bodies is so complementary that they should, and never should be, anything but the strongest harmony between them. Nor can we fully express our thanks to the proprietors and editor of "The Ontario Intelligencer" who have at all times been more than willing to assist us in every way possible.

Let me in relinquishing an office, the filling of which has afforded one both pride and satisfaction, thus speak the continued strong support of the Belleville Board of Trade Commerce. In Mr. H. E. Fairfield, our new president, we have a leader who has won for himself, in this city and community, a wide experience in civic matters that admirably fits him for his duties. In our Manager-Secretary, Mr. J. O. Herity, we have an experienced and loyal public servant.

If we ever need to stick together as a business community, it is in times of stress and difficulty, and I sincerely hope, and fully expect, that our members will maintain their interest and continue their support, both morally and financially, in the work of this very essential body.

E. V. TILLEY.

Manager's Report

Manager and Secretary J. O. Herity gave the following annual report:—

The introductory paragraphs, quoted at the beginning of this report, briefly outline the activities of the Commerce authorities of international importance. It is unfortunate, though it is not the position of a city on the map, or its transportation facilities, the abundance of natural resources near at hand that will make it great but the spirit, the enterprise, the courage and the vision of far-seeing citizens in making use of its geographical location, its favorable means of transportation and its natural wealth that will lift a community out of the village class and transform it into a thriving, busy centre of progress and prosperity.

Belleville To Lead in Important Lines

From the foundation that has already been laid, security and, the prediction may be confidently expressed that the City of Belleville will, in the course of the next quarter of a century, be the leading centre in all Canada for the manufacture of motorcars' hardware, cement and concrete products, industrial paints, furniture hardware, optical goods, shirts, woven labels, dairy products, materials handling machinery, fruit machinery, lubricating machines and radio sets.

In several other lines the output of our factories will establish comparable proportions but not to a position of market domination.

Annual Output Exceeds Six Million

It will occasion surprise with many of our citizens to be informed that the value of goods manufactured at Belleville has already reached the enormous total of more than six million dollars per annum. The figures are supplied by the most reputable statement published under the authority of the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

This latest available "Census of Industry" is compiled from the returns made by the individual manufacturers upon which their sales tax is based.

The report lists 54 industries at Belleville, with value of annual output $6,342,292. There are 1,457 employees and $1,457,119 is paid in salaries and wages. The capital invested amounts to $10,706,677.

Belleville's Annual Payrolls.

The year 1931 has indeed been, to Belleville, a wonder year in the industrial growth of many manufacturing branches of great American industrial corporations.

In the year just past, no less than five of the largest manufacturing organizations in the United States settled upon Belleville as their Canadian home. Two other American corporations have made arrangements with Belleville factories to turn out their varied lines of production. These latter indeed, are, to all intents and purposes, new industries. It is a fair statement to make that our city has practically acquired six American branch industries during the year 1931.

It is considered excellent business at a city of our size and population to acquire an average of one new industry a year, or even one in two years, but six, in one year, form a record so outstanding as almost to surpass belief.

An Impressive List.

Following is a list of the six corporations that have located here during the past twelve months or have made manufacturing arrangements as outlined above.

First, in the year, came Sargent and Company of New Haven, Conn., and formed an amalgamation with Belleville Hardware and Lock Manufacturing Company. The new organization is known as Belleville-Sargent and Company Limited. Sargent and Co. have been in business well on a hundred years at New Haven and have established a reputation for quality and progressive manufacture that is not surpassed.

Swift and Company of Chicago, world's largest packers of meats and dealers in associated lines, after more than two years of the most careful investigation, decided that Belleville was the most favorable location for a plant, to collect poultry and slaughter them and also to collect eggs and manufacture butter. Other activities may be added at time progresses. A most attractive and commanding packing and manufacturing plant has been established on the Canadian National depot. Needless to say, this important plant is considered by experts in the face of the keenest competition upon the best shipping towns and cities in eastern Ontario.

The American Hardware Corporation of New Britain, Conn., also made an exhaustive survey of the Belleville district before they definitely determined to settle at Belleville early spring. The Corporation purchased outright the entire assets of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Co. and at once proceeded to make ready important improvements have been made in the manufacturing equipment. And next spring it is planned to add additions to the buildings that will exceed in capacity the original main building. The American Hardware Corporation is an amalgamation of several huge constituent companies, including such well known names as the P. and F. Corbin Co., the Corbin Screw Corporation Lock Co., the Corbin Screw Co., and the Russell and Erwin Co. Many of the finest structures in New York, such as the Empire State Building and the new Waldorf - Astoria hotel, have used American Hardware Corp. equipment.

The fourth new industry to arrive in Belleville in 1931 was Clark Oster Co., Important manufacturers of furniture hardware. The Clark Oster Co. is in reality a subsidiary of the well-known Stewart-Warner Corporation of Chicago, one of the most aggressive industrial organizations in the United States. The Belleville soundly established here in the manufacturing of the well known Majestic Products and the Stewart-Warner automotive equipment may be expected here whenever normal conditions and activity returns.

As announced in the press a short time ago the Friend Manufacturing Company (1929), Limited, makers of a widely sold line of cooking utensils, have concluded an agreement with the Fruit Machinery Co. of Niagara Falls, whereby the latter manufacture their products. As an extension to the Fruit Machinery building with over 10,000 square feet of floor space, is now well on the way to completion. It is the aim of the company to carry out practically all of the manufacturing operations here as time goes on. The Friend line will form a natural supplement to the Fruit Machinery products, and the Friend sprayers are already far more favorably known here and in Ontario while the Fruit Machinery organization practically monopolize the Canadian market. Mr. Holt, who represented the Friend Co. in the Niagara district, will be associated with Mr. Foley in the local management.

Another corporation to make local manufacturing arrangements is the Noble and Wood Machine Co. of Hoosick Falls, N.Y. The company has an extensive line of pulp and paper-making machinery and has effected an agreement with the Carthage Machine Co. of Canada to manufacture and sell their lines in the Canadian market. This, too, may be expected to add in an important way to local activities as soon as there is reasonable recovery in business.

Local Companies Organized.

Not less welcome than the coming of new enterprises and new capital from another country is the evidence of local confidence and business capacity which result in the establishment of new industries, fostered by local or by Canadian capital. Such an enterprise is the Cooper-Cunningham Milling Company organized by Messrs. Cooper and Cunningham of Bloomfield. Their new building, on Coleman street north, is a busy place and a welcome addition to our industrial wealth.

Growth of Population.

Striking evidence of Belleville's sound business and orderly progress is afforded by the decennial Dominion census taken in 1931. By this census the population was shown to be 13,788 as compared with 12,206 in 1921 and 9,276 in 1911. The annual municipal census taken in 1931 gave the population as 14,050. Had it been for changes at the Canadian National shop and yards, resulting in the transfer or release of several hundred employees our population would have been well on towards the 15,000 mark. Also, if it had not been for the additions to our numbers, brought here by new industries, our city would have suffered a severe decrease in population and in property values because of the change in the railway situation.

An increase of one thousand in population means, on the average, an addition of more than a million dollars to the taxable wealth of any town or city. On the other hand a decrease of one thousand in the population of a city the size of Belleville will reduce real estate and other property values by far more than a million dollars. A couple of hundred vacant dwellings will depress property values to an extent almost unbelievable. Our industrial achievements have not only offset such a possibility but have made up our losses and gone on to show an increase of almost two thousand in our population in the last decade.

Progress In Spite of Depression.

The supreme test of a city is not its buoyancy in a period of prosperity but its resisting power during a time of depression.

Belleville, in common with Canada and with the entire world, has been passing through several years of unexampled business depression. Our citizens have had their difficulties and have been compelled to take measures to correspond with the times.

But we are unable to name any Canadian city that has withstood the accumulating pressure as well as has Belleville. We have had surprisingly few business failures or assignments. Babson's financial reports have given Belleville credit for resisting Belleville among a very few Canadian cities. Our business conditions and selling opportunities have been very favorable as compared with the record of the home-town the face of declining commodity values, and the consequent displacement and worldwide difficulty and disorder.

Building Record Surpassed.

Building statistics form a reliable barometer of general business conditions. Belleville during the building construction in 1931 actually surpassed that of 1930 in point of gain. The figures for the two years are: 1930, $372,200; 1931, $394,221,200. It is highly significant that the total for 1931 was largely made up of the value of new dwelling houses, showing the wide-spread nature of the call, no less than for the homes of attractive design having been erected during the year of depression.

Support of Industrial Activities.

The grateful appreciation of the Chamber of Commerce is due to the City Council for the generous financial support and co-operation in promoting industrial activities, looking to the new acquisition of new manufacturing establishments. The results speak for themselves.

There are few, outside of those closely associated with the work, who can understand or appreciate the intensive nature of the negotiations that must be carried on, extending usually over a period of several months before a new industry decides is finally achieved in the location of a plant. The keen competition between Canadian towns and cities in bidding for new industries has become almost savage in its intensity. Nearly every Canadian city has a live wire industrial development department. The City of Toronto and the Province of Ontario and Quebec provinces maintain staffs of capable and well paid solicitors who are constantly touring the United States and Great Britain and camping right on the trail of prospective new industrial branches.

There are times when it is a fact that industries come by chance and that which might have settled in Belleville—arrived here mainly because they didn't have anywhere else to go. Nothing could be further from the truth. It may positively be asserted that in the majority of cases respecting industry will go to settle in a community where there is found across such effective community organization as a Chamber of Commerce. Nothing would so soon stifle locating in a country grave-yard.

There is also a class of industry, highly speculative in character, that goes out-hunting for concessions and consideration to be solicited to every city, with its gift stock and bonuses. Belleville is not looking after that kind. The Chamber of Commerce has never recommended and the Council elected in any industry and never will unless sound principles are reversed. Our manufacturing enterprises with which our industrial department has been associated in Belleville's location here, have all been independently established and have been effected as

BEAUTY, SENSE, TRIUMPH

Tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day and already the number of the missives usually passing from one person to another at this season of the year have reached their destination. Today's envelopes are of the sensible beautiful variety as contrasted with the low type of valentines which were marred by malice which almost wiped out the name of Valentine in a smudge of vulgarity and cheapness. But now beauty, sentiment and art have taken the place of the anonymous screaming sheet, screaming in its sordidness and in its rough, colorful "joke" valentines are among the most beautiful of the creations of the artist's imagination.

Valentine's Day is of course devoted to the memory of Valentine, a bishop who suffered martydrom under Claudius Second in 270 A.D.

Very often the love and sentiment interest became attached to his name is unknown but St. Valentine's Day today pays its great tribute to lovers. The vulgar sheet, which has almost disappeared, for a time raged but why malice and a distorted sense of humor could not at love but at individualities and peculiarities of persons were ever able to go by the name Valentine seems hard to understand, except that there is always a reverse to the good—in this case to the sentiment of love.

But with the old type of Valentine almost forgotten, all ages can join in the observance of the day for thought and sentiment will not do harm to married or single. Of course particularly the young are the object of attention on February 14th.

It is a pleasure and a sign of healthy age to see sentiment has again overcome the sway to the manufacture of the decorated messages.

GOOD HEALTH FROM SLUMPS

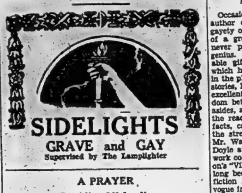
Depression has brought a decrease of twelve per cent in the number of cases of disorders of the digestive system for the first three months of 1931 in the United States as compared with the same period in 1930 and 20 per cent as compared with the first nine months of 1929.

So the falling income is not so bad when it comes a matter of health. Loss of health, even of it at least, is blamable upon the plenty which good times bring. Good times, plenty of food with good and not so good consequences to the system, carelessness in eating, and so on. They march together.

Perhaps a leaner population will grow up as the slump deepens or as its full effects appear if they have not already appeared. After the latter is settled it is difficult to break it all at once. Those who have been forced to eat less will likely continue to eat less until the old custom grows upon them.

No evidence is to hand of reduced circumstances being so marked as to leave a deleterious effect upon the health of the jobless.

WINTER AND UMBRELLA



The present winter has created a demand for the use of the umbrella such as no winter of recent occurence has commanded. It has been accustomed to bearing their faces to the stinging blast of winter's wind, or to the cutting hail that have suffered from the elements. But this winter the innumerable rainfalls have created a precedent. More than half of the precipitation this winter is in the form there can be no doubt of that and so the pedestrian, takes up his umbrella as a guard against the elements. Usually a patter of the rain on the face is less unpleasant than the sting of the driven snow or sleet.

Perhaps it is the desire to keep dry which prompts the use of the umbrella in winter While snow often is of too sticky which wets the clothes, yet more often it does not, but rain always does, and rain can soak clothing while a snow storm will chly leave a few flakes to brush off.

OLD AGE PENSION ABUSES

We are glad to note that Hon. Mr. Martin, acting for the Government, has grasped this abuse with a firm hand, and that he is introducing changes in the system under which the provincial commission will become responsible for all decisions regarding old age pensions.

Some people may raise the old cry of centralization, but it is quite obvious that in this instance at least too much local autonomy has proved unsound and wasteful. The system of old age pensions is defensible in humane considerations. Men and women who have played their part as worthy citizens, and are without means in their old age should be assisted by the state, but it is nothing less than an outrage against the taxpayers in such a time as the present that well-to-do men and women should permit their aged parents to depend on the public treasury for their continued existence. It bears repeating that the action of the Federal Government in assuming 75 per cent. of the cost of old age pensions will save the Provincial Treasury about $1,500,000, and the municipalities of the Province approximately $900,000 a year. A PRAYER
By Aline Michaelis

May I not weary at close of day —
And always my dream
May I find such beauty in sunset's ray
As I knew in the dawning gleam.

My spirit's sword—may it still be keen
To thrust the wrong aside;
May its blade be stainless still, as clean
As in hours of my youth and pride.

May I not yield to a weak regret
For the things that could not be;
May I face the time when the sun will set,
Still confident, tranquil, free.

May I not tire towards the close of day —
This is always my prayer —
Old ships are gallant and old trees gay,
So may I find dusk fair!

SETH PARKER from Jonesport, Maine, and his good neighbors, including Cephus, Lizzie, the Captain, Mrs. Hooper, Ma Parker and Robie, besides Wolfinger, Duffy and Mary Lucy, paid a celluloid visit to Belleville last week and were greeted by nearly three thousand fellow citizens and neighbors from this neck of the woods. Seth swept over the screen like a refreshing spring shower, sweet and clean and fragrant, giving keen enjoyment to the large audiences which filled the Capitol Theatre at each performance. Manager Holmes said that it was the most satisfactory entertainment he had ever produced. The audiences were made up of people of many grades of society as it is theatre and their enjoyment was sincere and plainly-expressed. Nearly four thousand people witnessed the screen reproduction here and an analysis of the audiences showed that many "shutins" who enjoy Seth Parker and His Jonesport Neighbors on the radio made an effort to attend, even wheel chairs of invalids being in evidence. It was generally noticeable, too, that many elderly people were in attendance, and the reason would not be hard to seek. "Seth Parker" scenes and sights at the Jonesport cottage are just reproductions of similar "githerings" held when you and I were young Maggie and the old melodeon was one of the showpieces of the parlor, and the lass who couldn't play Moody and Sankey's gospel hymns was away behind the times. Nowadays parlor organs have been retired and pianos have the place of honor with more Rudee Vallee music in evidence than gospel songs. So it is not strange that Maw and Paw went and enjoyed Seth to the limit while the kids from the outer world else and wondered how the old folks could get enthused over such simple little times and capers. Private change, which whoa! Eldgar Napoleon it looks like rain.

REMEMBER THE COASTING of our youth, the flying bob-sleds, and the hills we used to find, those though traffic was moderately heavy thereon, before the days of motor cars? When traffic on cross streets had to wait for the coasters? And the toboggan slides which came later and were more high-falutin, requiring a special costume and regalia? Remember the girl you thought couldn't leave behind right there with you? Remember the long walks back to the top of the hill or all for the sport of the sport? Say, Now that the millionaires have made winter sports a pastime for the idle rich and a profession for others, we find ourselves forced to note how they take their coasting and tobogganing at Lake Placid, scene of the Olympic contests. Well, they drag the sports and their sleds back to the top with tractors, can you beat that. Remember the Indian's definition of tobogganing, "Zip—walk a mile."

EDGAR WALLACE

Occasionally the death of a minor author does more to "eclipse the gayety of nations" than would that of a great writer. Edgar Wallace never pretended to be a literary genius. Yet he had certain remarkable gifts for the kind of work which he did. Possessed of original ideas in the plots of his countless mystery stories, he also had command of a style which, if it was not one that seldom betrayed into long descriptive sadists, and, while playing fair with the reader in setting forth all the facts, carried him along easily over the stream of his rapid narrative. Mr. Wallace never equaled Conan Doyle at his best, and produced no work comparable in rank with Masters "Villa Rubein," but he has long been identified with a type of fiction which has had enormous vogue in recent years. Many a lesser business man has been sent to prick up his ears and reach out so eager hand when told that another Wallace story was off the press.

While the detective novels and plays which Mr. Wallace poured forth in such astounding volume never attained great distinction, they by no means lacked in skill and numerous and unusual merits. He had a sharp eye and a keen ear, and he was invented him from making mistakes about the people and manners of even the foreigners about whom he wrote. In his knowledge of the underworld of the London kingdom, "On the Spot", there was an almost perfect rendering of its characteristics. He scarce a slip even in the criminal slang encountered in the course of one of his stories was laid in northern New York, and here again he has rarely been could almost never catch this Englishman at fault in either language or attitude. His work was, then, of course, fortunate in falling in with a public ready and appreciative for reading the kind of books he produced. Perhaps he helped to have created the custom. He certainly profited by it. Whether the habit of finding entertainment in stories reading of murder and sudden death persists or will prove a passing fad upon his like again. New York Times.

CUTTING DOWN ARMAMENT

The disarmament problem has been approached from many different angles—political, economic, financial, moral. But it is on all hands acknowledged that the most practical and most pressing factor prompting nations to seek some limitation of their armaments is the case is the crushing cost of this warlike equipment which is accentuated by the unanimous observers not only impotent to yield security and is the most provocative of war, but as absorbing an alarming portion of the national revenues, this draft increasingly as it has done even in times of peace and threatening the people staggering under the burden with bankruptcy.—Montreal Gazette.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S GARDEN

Nearly every Englishman loves a garden, and, like Bacon, he also regards to be Governor-General of Canada, says that he may rise yesterday to tell other gardeners about his affection. Lord Beaborough spoke to the Ontario Horticultural Association about his twings of regret on the day when he left Canada England to come to live in Canada for a few years. "I had the same impendence I receive from home," he said, "more than any other place than the long monthly report that I insist upon my gardener writing to me to report on the state of the garden."

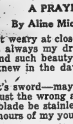
An early English poet once said: "God the first garden made, and the first city Cain." Lord Beaborough probably would echo this sentiment for he knood the wearing effects of populous cities and appreciated to the healing qualities of the gardens. He recommended that the Canadian mans of today to go back to the Govern.

When any of us may be tired, worried, or even discouraged by the troubles of life, we can think which oppress us so threateningly in these solitudes of nature can be no more heartening or pleasant than to listen for a few brief moment from the problems of the gold standard, unemployment, war debts, the Spanish crisis and all the anxieties of the post-war world, and devote our thoughts to the beauty of our gardens.

Lord Beaborough has made many friends since his arrival in praise of the finer things of life, and so no time has he dealt more appropriately than in one of them than in his little talk on the rare satisfactions to be derived from gardens.—Toronto Globe.

Canada Recalls Cruise Destroyers, No Reason Offered

Victoria, Feb. 13.—The Wise Indies cruise of the Canadian destroyers Skeena and Vancouver of the Esquimalt naval station has been cancelled, and the ships will return to their base in Esquimalt harbor on March 15, the naval staff at Ottawa advised the Royal Canadian naval barracks here.



No reason was given for the cancellation of the tour, but it is thought that it is in keeping with a policy of economy.

But so it is with all emotional states. All tend to defy analysis and become most elusive when attempt is made to pin them down. Despite our conscience, we feel it, we know it is a motivating as well as inhibiting force within us. Further than that it is practically impossible to go.

Nevertheless when we examine the sexes with regard to conscience we find that both possess it but that in each it develops in a different way.

Undoubtedly conscience gradually comes into being in the male through a series of logical deductions and the accretion over a long period of the reasoning powers. Egotist that he is even from boyhood, man soon runs into the habit of thinking out various courses of action which will bring him the greatest to his benefits while at the same time abandoning ideas which are likely to harm him.

Or putting it another way, man soon learns from experience and reasoning that doing right to others brings returns which are highly profitable from these others; that living morally benefits him in the long run, and in short that it pays to be good. Man's nature is not impulsive, nor intuitive, but rather reasoning. He thinks everything out and is likely to be cold, calculating and unemotional. What he, always considers is the common good because in the long run it is from this our happiness and well-being are inseparably linked up with common good. Man's conscience, therefore, has a perspective which makes it, for the most part, what is doing wrong nor will he condone such wrong in himself. He is intellectually honest.

The male conscience and reasoning are therefore conservative forces.

Not so with the female, however. In her conscience enters the sex spring from logic and reasoning, finally developing habits of behavior that become automatic. Emotion is what engenders woman's conscience. And emotion, whether it be love, hate, sentiment, remorse, suffering, pleasure, pain, or what not, is always centered into a whole, a concept, which, in addition to being operative a guiding principle of living.

So we find that the operation of woman's conscience does not refer to the same results as when it operates in man.

A man, for instance, will readily admit that he has done wrong and immoral act let us say, at variance with accepted standards, these latter he has been adopted as his own, meaning "the greatest good to the greatest number." Similarly, with woman, whose conscience is based upon her feelings and is therefore much more personal in character, argue her conscience tells her that her wrong act was justifiable. Whilst conscience makes man admit his wrong, woman's conscience, even an will make even virtues out of her wrong. Thus she seeks to strengthen her conviction that her emotionally response was exactly what it should have been.

Railway Tracks Are Covered at Galt

Galt, Ont., Feb. 13.—The fourth flood this winter on the Grand River occurred early this morning, with the water reaching the high mark this winter.

As a result of yesterday's heavy rains, the water rose gradually but steadily and by noon o'clock six inches of ice on the dam here broke. The ice floes, steadily moving down the River, the highway and C.N.R. tracks were flooded.

Man's nature is not impulsive, nor intuitive, but rather reasoning. He thinks everything out and is likely to be cold, calculating and unemotional. What he, always considers is the common good because in the long run it is from this our happiness and well-being are inseparably linked up with common good. Man's conscience, therefore, has a perspective which makes it, for the most part, what is doing wrong nor will he condone such wrong in himself. He is intellectually honest.

The male conscience and reasoning are therefore conservative forces.

Not so with the female, however. In her conscience enters the sex spring from logic and reasoning, finally developing habits of behavior that become automatic. Emotion is what engenders woman's conscience. And emotion, whether it be love, hate, sentiment, remorse, suffering, pleasure, pain, or what not, is always centered into a whole, a concept, which, in addition to being operative a guiding principle of living.

So we find that the operation of woman's conscience does not refer to the same results as when it operates in man.

A man, for instance, will readily admit that he has done wrong and immoral act let us say, at variance with accepted standards, these latter he has been adopted as his own, meaning "the greatest good to the greatest number." Similarly, with woman, whose conscience is based upon her feelings and is therefore much more personal in character, argue her conscience tells her that her wrong act was justifiable. Whilst conscience makes man admit his wrong, woman's conscience, even an will make even virtues out of her wrong. Thus she seeks to strengthen her conviction that her emotionally response was exactly what it should have been.

And he worked out and kept on going wherever he was going, and Pudd got on the scale and the fat post again, Mr. Wise looking after us shaking his head to himself.

TERSE TALKS on TIMELY TOPICS by

Sam Dobb's Little Plumber

Friends:

Not long ago I saked a young lady friend of mine whether she was going to a party. She said, "I don't know whether I will or not. I have nothing to wear." When I got to the party she was about the best person I met. "Well," I says, "I see you came, and that you have nothing to wear."

Women are funny that way about clothes. They want so few clothes as possible, and lots of them. They think it's the fun of women to wear a nice dress somewhere, but that she ought to get life for a second offense. It's a dress one week, and a disgrace the next.

Now, men are different. When I'm invited out, I not only have something to wear, but I have it on. In fact, my tailor comes to at the party and says, "Harry, that suit certainly wears like iron. I'm pleased all over. It shows that I know something about making out clothes.

Of course, I say modestly, "Yes, it does like iron, and looks like it." But I feel complimented but the same like iron. And I know a nice piece of woolen when I see it, although, I don't. But if anybody told my wife or daughter that a dress of theirs wore like iron, they'd pass out.

I don't know what we are going to do with those women. They took only want all new clothes themselves, but they want us men most to have any old ones. They're put a curse on anything comfortable. Mother will throw out the pipe something broke in, they break out.

Now, I got a suit that I've fished, and hunted in for five years, and I'm not going to wear in when I didn't make my getaway quick enough. But every time I put it on there's a riot. My wife says she's going to burn it up. Fine thing, when a man has to put his old clothes in a fire safety deposit.

I see some of the women have taken to smoking. But I know this: No woman will ever get me to like smoking a pipe. About the time she begins to get a color on it, she knocks the ashes out, and then it doesn't begin to taste good until it begins to smell bad. Women don't understand such things.

They do understand and appreciate a good plumbing job. Our work lasts so much longer than others she calls us right off. Which is all right with me, of course.

Yours faithfully,

GARN DOBBS.

THE GAME

A bunch of the boys from the Lime- stone burg
Came up to the Belleville Arena;
With a flash and a dash and a flourish of speed
They entered the game so keena.

Up at one end stood the goal ten- der Morris—
With his eyes on the ice before him
And out in the centre stood big Barney Reid,
With a look on his face of boredom.

The lights went on—the puck was thrown,
And ten skates skidded in a glitter;
A flash of speed—Scott scored the goal...
My gahd how that crowd did titter.

I ducked my head—again ye scor- ed...
In the net that Morris had holds- ing..
"Take that....and that.." the lo- cals cried.....
They thought they could play— but we showed Blake

The lights went on for the final frame—
Two sticks stabbed in the glare.
Another long shot that was stealing across the ice—
It was more than Kingston could bear.

Now I'm not so much at such sport and stuff,
Or as wise as some in the bleach- ers,
But I'll bet my poke...and that's no joke...
That Kingston feels blue, by jeepers.

A. B. COLLINS PRESIDENT OF BALL CLUB

Enthusiastic Meeting Held in "Y" at Which Club is Organized

MANY PRESENT

C.O.B.L. Assured of at Least Four Teams and Possibly Five

A. B. Collins, K.C., was unanimously elected president of the Belleville Baseball Club for the year 1932 at the largest gathering of baseball enthusiasts ever seen in the City of Belleville, Friday night, at the local Y.M.C.A.

Representatives from ever walk of life in the city, business men, play- ers, professional men and citizens in general were present. The meeting was of a wide open nature and every one present was called upon to voice their views and ideas with the result, the many excellent ideas and suggestions which were heard throughout the night's meeting.

Club Organized

In the absence of President Pratt, Mr. A. B. Collins, 1st Vice-President assumed the chair and called the meeting to order when over an en- thusiastic baseball men were gath- ered for the betterment of baseball in Belleville. Mr. Collins welcomed all to the meeting and called upon Mr. Ernie Collins, secretary of the Central Ontario Baseball League to report on the meeting he had done at the recent league meet- ing in Cobourg, when the league was formed. Mr. Collins in re- gaining the Central League to its former standing, briefly stated that on behalf of the league, he had received offers from Port Hope, Peterboro, Cobourg and Kingston would be entered in the league and shooting for the pennant. There is no doubt that Oshawa would be rep- resented in the C.O.B.L. Mayor Gerow and W. J. (Penny) Mills as representatives of the Oshawa boys were very enthusiastic and in the course of their remarks stressed upon the meeting the fact that other towns were very enthusiastic and in the C.O.B.L. for 1932.

Baseball Needed in City

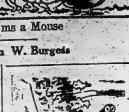
Reddy Claims a Mouse

By Thornton W. Burgess

Be sure that what you claim you own,
And that the claim is yours alone.
Old Mother Nature.



It was dusk. Reddy Fox was moving, soft of foot, silently along one of the old cow paths in the Old Pasture. His black, pointed ears were set to catch every faintest sound. With keen eyes he searched among the bushes for the least movement that a wandering Little Breeze would not account for. His wonderful nose constantly tasting the air for scents that might lead to a good meal, or even a good mouthful. In these hard times Reddy was thankful even, for crumbs.

Reddy was not in the best of temper. The temper of one who is hungry is likely not to be one of the best, and Reddy was hungry. The hunting, never too good since the heavy snows, had been even worse of late, and Reddy was sure he knew the reason why.

"It is because of those two Owls with the silly faces," he muttered. Of course he meant Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face and the Barn Owls. "Some people never do know enough to stay where they belong. These Owls never have been here before and none of their family has been here. They have no right hunting here. If ever I have a chance to catch that Monkey-face he will wish he had remained where he belongs."

These pleasant thoughts were interrupted by the faintest of squeaks. You wouldn't have heard it. I wouldn't have heard it. But Reddy heard it. Instantly he stopped, one foot lifted in an unfinished step, his sharp ears cocked forward among the bushes, breathing so lightly that he had been walking on eggshells not one would have cracked more. A little Night Breeze tickled his nose with a warm scent that made Reddy quiver all over with eagerness and longing: it was the scent of Mice. Not of one Mouse, but of two.

Taking advantage of every turn and clump of grass and shadow, Reddy crept forward until at last he could see those Mice. They appeared to disagree about something for there was a sharp angry squeak and then one disappeared down a hole in the snow. The other ran to the top of a weed that projected above the snow and began to gather seeds that it still contained. Reddy moved forward quickly but cautiously and set himself for the spring that would make that Mouse his.

"Robber! Thief! That is my Mouse" he screamed.

It was just then, at the very instant he felt that that Mouse was as good as his, that a shadow soundlessly but swiftly passed over him; there was a sharp squeak, and there on the very spot where that Mouse should have been stood Monkey-face the Barn Owl. He picked up the Mouse and then turned his big head and glared at Reddy as much as to say, "How about it? What have you to say?"

Reddy had plenty to say. Yes, indeed, he had plenty to say. "Robber! Thief! That is my Mouse!" he screamed.

Monkey-face gulped a couple of times, and the Mouse disappeared "Come and get it" he hissed, and that his didn't have a pleasant sound at all. "Never claim a thing until it is yours to claim," continued Monkey-face.

"But it was mine I saw it first and you stole it from under my very nose," declared Reddy angrily. "I'll show you that you can't steal from me like that and get away with it! I'll show you!"

With this Reddy hurled himself on Monkey-face, aiming to set his

DEAF AND DUMB GIRL AWARDED FRENCH DEGREE

First Instance of Kind in The History of The Sorbonne

Paris, Feb. 11. — Overcoming the handicap of being deaf and dumb since she was 12, Mlle. Suzanne Lafond, 28, has just been awarded a doctorate degree from the Sorbonne.

This is the first time that such a thing has occurred in the 700 years' history of the institution. Mlle. Lafond, the daughter of the director of the Lycee Victor-Duruy, was a great encouragement to her daughter in helping to prepare for the honor she has just received.

"Useful to Science"

"I know that with my handicap I cannot become a teacher," she said after she had passed her examination, "but I may be very useful in a library."

Her examiners were Professor Cazlle, Professor Baldensperger, and her thesis was the work of her "Master Lenerri and Her Times."

"I understand M. Mornet better than others," she said, "for I might was better on his face and I could see what his lips said," she remarked.

Measles Caused Affliction.

Mlle. Lafond's affliction of speech and hearing after an attack of measles when she was two years old, necessitating lip-reading and the more difficult practice of making intelligible sounds herself, her education began along much the same lines as that used by Helen Keller. Her examination was oral, and the voice instrument which she conveyed the life story of Marie Lenerz, a born deaf mute, who succeeded in having her plays produced at the Odeon and the Theatre Francais, was entirely subservient to her own use. It was rather colorless and mechanical but distinctly audible.

She gives spirited answers to the questions put to her, and in her examination her daughter's fellow spouses, her mother, Mme. Lavaud applauded several times with the others who were astounded at her alertness.

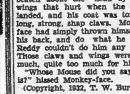
Like Helen Keller, she enjoys music and poetry from their sense of rhythm, although she is unable to distinguish actual sounds.

Women of India Ready to Share In Government

MADRAS—Strong proofs of the growing sense of responsibility among the women of this province were revealed at the All-India Women's Conference and All-India Women's Missions and reports presented indicate that Indian women are playing a prominent part in obtaining the emancipation of their sex from traditions and customs which have operated to their disadvantage for centuries.

This was emphasized by Rance Rajwadi, secretary of the organization, in her annual report. She cited the part women had taken in the Round Table Conference when pressure exerted by them resulted in their representation in the future. She also pointed out how they submitted a memorandum in which practically all constituencies in connection with the franchise for adult franchise for women.

teeth in that throat down which that Mouse had but just disappeared. But the best he could do was to get a mouthful of feathers with all the same time he was beaten about the head by stout wings that hurt when the blows landed, and his coat was torn by long, strong, sharp claws. Monkey-face had always been himself on his back, and do what he would Reddy couldn't get his any harm. Those claws and wings were too much, quite too much for him.



"Whose Mouse did you say that is?" hissed Monkey-face.

Energizing Foods Erase That Fagged Look

"Swamped!" growled a woman, when she "swamped is how I feel and can't do a thing. I look like a wreck. Life has me on the run and I'm all wore out. Not even work, I know what I'm doing; don't try to correct me. I crawl out of bed, I tear around all day, I crawl into bed again. I'm as tired as an old dog at the time."

How many women bawl around like that? Thousands of them. How do they do it? Keep dragging up of a hard winter. Shoulders pushed forward, they drag through the day's activities, carrying the hod up the ladder. Some of them are beautiful women, some of them are beating it back and forth from shop or office.

What's the matter with them? They need good grub. They're starving up energy and not building any. Some of them run a business without a lot of one kind or another and you can't work the human machine like a plough horse and drive it and expect to work on. The majority of these girls who drag around with faces that look stricken—actually stricken—have an idea that you can go on living and working without giving any special attention. It can't be done, vimmin, that's all there is.

You see this type of woman, it she's a wage earner—sits at the drug store lunch counter choking down a sandwich and tired and fat as four o'clock she's sunk. Head aches. She feels as if she has been kicked in the stomach. Oh what's the use?

Every reader of health notes or beauty preachments has heard about the balanced diet, but it is doubtful if women in general know exactly what that means. One wonders how many of the sisters follow instructions advanced by the medical profession.

Sticking the rules isn't a pastime, but it is something that most aren't bothered about. Of all classes the tired women, working beyond her reserve of energy, needs to consider the question of food.

She needs proteins, such as meat, fish, poultry and eggs. Starting the day with a full glass of orange juice, coffee, toast and two eggs will give her something with which to get up steam for the old job. No heavy foods for luncheon, but plenty of vegetables, a green salad and perhaps a dish of cooked foods. Butter and cream supply the necessary fats.

A chocolate bar, eaten in the middle of the afternoon, will contribute a bit of solace to digestive organs.

Dinner must be taken leisurely, slowly, cheerfully. Traveling along the treadmill during the day, and hauling one's bank account of energy, there must be quiet and relaxation during evening hours. So many hours of work, so many hours of play, so many hours of sleep. Those are the rules of health, and you break them at the peril of your precious system and precious evidences of youth. Don't be a slave to overhanging or jealously and eagerly.

The proper food is of greatest importance.

LIBRARY CORNER

Frank Harris' unauthorized biography "Bernard Shaw", based on first hand information with letters, manscripts and letter by Mr. Shaw, is one of the new books in the Library this week. The book is not only a biography but a record of the friendship between Harris, himself a writer of note and Shaw—a result of the association of two men of personality with another. A strange fate left Shaw to edit the proof sheets of a book which set out to treat him frankly and unsparingly, for Frank Harris died a few weeks after the completion of the book, in August 1931. Harris sums up Shaw as "Not an original thinker, not a great dramatist, Shaw will live four ages as a personality. So he comes to the end, a Puritan rebel who insulted his times and was well paid for it." Shaw comments on Harris: "Frank, too, was a man of violent revisions, unreasonable expectations, fierce appetites. His hardly-won exaggeration to say that he ultimately quarrelled with everybody but Shakespeare; and this book contains several attempts to quarrel with me."

A number of Aldous Huxley's witty cynicisms have been collected in his volume "Music at night, and other essays." Alternately amusing a derisive icons and a serious attitude his essays include Art and the obvious, Sermons on cats, Selected anecdotes, Vulgarity and literature, Forehead villainous low, The beauty industry, Meditations on the moon. It is interesting to compare Huxley's essay "Sermons on cats" with Hilaire Belloc's "Conversation with a cat", in his new book of the same name.

The author states that most people were surprised when the revolution in Spain whereas the re-establishment of a republic was the logical culmination of a development that had proceeded in Spain for more than a century. Military Touch To Paris Styles

PARIS — Women like uniforms, proverbially, and now they may have military touch in their own clothes, as evidenced by Worth's spring styles.

Cherrons, braids and frogs have been added by Worth to the already popular epaulet mode. Double buttons and chain trims carry the effect still further.

Lines of the spring clothes shown by Worth match the new trimmings, for broader shoulders are common, military, and the slimmer skirts give the super-filled-in appearance to the lower part of the figure.

Evening skirts are narrow, as with the daytime frocks, and some are designed with ruffles and bias. Worth uses some trains, and continues to show the ruffled skirts.

Tailored spring suits have very wide sleeves, embroidered in angora wool. For day wear, there are many bolero short jacket suits, some with contrasting jackets.

Henry, wife of Ontario's Premier, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Speaker's Chambers at the Parliament Buildings for the wives of the Cabinet Ministers and the Legislative members. Lovely bouquets of spring flowers, potted plants, and ferns decorated the attractive drawing room where Mrs. Henry received her guests, and the long horseshoe table in the dining room was also gay with sunny daffodils, iris and freesia. Mrs. Henry received her gown of midnight blue, with sleeves embroidered in Burgundy, and lacquer red, which was finished with small straw hat to match. Among the guests were Mrs. W. H. Ireland, Trenton, who wore cherry colored crepe with black lace; Mrs. J. F. Hill, Shannonville and Mrs. C. W. Hambly, Napanee.

Mrs. Robert Ekelin, of Ottawa, who has been the guest of Mrs. F. F. Bryson, Bridge street east, has returned to her home in the capital of the city. Among those who have entertained for Mrs. Ekelin were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ryan, who gave a dinner party in her honour, Mrs. Fred Sexton, a tea, Mrs. Gillen, a tea, Mrs. S. D. Lazier, a luncheon, Mrs. R. H. Bryson, a luncheon and a bridge party yesterday for her guest.

Mrs. H. F. Bryson was hostess at a smart dance last evening at the Hotel Quinte at which about twenty-five guests were present. The dance was in honour of her guest Mrs. Fred Sexton of Ottawa, and for Mrs. Bryson's godchildren, Miss Isabel Reid and Miss Virginia Lewis, who received with her. A profusion of bright flowers were used in decorations of the ball room and dining room of the hotel, where the dance was held. A charming feature was the lovely buffet centre-piece of gay Spring flowers. Ab Adams' Comedonians provided an excellent dance programme for the enjoyable affair.

SUITS FAVORED BY DESIGNERS

PARIS—Spring costumes may be silk or wool, plain or trimmed, but a large percentage of the time they will be suits.

Silk suits are especially popular, and are shown by Jacques Heim, Chantal, Miranda and Lanvin. Paton varies the silk suit with a fine wool jersey, and also adopts the bolero suit in linen. Two-piece suits with short, semi-flared skirts are featured in Augustaberard's collection. Very plain tailored suits are used by Vionnet.

While shantung ensemble is sponsored by Lanvin, as well as many ensemble coats in three-quarter length, of printed chiffon. Wool coat ensembles are found among Schiaparelli models, and Jenny shows print ensembles with a chiffon dress and a crepe coat of the same pattern.

Coats have many kinds of treatment. Elbow sleeves are worn with long sleeved dresses, coats with Dolman sleeves, coats with flaring collars are among the throng. Cape sleeves detail are very popular. Flat circular coats, often belted, are used by Lanvin, as well as coats with very large sleeves above the elbow.

Fashion Fancies

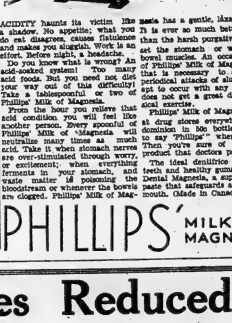
STAR DUSTY in the form of tiny sequins is one of the latest patterns for beaded evening frocks. It is used with great success with the dots picked out in fine sequins the prescent size on a deep blue chiffon background.

CUT OUT the printed dot designs from that the cut-out dots have received. An afternoon frock of dark blue woolen is patterned with large cut-out dots which shows a light blue foundation beneath. The dots are embroidered in medium blue to match the suede belt.

WELCOME BACK to the sequin embroidered lace frock that is making its re-entry after an absence of some seasons. A pale green lace evening frock is entirely embroidered with motifs of silver sequins. The skirt has triple flounces. There is a dark green velvet girdle.

UNDER COVER is the watchword for shoulders these nights since evening frocks with tiny sleeves are fashionable. Charming is dance frock of dark brown fine silk lace with a decollete binding and girdle of coral velvet ribbon. There are tiny ruffled sleeves and the skirt has flounces tier of ruffles in inverted imitation.



OLD FASHIONS ARE NEW this season. And so a warm welcome is predicted for old style jewelry. A new set consists of necklace, a two-strand bracelet and earrings. It is done in gold link chains with new fashion motifs. These motifs are of petit point embroidery done in soft colors and set under crystal with a gold setting with a ring of tiny gold beads and a design of scalloped diamonds.

PLEASANT EVENINGS mean smart informal dinner frocks. Charming is a model done in black crepe with sleeves of silver mesh and a mesh belt. The skirt uses inverted pleats.

HEADACHES caused by ACIDITY

ACIDITY haunts its victim like a shadow. No appetite; what you eat sours, gases, causes flatulence and makes you sluggish. Work is an effort. Before night, a headache.

Do you know what is wrong? An acid-sodden stomach! Too many foods. But you need not diet your way out of this difficulty! Take a tablespoonful or two of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

From the hour you relieve that acid condition you will feel like another person. Every spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia will neutralize many times its own bulk. Then it when stomach nerves are over-stimulated through worry, or excitement; when everything ferments in your stomach, and you're inclined to poisoning the bloodstream or whenever the bowels are clogged. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia has a gentle, laxative action. It is ever so much better for you than harsh purgatives that upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. An occasional dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is all that is necessary to avoid those periodical attacks of sluggishness and spit to occur with any person who does not eat a great deal of physical exercise.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is sold at drug stores everywhere in the dominion in 50c bottles. Be sure you get genuine Phillips' now. Then you're sure of getting the product that doctors prescribe.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior tooth paste that safeguards against acid mouth. (Made in Canada).

GG PRICES QUICKLY RISE

tart at 18 Cents Dozen and Close at 24 Cents

At the opening of the market, the prevailing price of last week, which was 18c a dozen was in vogue but before 11 a.m. the price had rapidly risen to 24 cents a dozen, and remained there for just at present is no doubt accountable for the sudden trend in the price of eggs. A few ducks were seen on the market at 25c a pound. The outside market was a small one of indeed. All Issues Zooma Upward Greeting Proposal of Friday By Govt.

New York, N.Y., Feb. 13— Stocks moved upward in one of the most spectacular rebounds of the past two years today.

The abrupt upturn which greeted the proposal to increase the flexibility of the Federal Reserve system on Thursday, was resumed at a swifter pace after yesterday's holiday, as buying orders swept into the market in the first hour from a little panic all their own.

Initial gains were the advance, which carried many stocks 10 to more than 20 points above their lows of last Wednesday, was readily absorbed and climbing quotations were soon near the peaks, although there was some recession in the final dealings. Net gains ranged from about 2 to 15 points. The turnover was around 2,500,000 shares, the largest for a Saturday session in recent months.

The ticker fell behind trading, and it was found necessary to omit the volume of individual transactions to keep with transactions on the floor, which was 2,000,000 in the last few minutes. However, at the last count of reps the day's best prices.

Improved Export Shipments Bring More Friendly Sentiment

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 13.— (Canadian Press) — Generally improved export shipments brought out a more friendly sentiment in the Winnipeg Grain Market this week, and at the close of the week wheat prices had gained from 1 to 2 1-8 cents over the previous six day period. Trading throughout the week was fairly active, with good purchases by outside interests indicating a note of optimism in the pit.

At the close Friday May and July deliveries each had added 1 1-4 cents for the week at 64 and 65 1-2 respectively; October gained 1 3-8 cents to finish at 67 cents.

Strength in security markets in the latter part of the week also aided the Winnipeg Mart to maintain higher levels, and enabled prices to hold unchanged on days when export demand eased off.

Notice to Investors

We execute orders to buy and sell stocks on all exchanges exactly as we have always done, and through the same connections. We have however, discontinued our private wire service, as conditions do not warrant same nor day to day price changes of sufficient moment. Neither do we wish to carry Margin Accounts.

In the meantime we advise the purchase of Government and High Grade Municipal Bonds, because in our opinion, there can be no stock movement of any consequence, and no return of prosperity, without good bonds firming up considerably first. Twelve months time enough to see which industrial concerns have best withstood the stress of this period of unprecedented deflation. Many of them will not be able to.

Our Stock and Bond connections are with the most reliable houses, who have been in business for many years. We have their daily information and advice, and are glad to pass this on to you for the asking. We will be taking part in all reliable Bond issues, as they are announced in the press. Clients should telephone their orders, at our expense, and every care will be taken to have them executed promptly.

World Day Prayer Service is Held

St. Andrew's Hall is Crowded At Observance in Belleville

A service observing the World Day of Prayer was held on Friday afternoon at the Old St. Hall of St. Andrew's Church, with an attendance that completely filled the hall, ladies of all sister churches through out the city taking part. Mrs. (Dr.) Seymour presided at the organ. Mrs. Fleming played very softly "Jesus Calls Us" by Mrs. Seymour. Seymour read a number of Biblical quotations very appropriate, and also stressed the power of women throughout the world. Singing in which all took part was followed by silent prayer and meditation. A hymn suitable to the occasion was sung very sweetly by Mrs. (Dr.) Seymour. Prayers were offered for China, Japan, Korea, India, Africa, Canada, Europe North and South America, by representatives from the various churches. Scripture promises were read in unison; a hymn was sung entitled "Prayer is not soul's sincere desire", Soft music was rendered while the audience prayed for the spread of the Gospel in all lands. Prayer in the form of a hymn was sweetly sung by Mrs. Seymour, and prayer was offered for His Majesty, the King, the Empire, Canada, the Peace and Disarmament Conference and for all who are passing through difficult times, in this and other countries for those whose future and livelihood are uncertain and for those who cannot obtain work; that we may strive to bear one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. Arrangements were then made for holding weekly services during Lent. A hymn and a dismissal prayer by Rev. Seymour brought this solemn service to a close.

ENJOY TOUR THRU SOUTH

Belleville Boys Report Fine Time in Florida

Mr. E. T. Cherry of this city was recipient of a letter from his son Arnold, who arrived in Florida, by motor, last week, stating that the sun was shining very brightly and it was quite warm down there at present.

About two weeks ago Arnold Cherry and Grover Roberts, both ex-Belleville boys started by motor car, for the sunny south. They made the trip, as planned, down through the eastern states and are at present enjoying the summer-like weather in and around Miami Florida. The boys planned everything before hand on the budget plan and, the trip cost them exactly $8.00 more than they anticipated. One of the strange-est coincidences that the boys en-countered was the fact that the farther south they reached the dear-er everything got. To be exact the price of gas jumped one cent every time they crossed a state-line on their journey southward.

The boys report that food-stuffs are quite reasonable in the south right now. Oranges sell for three dozen for 25 cents, grapefruit one cent each and tomatoes, fresh, 10 cents a pound. The boys are enjoying themselves to the utmost and have participated in deep-sea fishing and swimming. Mr. May or Jimmie Walker, of New York City, was at one of the Miami horse races in Miami. The boys were loud in their praises of the south as well as they say, that it is a very exciting pastime.

The last took a tent along with them and are travelling in modern tourist fashion, with their tent-home. Both boys were high in their praises of the beautiful orange blossom flowers which is so prevalent in the many large and beautiful buildings and residences in Florida.

They intend returning home by way of the Atlantic sea-board and Cincinnati to Detroit where they will visit friends before returning home next month.

Dawes president of the Canadian Racing Association, and moving spirit in the Montreal Jockey stable, which is headed by the fine stake-horse Mavis-rine, was selling out the stock of his local institution, and intended to lay racing circles as to whether the Blue Bonnet Track would be operated in the coming season.

Mr. Dawes has expressed a wish to retire from all active participation in racing for the period of his tenure, and as he was prominent in the conduct of the Hometown for the past two seasons, it is believed today that he may also discontinue his connection with Blue Bonnet, a minor race-track, which has been a lasting proposition the past two seasons.

FIVE-STAR CAST IN NEW PARAMOUNT HIT AT BELLE

Each lady attending the Belle on Monday evening will be presented with a Rose Dressertrix gift and the management announces that it will be a surprise gift, one that has not been displayed in the foyer of the theatre and that each lady will be delighted to add to her Dresserure gifts. Frankly, the article seems more to manicure than many of the larger articles, and announcement is made that only one gift to each lady will be the gift, and the gift cannot be purchased separately.

"This Reckless Age," the feature picture on Monday, matinee daily in Paramount's filmization of Lewis Beach's stage success "Spring Cleaning Hangs High." It is a sentimental comedy drama of parents who have dedicated their lives to supplying their wants of their children, who in turn, following the "jazz" trend of this reckless age, give slight consideration to the gruelling self-denial of their parents.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Peggy Shannon, Richard Bendell, Charlie Ruggles, Frances Dee and Ramon Novarro play the featured roles, supported by a cast of exceptional talent.

The screen play of "This Reckless Age" was prepared by Henry Myers, Frank Tuttle, director of "Dude Ranch," "It Pays to Advertise," "Beretle" and others, directed the production.

"This Reckless Age," under its stage title, was one of the most successful of the heart-throb comedy dramas.

Rogers also played in "Working Girls" on the screen, while Miss Shannon completed four leading film roles in the past five months, "The Secret Call," "Silence," "The Road to Reno" and "Touchdown."

Kari Dane and George Arthur in a clever comedy titled "Shove Off", a Mack Sennett production, the popular Sound-News, and "He Man Hock-ey," an entertaining Sportlight reel will be exhibited on the same program.

Marie Dressler as "Emma," on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, closes a record breaking engagement at the Belle tonight. Marie Dressler gives to the screen another of those brilliant characterizations which first established Ringgen Min she presented comedy to play Martha in "Min and Bill" won her the Academy Award for the outstanding feminine performance of 1931.

SEEK REWARD

Richard Cromwell, Joan Marsh and Jack Holt, in scene from "Marker of Men" now at the Capitol.

At The Capitol

"MARKER OF MEN" IS FULL OF THRILLS
AND HEART THROB

Everyone who has ever felt their heart throbbing in their throats or a shuddering chill creep up their spine with fear—and every person has had that at the man who denies fear is a falsifier—will understand and sympathize with the last two particular problems are the subject of the thrilling drama of youth "Marker of Men", opening to-day at the Capitol theatre where it continues until Tuesday night.

Jack Holt is starred with Richard Cromwell and Joan Marsh in the story. The story is chiefly concerned with Holt as the father and Cromwell as the son—or, Holt as the "maker of men" through college athletic coach. Whose slogan for human behavior was "loyalty and courage" and Cromwell as the boy who wouldn't take physical punishment.

The story is full of heart throb—the boy doing a thing he hates and despises, through a thing that is quite indescribable terror, just because when he was a boy to the coach he troubled on id a wise, understanding father, he meets only the hard logic of a coach whose instructions for his team are wrapped up in the determination to make a team star of his son, no matter how hard it hurts the boy.

Richard Cromwell is a lad to keep your eye on. Though a beginner he gives a splendid account of a role that calls for the greatest histrionic skill. Jack Holt has a fighting, he-man role all his fats will appreciate. Joan Marsh supplies the heart interest most enchantingly and the rest of the cast is flawless. Edward Sedgwick's direction piles the thrills high and handsome. The story has been cleverly prepared to make a heart-tugging drama, rib-tickling laughs and spine-tingling thrills by Howard J. Green and Edward Sedgwick.

Andy Clyde in "Shopping Wither" a very funny comedy, and the News completes the programme.

The "Pie-Eating Contest" fued for 9 p.m. on Sunday night, has caused widespread comment. Great fun and a great crowd are expected to witness this amusing novelty.

Gallant 42nd Battalion C.E.F. Has Notable Record

Regiment Mobilized in Montreal Served Country Well

DECORATIONS

(Written for The Canadian Press by J. F. B. Livesay)

Toronto, Ont.—Of the 48 infantry battalions comprised in the Canadian Corps a scant dozen have published their narratives of regimental histories. The latest result is "the 42nd Battalion, C. E. F., Royal Highlanders of Canada, in the Great War," a handsome volume of 500 documented pages, with 32 pieces adequately illustrated by maps, as well as by photographs and two admirable drawings by Lieut. Sherriff Scott, in reflex of great credit to the author, Lt. Col. C. Bernard Topp, D.S.O., M.C., and his associates. The book, in fact is quite the best of these battalion narratives to date, though it has the serious fault of lacking an index essential for cross reference in such a work.

In reading this and all similar accounts one is continuously tempted to check up the narrative by reference to the standard works of history. But here is a sad disappointment. The four volume official history, "The Medical Services," by Sir Andrew Macphail was published in 1924. In the preface he stated: "The Historical Section of the Canadian General Staff has been reorganized in June 1921. It was created for the purpose of the task of collecting and safeguarding all papers concerning the Canadian Forces in the years 1914-1919 and with the reduction of the main Canadian Army, the compilation of history for official publication. The work of the Historical Section thus far has been assembled and classified, much is still to be collected. Maps which form basis of the design have been compiled from information in the possession of completed from the testimony of officers who took part in the operations. Some of the volumes will be devoted to particular army, corps, divisional and unit operations. Some of the volumes will be based on official documents. Maps sufficient for the general reader will be published in text, detailed maps issued separately will provide for the requirements of the student. The present book is the first of the series."

Only One Volume

Such was the ambitious design, worthy of the Canadian Corps. But since then not a single volume has been published. It is another unfortunate story of affairs. Most of the enlightened are well on the way to the completion of their war histories, but Canada, whose case is paralleled to our own, on making a particularly good job of it with columns of interesting reminiscing Anzac in Gallipoli and the Australian Corps in France, but Canada we have not even produced the official narrative of Second battle of Ypres, 1915. Why? Is it politics? "The Medical Services," good book though it is, is somewhat of a misnomer when it came out in 1924. Is it possible that Canada's politicians of Ottawa have thought it inexpedient to let the people of Canada learn the truth of what happened in France and Flanders; that heroic story recounding in the blood and valor of this country?

The modern narrative such as this is necessarily limited in its scope. Books of this sort are dear to their friends and to military students, but the young generation, with its natural curiosity about the nation's part in the Great War, cannot be called the elaborate narrative and balanced accounts of those who took part in it. It is not only of our youth and a wrong to our dead, but to Canada herself.

To return to the 42nd. The Royal Highlanders of Canada were organized in Montreal in 1914, thus being senior of all Canadian Highland battalions and became affiliated with the Black Watch. The regiment gave birth to infantry battalions of the Canadian Corps: 13th Battalion, which sailed with the First Contingent and won imperishable fame in the first gas attack at Ypres, April 1915; the subject of this narrative; and the 73rd which went to France with the 4th Canadian Division. A very interesting account is here given of the training of the 42nd in England and France, where it arrived October, 1915, joining the 7th Brigade of the 2nd Canadian Division.

Six months trench warfare fitted the battalion for its first great trial officially called the Battle of Mount Sorrel, but better known in the Canadian Corps as the June Show of 1916. Nothing could be clearer nor more vivid than this narrative of the remarkable defensive stand of the battalion—or rather of its four isolated companies—in its sternest test. The attack was launched through of June 2 on the east face of the Ypres Salient, with the task being up a defensive flank on its exposed right, by the 8th Brigade, C.M.R., had been forced back by the opening assault. The battle for the 42nd developed into a struggle of men, strung over a brigade front, desperately digging in, improvised defences till support could come up over shell torn support lines. They did it and they won lasting fame. All this is admirably depicted. A clear picture emerging from the confusion and chaos of that shattered field.

It is not possible here to follow the Battalion in its soldierly course to that day on Nov. 11, 1918, when its gallant comrades of the Canadian Corps in the march past at Mons, by virtue of its capture of the city the Washington Post. The battle honors the 42nd is entitled to wear on its colors speak for themselves: Mount Sorrel, Somme, 1916; Fleurs-Courcelette; Arras, 1917 and 1918; Vimy, 1917; Ypres, 1917; Passchendaele; Amiens, Canal du Nord; Pursuit to Mons.

One outstanding feature of this book is the excellent account of the general situation prefacing each battle piece, and invaluable for the general reader. Thus there is a convincing account of why "the holocaust of Passchendaele" became necessary to restore French morale and relieve the pressure in Italy. There is also a good account of the December, 1918, mutiny of Canadian troops in England. Here Col. Ewing could report, "the men of the 42nd Battalion stood firm under extremely trying conditions".

Such a model of detail. Here again the official history is bound to illumine dark spots.

Valuable Deeds

Well balanced and accurate as is the factual narrative, the book is quickened throughout by the deeds of individual men, here carefully recorded for posterity. Of many such we may mention Lieut.-Capt. O. B.Jones, M.C., D. C. M., who rose from the ranks, for many gallant deeds, and Capt. Wilkie, and who perhaps more than any other individual gained the affection of the trench raid

We recall the story of Pte Thomas Dinesen, who in the stiff fighting at Parvillers in the Amiens battle, August 8th, 1918, was in command of the field. "Dinesen-Dinesen" was the name his father was a member of a distinguished Danish family, but his mother was Scotch—he was a cousin of Captain Blair Wilson who was killed leading the 42nd company at the Somme in 1916—left his company in charge of his sergeant and came to Montreal from New York through a misunderstanding of Officer. Joining the 42nd Battalion as a reinforcing draft in August, 1918, he was conspicuous from the first for his fearlessness and was awarded the D.C.M. for gallantry in action he was the spearhead of the Company's thrust far into the enemy lines. On the day the armistice was deadly and his cuveiree passing of the message of the spirit of the men, which Major Martyn generously records in his report. "Time after time he led the way into the midst of groups of Germans who were bayoted or clubbed rifle with irresistible effect. Repeatedly, he rushed forward alone in the face of machine gun fire and grenades, making it impossible to escape unhurt and personally put the guns out of action."

Red Hackle as Symbol

The story of the Battle Champ de Mars, Montreal, where just before the Battalion left for overseas it had been inspected by the Duke of Connaught. "That says the author, "the Battalion on the eve of its departure for the front and the Expeditionary Force was honored by the distinction accorded us as the 2nd Battalion Black Watch (Royal Highlanders) of Canada, the service of the 42nd added lustre to the traditions of a great regiment and will be remembered always as a glowing example of what the Red Hackle in the bonnet is the symbol."

Many fallen lies on. These men did not die in vain. It is fitting their Padre should have the last word of the fiery cross which, in the days of Scottish clans summoned to the caust. Out of the past will flaring yore. It is an echo of the knee and loved in those years when we companied with danger and walked with death, and now in the heights they attained, and contributing to our charge to the end of life the name and honour of the 42nd Battalion, The Royal Highlanders of Canada."

REPORT URGES STATE PLAN

Asks Wide Reform in Education For Nurses

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12.—By the appointment of a provincial system of education for nurses, socializing of nursing services, compulsory health insurance and the creation of Federal and Provincial Councils of nursing were among recommendations contained in the report of the National Joint Study Committee of the Canadian Nurses' Association and the Canadian Medical Association which today had ended almost five years of continuous survey work.

The report of the committee, launched last night, found fault with the educational system now employed in the training of nurses and suggested a system in which nurses are assigned and in which undue excess cases of sickness are unattended by nurses for lack of funds and recommended establishment of Government controlled and subsidized training centres for nurses to take the place of hospital training now in vogue.

Poe's "Mystery of Marie Roget" was the solution of the actual murders of Mary Cecilia Rogers. Holmes stories have a basis of fact.

WHEN TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

Teething time brings its troubles! For so often the irritation is accompanied by hot weather, when there is danger of digestive upsets anyway.

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable, is to see that mother's carriage is off promptly and regularly.

For this, there's nothing like Castoria. It is made specially for the delicate needs of babies and children. It acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic pains. Yet it is always effective—keeps older children well regulated.

Castoria is a harmless vegetable preparation; it contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

When your baby is fretful and feverish with teething or a stomach disturbance give a cleaning dose of Castoria to make him comfortable and happy. Children like the taste of genuine Castoria—never object to taking it. Be sure you get it with the name, Chas. H. Fletcher, on the package.

"She meant I was lucky to find such a good—customer," Ellen ad...vised him demurely.

"No. It's the customer who's lucky."

Their laughter rang out. Larry swept Ellen into his arms and they were caught into the emotion-laden atmosphere of the room. Boys and girls were dancing closely in the semi-darkness, cheek to cheek, heart to heart. Light frocks blurred against the darker clothes of the men; white, bare arms clutched at broad shoulders. There was no sound except the muted whine of orchestra and the swish of dancing feet and from outside, through the open windows, the subdued up...roar of a never resting Broadway.

Boys and girls, in the artificial darkness, were snatching feverishly at a little moment of tawdry romance, lest it pass them by; snatching at a moment of forgetfulness of daily tasks while the saxophones moaned.

Ellen and Larry bumped into a couple who had stopped for a passionate embrace. Ellen felt again that she would weep. She did not know quite why. But she knew that if Larry Smith attempted to embrace her in that furtive darkness something shining and young and beautiful would be gone for ever. At the same time she knew that if he drew her close, close to him she could not resist.

"I don't seem to see much for this," he ventured at length, uncomfortably. And then abruptly, with no preliminaries, he asked,

"What are you doing next?"

Ellen experienced a lightness and buoyancy of spirit as though something she feared had been passed. All at once she was able to laugh at herself. What a mad fool she had become. All of her values seemed changed. So much depended on to-night upon so little. She saw that Larry was watching her face as he waited for her to answer. She glanced toward a sign on the wall.

They had to dance through the crowd and to the outskirts so that he could read. His eyes grew lighted when he read that hostesses when dancing were limited in conversation to "yes" and "no".

"Do you like me a lot?" he inquired promptly.

Ellen feared that he would discern the wild hammering of her heart. She felt the color creeping into her face.

"Do, oh, tell me," he urged. "Yes or no?"

So he thought he would tease her!

"Yes." Ellen responded, but very dubiously indeed.

He looked disconcerted and then he added sheepishly, "Well that one seems to have been on me. So you think I'm taking an unfair advantage?"

"Yes!"

The second "yes" was emphatic and pointed. Their laughter rang out again.

"Well, what do you say," he suggested, "if we leave the mute dancing to those as likes it mute? I want to talk."

They were at a table and barely seated before he asked the second time, "What are you doing here?"

"Earning my living."

"Do you really mean that?"

He was plainly startled. She had on the top if her tongue a hot retort and she observed that he was studying her dress. She had forgotten Steven Barclay until then forgotten why she was at Dreamland, forgotten everything except that she was 20 years old and that life had become for her a thrilling and rose-hued miracle.

"Certainly I do," she replied.

There was no reason why she should explain to this young stranger how it happened that she was able to wear a Paris gown. It was impossible for her to do so. She had a passionate desire that he should know nothing of her responsibilities. She wanted to forget...ting trouble which had shad...ered her youth. She wanted only to laugh and to forget everything else. To him she must stand for gayety, for careless and irrespon...sible fun.

MR. AND MRS.— IT MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 34.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Sheeta, the panther, had interrupted the Dance of Death. But Tarzan was still bound to the stake, and the huge beast seemed not to understand its master's helplessness. Now the warriors, realizing that it was a flesh and blood panther, took heart a little. Nokod urged them to hurl their spears. Then suddenly their chief also saw that which Tarzan the ape-man was fixedly watching.

With a yell of terror the chief turned and fled toward the village gate. And as his people looked to see the cause of his fright they too, took to their heels. For there—lumbering down upon them, their huge forms exaggerated by the play of moonlight and camp fire—came the hideous apes of Akut. Now the ape-man's savage cry rang out above the shrieks of the fleeing blacks.

In answer to it, Sheeta and the apes leaped growling after the fugitives. Some of the warriors turned to battle with their enraged antagonists. But before the fiendish ferocity of the beasts they were down to death. Others were pounced upon in the act of flight. Soon the village was empty. Only then was Tarzan able to recall his savage pack to his side.

Now he discovered to his chagrin that he could not make one of them, not even the comparatively intelligent Akut, understand that he wished to be freed from the bonds that held him to the stake. Soon the blacks might return in force. The white men might readily shoot them all from the surrounding trees. He might even starve before the dull-witted apes realized he wished them to gnaw his bonds.

BLIND MUSICIAN GIVES CONCERT

Former Prince Edward County Resident to Broadcast

Picton, Feb. 13 (Special)—Mr. Herbert C. Trenear, a blind musician, has been giving concerts in different parts of the county and has been delighting crowds with his vocal and instrumental selections. Mr. Trenear was formerly organist of the King street United Church at Cobourg, Ont. As well as playing organ, piano and vocal music, Mr. Trenear was formerly organist showing the work and objects of the Institute of the Blind, which he represents. His last concert was at Bloomfield this week when the proceeds at the door amounted to over thirty dollars. Mrs W. Wasson Cox and Rev. C. B. Reddick expressed the pleasure of the audience at hearing Mr. Trenear with them.

No Hockey

The rain on Wednesday night and on Thursday has taken away most of the ice and snow, and nightly hockey games which were to have been played at Wellington had to be postponed owing to lack of good ice. Those who store ice for summer use are anxiously awaiting cold weather. Cheese factories would suffer especially if they have not a sufficient supply of ice this summer as it is required to make first class cheese.

To Broadcast

Prince Edward County people especially will be interested to learn that one of the county's famous musicians in the person of Cora Branscombe Tenney, is to be heard from radio station WLW, on Monday night at 7.45 pm. Mrs. Tenney was born in Picton but has been in New York for some years. She is a composer of note and is now national chairman of American Music in the General Federation of Women's Clubs of the Society of American Women Composers. She has written numerous songs, instrumental pieces, chorus and orchestral works, but transcending everything else is her love for her old home community which appeals to the home folk.

WLWL, New York, operates on 770 kc., and is a good station so that many Prince Edwarders will no doubt, listen on Monday night.

Miss Edith Bowerman, publisher of the Silver Creek News, Silver Creek, N.Y., spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. (Dr.) Trumpour and her mother, Mrs. Alberta Bowerman of Bloomfield. Mrs. Bowerman is returning to Silver Creek with her daughter.

Mr. John Cannons of Lorraine, Ohio, came to town to attend the funeral of his father, the late Abram Cannons. While here, he visited his cousins, Capt. Nelson Palmatier and Mrs. Ernest Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton O'Flynn entertained at bridge this week when there were nine tables in play. Prize winners were Mrs. Everell Scott, Mrs. Harry Bowers, Mr. G. L. Collyer and Mr. Wm. Pearsall.

Mrs. Wm. Hagar of Napinka, Manitoba, is visiting relatives in Prince Edward county.

Friday was a spring-like day here. Mrs. Emma Wager has returned to town after spending a few days at Mountain View with Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Sprague.

DERAILMENT ON C.N.R.

Allandale, Ont., Feb. 13 (CP)—One car of a freight train was derailed last night near Bracebridge, on the Canadian National Railway line to North Bay, fifty miles north of here. No one was injured in the accident. An auxiliary train was despatched from here.

Canada is larger than the continental United States by about 500,000 square miles.

Moira's Contribution to World Wide Service

In the hurried scramble to collect names and details of worthy and notable residents of the far-famed village of Moira the following are the names of others who were inadvertently left out of the record given. Rev. W. Orrom, Evangelical, U.S.A.; Mr. T. B. Ketcheson, J.P., Moira; Miss E. Burke, Missionary, Egypt; Mrs. G. Foster (nee Nelly Hollinger)), Public School teacher, Red School, Moira; Mrs. J. Williams (nee Olive Ketcheson), teacher, Moira; Mr. G. Mylls, Merchant, U.S.A. We are glad indeed to find that a real revival of interest is manifested in "Dear Old Moira" and shall be glad of any other worth while suggestions from our many readers that will open up another phase of public interest.

PREMIER CALLS CABINET IN SPECIAL SESSION

MacDonald Meets His Cabinet for First Time Since Operation on Eye

General Belief Meeting Has to Do With Far East Crisis

ISSUES AT STAKE

Members of Cabinet Are Called to Meet Premier of Britain

London, Feb. 15 (AP)—What was believed to be an important conference of cabinet members on "the foreign situation" was called late today at the sitting home where Premier Ramsay MacDonald was convalescing after an operation on his eye. Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, who only a short time before had made a long statement in the House of Commons on the Sino-Japanese situation, was among the conferees.

The conference summoned were besides Sir John Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, and Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions.

This meeting was understood to be the first at which the Premier has had with governmental business since his operation last week. Only yesterday his physician had issued a statement saying that he must have three weeks of complete rest.

Sir John Simon announced in the House of Commons that the British Consul General had fried a fourth protest with the Japanese consulate at Shanghai and assured a cabinet colleague that "no bigger news before very long."

BRITISH SEE POSSIBILITY

Trade in Internal Combustion Engines Looks Good

London, February 15.—The difficulties of British manufacturers of internal combustion engines making a share of the Canadian market are set forth in a report of the Department of Overseas Trade issued.

Despite the temporary depression Canada remains a fairly important market for the internal combustion engine, and one in which British manufacturers may be diligent in efforts to secure a slightly increased share of the import trade, the report says.

"It is doubtful, however," it proceeded "that the increase in the near future will be nearly so large as in the past, as the scope of the industry... Moreover, some classes of imports are particularly in the hands of United States suppliers and it is questionable whether their British manufacturers will be able to make much headway."

NOTED CHURCHMAN DIES IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Feb. 15—The Venerable Archdeacon John Paterson-Smyth, LL.D., Litt.D., D.C.L., who retired from the rectorship of St. George's Parish Church in 1926 after nearly twenty years' ministry, died yesterday at his residence, 3 Belmont Apartments. He was in his 81st year.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock from St. George's Church.

News of the passing of the former rector was made known to Canon Gower-Rees, his successor, during the course of the service last night. Canon Gower-Rees, in making the announcement to the congregation, stated that that was not the opportune moment to attempt to make any eulogy, but that a memorial service would be held on Sunday morning next.

INCREASES 69,000

Rome, Feb. 15 (AP)—Italy's unemployed increased by 69,000 during January, bringing the official total up to 1,001,000 persons. Only one-fourth were being aided by social insurance.

Dickens' Grandson is Rear Admiral

London, Feb. 15 (C.P. Cable) —Captain Gerald C. Dickens has been promoted to rear-admiral. He is a son of Sir Henry Fielding Dickens, sgrd counsel sergeant of the City of London, last surviving child of the great writer.

Rear-Admiral Dickens, appointed naval aide-de-camp to His Majesty in 1931, is 53 years of age. He entered the Royal Navy in 1894 and served during the Great War as commander of H.M.S. MANY APPLY FOR POSITIONS

Royal Society Considering Awards of Travelling Research Facilities

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—Widespread interest is being manifested in the ten travelling research fellowships to be awarded Canadian students this spring by the Royal Society of Canada. The fellowships valued at $1,500 each are donated from the Carnegie endowment fund and the winners must undertake travelling research work in any part of the branches of science, economics or literature.

As a breeding of the Royal Society fellowships board in Ottawa on Saturday it was learned that all applications for fellowships together with supporting papers must be in the hands of the secretary of the board in Ottawa not later than March 15. Under the provisions established by Royal Society each of these applications must have the signature of a special committee. There are five of these committees representing divisions of science or literature.

Each committee reports its conclusions to the board, and the board, after weighing the recommendations of the five committees, finally decides what ten young Canadians are to be the fortunate holders of fellowships. The awards will be announced before the middle of April.

The task of selecting those to whom fellowships are to be given is by no means an easy one as there are already nearly a hundred candidates, practically one-quarter of the applicants are women; they represent practically every Canadian university from the Atlantic to the Pacific and many of them have done post-graduate work either in Canadian universities or in the best universities in the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Applications have been received as afield as Honolulu in the West and Egypt in the East.

SETBACK UPON WALL STREET

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 15.—The stock market experienced the inevitable setback today that follows a week's spirited buying wave of the past two sessions of trading.

The market's old bank rather precipitantly in the early dealings, but rallied a majority of initial losses. A morning recovery was interrupted by adverse copper dividend news. But the market rallied once more, again later, regaining a part of the previous losses. Price movements that only about one-fourth of last week's upturn had been lost, leaving dwindled to less than half Saturday's volume.

Early Loss Heavy

Early losses ranged from 1 to 5 points in the active issues, more than half regained, before a rally uprising had been lost. Leaders ranged a point or more higher at the close. In the early afternoon, American telephone dropped 3 to 172, rebounded to 81, fell back to 177 5-8 and again turned upward. U. S. Steel fluctuated similarly, getting down as much as 2 1-2 points. Auburn dropped nearly 7 points. Utah Copper, a thinly traded issue, dropped 16 points on its dividend omission. Kennecott and Anaconda were also a point; and International Nickel nearly as much. Dupont lost 2 1-2 points.

TURKEY LENDS GERMAN VIEW ITS SUPPORT

Small Nations Expected to Use up Week of Parley's Time

WOULD END WAR

Norway Would Guard Against Clandestine Making of Arms

Geneva, Feb. 15 (Canadian Press Cable) — The smaller nations are having their say in the world disarmament conference. General discussion is expected to continue for the remainder of the week. Then will come the formation of expert commissions who will endeavor to find some common denominator from the mass of proposals that have been submitted.

The German thesis of equalization of armaments was supported by Tewfik Rushi Bey, Turkish foreign minister today. He agreed with the United States that military influences had not resulted in the maintenance of peace. "The only influence which should be followed," he urged, "is the alliance of civilized nations against war."

Turkish View

Turkey would support the French proposal for an internationalized force, if it meant the end of armaments. But if it meant the creation of an additional army, then Turkey must align with its critics, he said.

Nor did Turkey think that only military men should be consulted. "The aim should be to end war itself."

Eyk Colban, of Norway, favored boundary limitation of armaments with special guard against the clandestine manufacture of arms, and Commandant Branco, of Portugal, though in compulsory arbitration itself, the hope of peaceful settlement.

UNEMPLOYED INSURANCE IS CHIEF OBJECT

United Workers Meet — Premier Henry in Conference

PREMIER OBJECTS

Statement Men Only Receive 10 Cents From Dollar Not True

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 15 — Asking the Ontario Government to bring down legislation for a non-contributory unemployment insurance scheme; a minimum wage of 44 hours' work per week for married men and three days for single men; repeal of section 98 of the Criminal Code, dealing with unlawful assemblies, and the use of government grants to provinces for naval, military and cadet expenditure for unemployment relief.

A deputation from the United Workers' Association met Premier George S. Henry today. For more than an hour, the Premier listened to delegates from border cities, Hamilton, Carbor and other municipalities present their case.

The government promised an investigation into sanitary conditions at the unemployed hostel in Hamilton, and consideration of a scheme whereby the government grant for relief would be given in municipalities which were unable to pay their share. At present, the Provincial and Dominion Governments each pay one dollar for every dollar municipalities are contributing. According to the delegates, some municipalities were unable to pay the initial dollar and therefore unemployed were unable to obtain the other two dollars.

Considerable discussion followed the statement by Ald. Thomas Bingham, East Windsor to the effect that only 10 cents from every dollar expended on the tans-Canada highway went direct to the workers as salary. This was entirely disproved, declaring the Premier. It had been estimated that 70 per cent of the cost was paid to the men employed in building the roads, with balance being used for material.

Mr. Henry expressed his personal belief in unemployment insurance but considered that "people are talk of unemployment insurance when times are good" however, this was entirely a matter for the Province could not be expected, he said, to inaugurate a system of unemployment insurance and more than a single municipality could do so. Eventually, he believed, government would have to have a sufficient reserve in good times to take care of unemployed in periods of depression.

The delegation supported a tax on banks whereby the unemployment was tied up. This, declared the Premier, was neither feasible nor desirable. He pointed out that in Germany six billion dollars deposited 20,000 each week in the German bank at school. Most of the deposits left the banks as soon as they came, of working class people who took out their savings to provide Hindu refugees in the city to safety.

Ald. Thomas Wheeler, River was the scene of a fierce Moslem attack in another communal disturbance.

Sporadic active rebellion has been suppressed in many districts by the personnel of the civil administration continued serious.

Rumors are current that the Congress party organized a council of ministers in Kashmir State consisting a majority of British officials, thus establishing a virtual republic in the heart of British India and giving the Congress party control of the state, one of the richest in India.

Independent Manchurian State to Be Established?

All Classes Beg 84 Year Chief to Lead

Hindenburg Gives Himself to Fatherland in Time of Stress—Aim is to Weld German People Together

Berlin, Feb. 15 (AP)—President Paul Von Hindenburg, who led an army in the World War and the German republic for the past seven years, announced today that, at the age of 84, he will obey the mandate of millions of Germans and be a candidate to succeed himself when his term expires in May.

There is every indication that he will be elected, and it was generally believed that if he "had thought there was any chance of defeat he would not have offered himself as a candidate. In recent weeks he has said that he would not contest in office unless the nation called him with unmistakable majority. In that time 2,500,000 persons have signed a petition asking him to run.

The old field marshal's formal statement of his candidacy read: "After serious consideration I have decided, conscious of my responsibility for the fate of our Fatherland, to place myself at the disposal of the people for election.

"The fact that I decide to do so does to me not from one party but from wide classes of the population, makes me look upon my declaration of readiness as a duty.

"In the event of my election I shall continue to serve the Fatherland faithfully, conscientiously and with all the strength at my command in order to help it to achieve liberty and equality abroad, unity and revival at home.

"Should I fail of election then I will be spared the reproach that I deserted my post at a serious time.

"For me there is but one real national goal—welding our people together in its struggle for existence, unfailingly, as it was when we were buttoned the other way," the Duke commented.

Governor-in-Council director of the exhibition confessed he was unable to explain the matter.

THIRD CAR TO SEPARATE TWO

The city bore itself with a commendable calmness over the week end, and except for the usual amount of wrong numbers on ringing telephones, and the usual number of coffee pots which boiled over, the Belleville fire department had little to do over the week end, and the odd number of little boys that tumbled downstairs, no major accidents have been reported.

However, near the corner of Coleman Street and West Bridge, Saturday evening, two light cars locked horns and threatened for a time to develop into a chronic condition of permanence. All efforts on the part of two perspiring drivers failed to dislodge them for some time—until another car came along, unwound a tow rope and proceeded to haul one apart from the other. Thus, Uncle Tom's cabin was disentangled over the brain of man.

One of the cars rounded onto Bridge Street off Coleman. At the precise moment that he entered on to the street another car that had been visiting over the bridge, backed up before him, went haywire, and tumbled into the ditch which, fortunately, was frozen. Spiritual and moral epithets were noted, but no blood was shed, which, indeed, ceased was held. Rev. Father Madden conducting the last rites at the graveside. Interment being in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were Patrick Hayes, Walter Thomas, W. Rosevear, John Fahey, Charles T. Dolan and William Britton.

ARSON CHARGE HAS BEEN LAID

Arrest of William E. Mason Follows Inquiry in Sudbury

Sudbury, Feb. 15—Released on bail of $15,000, William E. Mason, publisher and prominent business man, is on remand until February 19, following his arrest Saturday on a charge of arson, arising out of the inquiry into the fire last September in the garage of the Sudbury Transit Company, of which he was general manager.

"As I have said from the start," said Mr. Mason after the arrest, "I want everything cleared up. Glaring evidence at the inquiry a week ago, he denied the statement of John Stolinski, a bus washer for the company, that he offered Stolinski $300 to "make a good fire" The bus washer had pleaded guilty to a charge of arson in connection with the fire and is awaiting sentence. Mason alleged there was a plot to blackmail him, and spoke of threats said to have been made against him by Kero Kolelf, former manager of the Transit Company. The fire inquiry adjourned Friday last.

On Saturday, Mr. Mason was arraigned before Justice Hose in Crown Attorney E. D. Wilkins, and mailed pending conference between his counsel, C. M. Miller, and the Crown officials. Mason was then arrested on a warrant sworn to by Inspector E. D. L. Hammond of the Provincial Police. The accused was remanded by District Judge Edmond Proulx. Mr. Mason furnished $10,000 bail himself and the remainder was put up by H. Barlow, building contractor.

41 MEN TAKEN ON MAIN JOB

Dewatering of Trench Makes Possible Employment of More Men

The largest number of men to be taken on relief work in the city waterr main, for the past month or six weeks—forty-four—was offered off the unemployed list by the clerk this morning, which they did and sent up to the highway for the first shift of the week.

For some time past the presence of water, lying big deep in the trench already excavated, has precipitated a great deal of extra work, and the pumps working day and night have succeeded in reducing the number of men that could be handled on the job. With the pumps going steadily, however, considerable progress has been made in keeping ahead of the inflow, and it is expected that from now on the full complement of men will be used unless other factions interfere. A considerable amount of work still remains to be done on this job, but no estimate has as yet been given as to the actual time of completion.

But Poker Game is Spoiled With Visions of "Frankenstein"

KITCHEN COMEDY

The "eyes" had it in a home on Albert street Saturday night. By a majority of one.

Outside a cold wind blew, and swirls of snow rattled off the window pane. Inside, however, there was warmth and cheer, a crackling fireplace and a card table set up in the centre of the living room. Two friends had dropped in to spend an hour or so, and the twelfth or thirteenth hand was about to commence. It was not bridge—but a friendly game of poker.

"I pass," said the host, "thy me, too," echoed his friend. "I'll take two. I'll have to pass, too," from his good wife. "I had just as good a hand to draw to—". "Pass," came the last one.

"Clash!", came a sound in the rear of the house. The first one: "It's a dog at the garbage can," remarked the host after ten seconds of blank astonishment which every one looked at every one else', with hands of cards raised in the air.

"No, I pot the garbage pail inside tonight.... to keep it from freezing you know—".

"The cat prowling around then?" "No, she hasn't been around all day—just deal another hand while I take a look," she flung back over her shoulder..... "I have a chicken hanging up in the summer kitchen for tomorrow and I don't want...."

Bing Crosby crooned a Cuban love song over the turned down radio, and a shuffle of cards registered over the table....

"Treee-ows" the—Mother was being done in the summer kitchen! A petrified silence, then the scraping of chairs on the hardwood floors—and two men rushed from the room if the house in the direction the final lady had taken—while the lady who was left during which every one looked at every one else', with hands of cards raised in the air.

"What is it..??" "That way—" screaming the housewife vanishing with ashy hand to an open window through which an occasional gust or snow whirling in

"Who—Who—" said the host, and queried the husband.

"Dead—as a door—he was eyes ..... a man! He looking at me!"—

Scattered cards began to collect themselves.

"We never did get that electric light bulb back in the stocking the time we took it for another light socket in the living room here Friday.....And when I opened the door I almost walked into a MAN! He must have been trying to steal something—he looked at me from the back yard." He ran!

He ran! There were only footprints in the snow to and from the house. When the householder and his neighbor entered the yard. But they were very large footprints, said the neighbor. Next day, who thought it was all a pretty good joke—and a pretty good story—"And anyhow the chicken wasn't there! Some damage that was done was a dinges in the garbage pail when it fell on the floor after the man had been feeling around, and knocked it off the table.—Tch tch tch."

Detectives stated that the baby had been injured, either before or after being thrown to the ground from the train or from injuries inflicted before death. S. O. S. FROM S.S. HALLAREN

Steamer in Distress With Fire in Hold Off Ambrose Light

New York, N.Y., Feb. 15— The Swedish freighter Hallaren sent an S.O.S. this morning saying fire had broken out in her hold, about 425 miles east of Halifax, but added rescue vessels at 9.0 a.m. that she was in no further need of assistance.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 15.— The Steamer Hallaren sent out an S.O.S. at 7.52 a.m. Eastern Standard time, stating that she was in distress about 4.25 miles east of Halifax, a message from the Radio Station of R.C.A. to the Radio Corporation of America reported. Hallaren's position was given as 44.40 north and 56.00 west.

The British Steamship Beaverford is only 35 miles distant and is going to the assistance," the message said.

It gave no indication as to the nature of the Hallaren's distress.

A message picked up by the Mackay-Radio, said that fire had broken out in the Hallaren's hold. The Steamer Beaverford, 35 miles away, was proceeding to the Hallaren's assistance, the message added.

The Hallaren, Swedish freight motor ship of 2,749 tons gross clearance, left Antwerp for Halifax February 10th for Sweden and Finland with a general cargo. It was built in 1930 and is owned in Gothenburg Sweden. Furness Withy and Co., are the Canadian agents.

The Hallaren's first S. O. S. at 8.46 Atlantic Standard Time, reported fire between decks, and that the 2,749-ton freighter was westbound for Saint John from Antwerp, altered her course to go to her aid. The Beaverford was 35 miles away at the time, and had not reached the Hallaren when the Swedish vessel advised she was under way and needed no towing help as their routes.

The Hallaren of 1,462 net tons, was bound for Gothenburg, from New York.

Lots of Valentines Sold But How Were They Delivered?

Reporter Tries to Solve Puzzle After Interview With Dealers, Posties

LARGE TRADE

"Valentines?" echoed postal employees this morning when asked if there had been any appreciable increase in the amount of mail handling during the week end. "If people sent them at all they must have mailed them early— or else delivered them themselves. We found nothing unusual to report as far as births mail is concerned."

"Valentines?" repeated a number of stationers and booksellers also as they surveyed tattered remnants of what had been neatly arranged piles of all sorts of lace-bedecked and be-ribboned heart warmers, or the more sentimental cards of delicately "funny ones" which had been laid in alluring array during the early mornings—We've sold hundreds of them. Best business we've had in years. Everybody's been buying them. Young men have been buying for their sweethearts and middle aged men have been buying them for their wives or nieces, little boys for their little girl friends and little girls for dashing, bashful little boys. The comic ones went first—by that I mean the humorous ones. Perhaps considering various jobs in manners suggesting that they were not at all familiar with their wives or best sellers. Then, too, we did sell over so many of the "Love Keep Your ones. You know the ones in which a delicate hint is conveyed by the girls to their boy friends that they are 'pining their love', or quite in the mood for making a go of it together, and so on. Well, the girls may have blushed a little when they bought them but buy them they did.... and I wonder if they did any good."

The next place was a drug store with the fancy valentine boxes of candies piled up. They were not ribboned and adorned with little Cupids either. "Sell, yes, plenty! pointing at the boxes. "Loads of them.....young men mostly." "More than you did last year?" "On the whole, yes. People seemed to have taken a bigger interest this year with the boxes. The stocks were more varied—more appealing." "Who bought them mostly, the older men or the young ones?" "The young fellows bought the most —a few of the older men did buy some. They looked like married men to me, buying peace offerings for the wife".

So there you have it. People bought the valentines, and presumably they were delivered as they were a week before Valentine Day. So what's the answer?

Consumption of wine in France has increased during 1931 29 per cent in the last three years.

MACHINERY IS NOT ENOUGH

What is Needed is to Start Peace Mechanism in Motion

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 15.—The roll of guns in the Far East again echoed memorably over the disarmament conference table today as W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate, mounted the rostrum and told the story of Japanese aggression.

Dr. Yen supported alike the British proposals to put a limiting lid on armaments and the French proposals for strengthening the authority of the league by putting a shotgun under its collective law. But he urged something more than machinery.

"What is needed," he said, "is readiness to put the machinery into operation; the power and courage to make decisions and to carry them into plain. My country and my people are not seeking pity, nor soliciting the armed help of other nations.

Fulfil Obligations.

"But we do demand that nations honestly bring the league to use the instruments that shall fulfil their obligations. What do you intend to do about it?" he asked.

Count Appony, who is 84 years of age, described the British proposals of article eight of the League providing for the reduction of the minimum armaments consistent with national safety. He asked for a quantitative reduction and not only of materials, and total abolition of military aeroplanes and chemical warfare. If disarmament could be reached only by stages, he said, these stages should be spread over the shortest possible period.

The shooting occurred on the Fiedler farm, ten miles from Prince Albert yesterday, Fiedler, who had been in Saskatoon for a month, returned to the farm Friday morning and found Wagner and his eighteen-year-old son Hired. He and Nagner are alleged to have quarrelled.

Police were called to the scene by a neighboring farmer, who had captured Fiedler, and tied him securely with rope. Wagner, badly suffering from loss of blood, staggered to the adjacent farmstead and charged he had been shot by his employer.

THE DRAMA

Young People of Sloan Church Present "The Winning of Joy"

The play, "The Winning of Joy" was given by eleven young people of the Sloane Church hall on Wednesday, February 10th. In spite of the icy roads the hall was well filled and judging from the applause given after each scene, also the comments after the play was given and received.

The title of the play, "The Winning of Joy" does not do justice to this role, played so splendidly by Miss Lucilla Holmes. Though Joy is supposed to be the step-niece of a very "rich and miserly" old uncle, who is left a general a trouble, yet she is indeed a beautiful spirit of unselfishness, who by unselfish acts converts the miser into a Santa Claus and what is just as good, reunites the hard, old man to Stephen his nephew who has cashed bogus cheques on the rich old man's account.

The part of the miserly old uncle was played with decided success by Mr. Will Stone.

The part of the two young men guilty of theft, one as has been suggested by the cashing of cheques and the other by downright stealing, was taken by Mr. Stephen Bailey by Messrs George Read and Gordon Woods, . George Read, throughout the play has the difficult place of keeping the boys true to their trust like spending money better than working for it. He is saved to his better self through the kindness of Joy, the love of mother Ollie M. Bristol and finally through the forgiveness of his cheque-cashing employer, Mr. Uncle.

Dave Reeves (Mr. Gordon Woods) the foreman of the place, wrestles with his conscience and gains a victory over himself in the voluntarily returns the stolen money.

The brother-in-law (Mr. George Tucker) and his wife (Miss M. Bristol) play well the parts of brother and mother to a somewhat wayward son. The father seemed at times harsh with the son, but it must be remembered that the father is a brother of the miser and consequently is heir to a hard nature, also that his son until the ends, acts far from praiseworthy. The mother, true to her mother nature, loves the boy always.

The part of Mrs. Sims, the inquisitive neighbor, was most humorously taken by Mrs. Rose Read. Mrs. Read always pleases her audiences.

The other characters who acted hard parts with charm and grace were Miss Marjorie Lloyd, who became the only bride in the whole play, and Miss Reta Woods, who was the commencial friend of Mrs. Sims. In playing this subdued role Miss Woods showed marked talent and Miss Lloyd, both as a rich and caustic daughter later as a beautiful bride, showed herself master in every situation. Always giving the impression of one who was thoroughly at home on the stage.

Shorter parts were played by Hellyn Sims' gentlemanly friend, and genuine Sandy and fiddler, Mr. Gordon Detlor, and the satisfied mother, Mr. Everett Phillips.

The word of appraisal one might say that perhaps the first act of the play was the strongest, because of the scene in the second act where the young man came to grips with his conscience and returned the stolen money is most fascinating. The work of the play may be safely stated something like this: Every bit, no matter how much cut or plumb, is amenable to unselfishness.

The young people of Sloane church deserve much credit on the success of their endeavour.

Much of the credit for the excellent rendering was due both to the leagul president, Miss Reitha Lloyd and to such an accomplished reader as Mrs. Henry Jeffery.

The beautiful lighting effect was made possible by our electrician, Mr. Tom Smith.

Between the first two acts Mr. Smith sang a solo entitled "I Will Take You Home Kathleen" and Lenore Vermilyea recited "The Things My Mother Taught Me." After the second act Mr. James Reid sang "The Bonnie, Bonnie Banks of Loch Lochanond." And Tom Jury gave two selections which were very much enjoyed, especially the first one which sang about "Pies, Pies a Letter and a Sweetheart" and in encore "Call Me Back, Pal of Mine."

Already invitations to give the play at other churches have been received.

Barn in Eastern Ontario Burned

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 13.— Fire last night destroyed a new barn on the farm of F. Conlon, near Spencerville, along with hay, grain, six pigs and 60 hens. A horse in the banging in the building is blamed for the fire, which caused an estimated loss of $2,500. The farm home of William Kavanagh and Sheatown was also totally destroyed early this morning.

Sheer Exhaustion May End Life of Mad Trapper

AKLAVIK, N.W.T., Feb. 13.—(Can. Press).—Sheer exhaustion and the inclemency of Albert Johnson, alleged murderer and madman, whose defiance of Royal Canadian Mounted Police has led to the greatest manhunt in the history of the Arctic, flying over Johnson's trail in the snow which police are following Pilot W. R. "Wop" May noticed the man's steps were becoming shorter and the zig-zagging of the path indicated the hunted man was a bit "frenzy".

All the runes of the hunted fugitive have been resorted to by Johnson to delay or lead astray his pursuers. So clever have some of his tracks been that police are beginning to doubt he is mad, although there appears to be no other explanation of his actions since he came to this part of the Arctic.

One of the best hunters of the Arctic, Quartermaster Sergeant F. Riddell and Staff Sergeant Herbert of the Royal Canadian Signals Corps, however, are hot on Johnson's trail. Pilot May reported. Further back the main posse of police and trappers is following.

Dr. Wish, the President, made a efficient and versatile chairman and he explained the symbol of the club which is no less than a part of the old fire engine which Rob Williams had fixed to be a beautifully gilded bell with carved letters S. W. C. After some business Bob Patterson rendered a unique musical selection being a combination of mouth-organ and auto harp, he also led in Community singing throughout the evening.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. R. S. Clancy, of Toronto, proved to be a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Clancy for his excellent speech and the meeting was closed with singing "God Save the King" and "Auld Lang Syne".

Mr. Ernest Wootton of Aurora is visiting at present with relatives for a few days.

Oddfellows At Home

A very large attendance of the members, wives and sweethearts of the Oddfellows Lodge No. 239 and the Rebekah Lodge No. 211 gathered in the Community Hall on Wednesday evening, Feb. 10th. Bro. Geo. Carlisle, N. G. in the chair. Carmel orchestra dispensed sweet music while the crowd was arriving. A varied program was put on. Mr. Alex Parks gave a number of readings in his inimitable style. Miss Bessie Cooley as usual delighted the audience with a vocal solo.

Miss Danaan of Wellman's Corners proved to be a reader of some note, in her two readings. Mrs. Buttler sang a fine song, Mrs. Hattie Hubbs also rendered a pleasing solo. A very pretty sketch entitled "Mrs. Smith's Visitor" was given by members of the Rebekah Lodge. The audience with a reading, Carmel Orchestra gave another number; A number much appreciated was a male quartette, those taking part were Major Fraser, Messrs H. Farrell, Harry Brown and Ed Fraser. The speaker of the evening was Mr. J. O. Sterity of Belleville, who spoke largely on the organization of the Oddfellows up to the present which was very impressive. Mrs. Roberts and Bill Jones gave a pleasing vocal duet, accompanied by T. Furniver. A word of appraisal one might say that perhaps the first act of the play was the strongest, because of the scene in the second act where the young man came to grips with his conscience and returned the stolen money is most fascinating. The work of the play may be safely stated something like this: Every bit, no matter how much cut or plumb, is amenable to unselfishness.

FOOD OF SQUIRREL

Glacier Park Naturalist Observes His Habits

Probably no one knows just how many times a squirrel climbs a tree, but Wm. Graham Vinal, ranger naturalist in Glacier National Park, estimates a Columbian pine squirrel caching nuts for its winter food supply and was amazed by the speed shown in reaping and storing the harvest.

—Is usual procedure was along root to a trunk, where he made a 1.31-inch hole, then "down the pine like a thicket," says Dr. Vinal. "Possibly 75 cones will be carried frequently go another way—one of those circumstances of carelessness such as only squirrels travel. It is the opening hymn. Lord, speak to me" was followed by a series of fervent verses and prayer. Mrs. A. S. Murdoff sang very sweetly "In the secret of His presence".

Prayers for China, Japan, Korea and Russia were offered by Mesdames J. Montgomery, C. Bailey, L. Rodgers and L. Dorman. Mrs. C. MacKitt, President of St. Paul's United W.M.S. then took the chair Scripture lesson was read in unison, "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire" was sung. Then "Thanksgiving Box" which was very touching, and lots of an interesting character, was finally led through the hearing this provided the means for the Mite box the prize of a hat she intended to purchase. Mrs. Bailey, our daughter decided to be a missionary, at first the mother felt she could not spare her but felt later her strength to give her to the Lord.

PROGRESS DURING LULL

Progress during depression may seem to many a mere phrase but that is what may be said of Belleville in the year 1931. It is doubtful if any other centre of consequence in the province has shown proportionately such important acquisitions to the industrial life of the city as have come to Belleville during the so-called lean period. This means that besides setting its house in order when called upon by the world of finance, the city has actually stepped forward.

Few people realize what a steady industrial life means to Belleville The manufactured products which Belleville goes so quietly about turning out annually are over six and a quarter million dollars annually. Few would believe it until they begin to figure out the production of the local industries.

These features, with the same business spirit which marks the commercial life of Belleville are evidences of the value of the Chamber of Commerce. As a preserver of balance and sanity it has accomplished much in inculcating a spirit of reasonableness and breadth of outlook.

In like manner is the spirit of the community is what counts. It is this which governs its growth and its future. It is the unseen element in every business deal of consequence and every step in the life of a city takes. This the Chamber of Commerce has greatly influenced during the past ten or twelve years.

THE HUMAN LINCOLN

Lincoln's fame is standing the test of time, he is sinking into the tradition of the race which inhabits the lower half of the North American continent. The singing of a negro melody instinctively mentions up pictures of the great emancipator. He has become an emotional and spiritual force.

His birthday is honored like that of Washington's in the United States and the humanity of his character and career more approachable than the founder of the republic.

It was claimed the other day by Governor Pinchot that the Lincoln tradition was outworn, that he was forgotten by his party and that he would not today reach first base in the party in the political game. Whatever the republican party has become, the fact remains that Lincoln's is a name to conjure with.

The very human Lincoln is what appeals to man. His political life was the expression of the man. Lincoln the man was greater than Lincoln the president.

In the last word, this is generally the case. Great men are greater than the office they fill, any calling they adorn, for it is difficult for their nature to find perfect expression in the vocations and outer activities.

The world will not let go the Lincoln tradition.

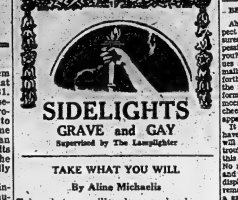
KEEPING UP MORALE

To keep up the morale of white-collar jobless men during the depression, colleges of Boston offered free classes in the two dozen subjects presumably of interest to this group. Twelve hundred men have enrolled and leading educators have donated their services without pay.

This is one of the community steps taken to check the mentality of people employed for it is felt that idleness without an absorbing thought may lead to dissatisfaction and to other undesirable results.

The larger cities where the idle are very numerous have given entertainment of games, books and music by offering them temporary diversion from the thought of their idleness.

This is to prevent a sense of hopelessness dominating those who day after day have been unable to find something to do. Many in Belleville have been making use of libraries during the lull in activity and so have not been prepared themselves for the turn of the tide when it comes but also have built up a reserve of spiritual force with which they will be sustained during the idle period.



PERFUMES AND FUMES?

Is the development of the scent industry to change the ambition of people in operations? One scientist stated the other day that the most fertile field of research lay in the study of scent.

One editor suggests that perfume engineering is to be the field which will make people like to go through operations for the smell of orange blossoms or sweet peas and to wake to the scented air laden with violet perfume.

And yet these delicious odors, these inspiring scents are but cousins of the most deadly explosives or deadly poisons.

But what difference does it make whether these perfumes are related distantly to the lethal fumes used in war as long as the transformation has been made in them? The very water we drink is a compound of two gasses. The very elements in some of the food we eat if compounded in other combinations would spell our death and yet we thrive on them. So in its essence the real perfume that delights the nose is a thing in itself as is the deadly war gas. Made of the same elements of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, they are still as different as day and night.

TAKE WHAT YOU WILL

By Aline Michaelis

Take,what you will and pay no heed
To any bar that stands
Between you and the righteous need
Of your triumphant hands.

Be certain that your fond desire,
The thing which you should be,
Alone has power to lift you higher,
Alone can set you free.

The man who turns and doubts and gropes
And hesitates always,
Too weak of Faith to trust his hopes,
Will tread no victor's ways.

Take what you will with knowledge sure
That life was meant for this;
That every aspiration pure
At last must win to bliss.

For life should be a joyous thing,
And man, serene, proud, bold,
Should wear existence as a king,
His robes of cloth of gold.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S address at the dedication ceremonies of the national memorial cemetery at Gettysburg, passed unnoticed at the time, now recognized as a masterpiece of diction and earnest eloquence—so much so that it is given a place in bronze tablet as a model of public speaking. Lincoln was not even given the honor of being the principal speaker of the day, as he was held by the sponsors of the program to be an uncouth Western stump speaker, unfitted for such an affair of delore. Hence Hon. Edward Everett, one of the most eloquent orators of the day was given the place of honor on the program, spoke nearly two hours and read seven columns of his speech in the New York newspaper next morning, while President Lincoln's brief address received only passing notice. This speech was made in November, 1863, and on Friday, February 12, 1932, radio listeners the world over heard Lincoln's Gettysburg address in full broadcast from several stations in the United States and on a program of the day from Northern stations featuring Lincoln numbers. Of course, the Old South not being entirely reconstructed yet, paid little attention to the birthday anniversary of the man once so cordially hated throughout the slave-owning South. Washington's two hundredth birthday anniversary on February 22 will have a more fervid remembrance in the South than Lincoln's birthday ever will have south of the Mason and Dixon line. One thing Abraham Lincoln accomplished by Gettysburg address which millions of banquet attenders should be thankful for, he demonstrated how an important speech could be made in a few and well chosen words and be remembered long after lengthy speeches on the same subject were buried in the dust-bins of forgetfulness. Modern writers of all kinds might also with profit take Lincoln's Gettysburg address for a model of conciseness, brevity and purity of diction.

"WE HERE HIGHLY RESOLVE that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."—Closing paragraph of President Lincoln's Gettysburg address delivered November, 1863.

The post-office assistant had completed some knitting, and a long conversation with a colleague, and then turned negligently to the patient customer.

"What did you want?" asked.

"Well," sighed the man, "I came originally for a three-cent stamp, but I think I'd better have the old age pension application form as well."

Other Papers' Opinions

BEATING THE DEPRESSION

Almost any day now we may expect to see launched mankind's surest and best antidote for human pessimism, depression or what have you? The new spring send catalogues are almost ready to go into the mails, and as soon as they blossom forth in the offices and homes of the myriad amateur gardeners who form the backbone of modern horticulture the spirit of hope and cheerful optimism will be at once apparent.

It is literature, like this that we have been waiting for. And art, too, will play its part in banishing the blues and worry incidental to this period of economic adjustment. No man can read a seed catalogue and not upon the glowing colors displayed in the illustrations and remain a pessimist. If he is already a gardener perusal of the newest catalogue will work upon him with a sort of subtle intoxication so that soon he can talk of nothing else and his wife will begin to hide in dodge when they see him coming, un less perchance they happen to be gardeners too, in which case they will sit down with him and talk about peak experiences and their hopes for the immediate future. Such conversations are bound to be envied by those who throughout a long winter have been trying to save on coal bills grew where only one blocked below—which often does not differ from those promised for the seeds listed in the catalogues.—London Advertiser.

REFUDDLED DRIVERS

Recently, in a New York court a motorist was convicted of being under the influence of liquor while in charge of a motor vehicle, and his driving license was suspended. An appeal was taken—not against the conviction, but against the cancellation of his license. The appeal was returned was in the appellant's favor. It was shown on the other hand, if he imbibes some of the poison masquerading under beverage labels he is less likely to run into a monumental befuddlement might slow up his thinking processes to the point where he would be a positive menace on the highways. Things are in the strict sense of the word, intoxicated. It may be that there is a distinction to be drawn between "under the influence" and "being intoxicated", but it is a fine point. It should be evolved in the courts in the interests of safety. Driving an automobile today in crowded cities and on crowded highways is a job for the coldly sober. A slight dimming of the faculties may be all that is needed to cause tragedy. There is one school of thought, you know, that holds a man is not drunk until he falls down and cannot get up on his feet. Only a few per cent case in New York, don't be surprised if you hear of a judge over there with the controversial preference before him, citing that as a verity.—Hamilton Spectator.

Boat is Disabled Drifting on Shoal

Lunenburg, N.S., Feb. 15 (CP)—Disabled by the loss of her propeller, the motor vessel R. B. Bennett, out of Lunenburg, is drifting not far from the shoals off Sable Island, according to a wireless report received from the trawler Lemberg.

Last night the government steamer Acasa was speeding to her aid, distance, expecting to reach her before daylight. Acasa left Halifax at 4.45 Sunday afternoon.

The Bennett was reported to be west by north seventy-seven miles northwest of Sable Island shoals. The shoals run out from the island for distances of fifteen and sixteen miles.

Greatest Show of Scottish Terriers

The following extract was clipped from the sports page of the New York Times of February 11th last:

"In a ring surrounded by a crowd of Scottish terrier enthusiasts, Heather Aristocrat of Hiloth, owned by Frank Spickerman of the Hill Top Farm Kennels of Greenwich, Conn., gained the highest honors in the breed at the specialty show of the Scottish Terrier Club of America in the combined exhibition of the Associated Terrier Clubs in the Grand Central Palace.

"It was the most stubbornly contested event of the nine exhibitions held by as many terrier specialty clubs, was made by Walter H. Reeves, the noted Canadian judge from Belleville, Ontario, and was greeted by a great outburst from the spectators.

"Mr. Reeves napped his forehead and declared it was the greatest collection of Scottish terriers he had ever seen in all his long experience and one of the most difficult judging assignments he had ever undertaken."

Folk sure you are absolutely strong and fit in every respect there might still be considerable doubt as to whether you actually are. For often we do not realize that something is going on inside unless we have pain or some other striking evidence of malfunctioning of an organ. For few really take the proper care of themselves that they should. Often we are at least curious about minor matters, such as brushing the teeth. And so we pile up trouble for ourselves in future which may mean that sooner or later we are going to learn more than our bodies are breaking down.

Some years ago Dr. Thomas A. Wood, of Columbia University, compiled what he called a Health Scale. I consider it one of the most comprehensive and helpful guides ever made. Note the questions are given in the right. All these total one hundred.

And so did 22 dollers, pop said. Dont tell me youre actually serious. By considering buying one of these things, he said, and ma said, Of corse not, I am just nosely wrong the kind of a way I mean Hookbinders are giving away a 5 dollar number plate absolutely free tomorrow with every purchase of 10 dollars or more, and I was just casting about for something in the 10 dollar or over lines.

But for Pete sake we have less use for a music box, he said, than we have for a Fillipeono music box, pop said. I dont know what reason I can get a pair of gold Spanish doorknobs for, he said. Also another ache attached for 14 dollers and 93 cents, he said.

Now look, that tawking for the sake of not saying anything, me said, and pop said, Well wrong then because I also know where I can get a quart jar of imitation pickles free with every 7 doller rubber hatchet.

O keep quiet, Im trying to do the cross word puzzle, ma said, and pop said, Thank goodness, much more instructive.

Meaning less expensive.

MANY PHASES OF LIFE UNDER SURVEY IN N.S.

Ills Besetting Province By Sea Expected to Be Cured

PROBLEMS PROBED

Coal Industry, Jails, and Partisanship Investigated

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX—With the arrival here of Sir Andrew Rae Duncan of London, England, to investigate the coal industry of Nova Scotia, three royal commissions of Nova Scotia to name a commission for the primary purpose of hearing claims of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation and the United Mine Workers in regard to a wage agreement, which report is expected to break a deadlock which has halted negotiations since the corporation declared wage reductions were necessary to meet the present condition and the mine executive refused to accept reductions. The noted British industrialist has been given wide powers to investigate every phase of coal mining.

All the same time, A. J. Campbell, K.C., of Truro, is touring the province as chairman of a commission to probe the conditions existing in jails and prisons. The most important recommendation received so far by this commission is for a central reformatory to educate and train criminals serving terms of two years and less. Longer terms are served in the penitentiary, where vocational training has been established.

Then there is N. Dudley Murray, Halifax barrister, who is a commissioner appointed by the federal government to investigate charges of political partisanship in the province. He has held hearings in several places, including Halifax.

Less than a month has passed since the federal government's royal commission heard an analysis of the transportation problems of Nova Scotia and the other Maritime provinces, and it is a matter of months since Sir Alexander Gibb and his engineers investigated the problems and possibilities at the port of Halifax in the course of surveys of Canadian ports and shipping facilities.

It seems Nova Scotia has been unconfortable for a long time, and during the last seven years she has been consulting physicians who have been probing nearly every phase of life in the province.

In 1925, Sir Andrew Rae Duncan headed a royal commission that made a study of the coal mining industry. The next year he was back in the province as chairman of the royal commission on Maritime claims. In 1927 interest was focused on fisheries, as a commission headed by Hon. A. K. Maclean, Chief Justice of the Exchequer Court, toured the peninsula. Another year and agriculture had gained the limelight, as a commission under the chairmanship of Hon. D. C. Mackenzie conducted an extensive inquiry. In 1928, Mr. Justice Ods of Toronto came to Halifax as a commissioner to investigate the charges of partisanship against the former Halifax Harbour Commissioners. In 1931, the advisability of cutting a canal across the Isthmus of Chignecto was considered by a commission headed by Dr. Arthur Surveyor of Montreal.

So Nova Scotia do not have to turn to Webster for a definition of the word "commission".

Days of Liberty Are Rapidly Closing

EDMONTON, Alta., Feb. 15—(By the Canadian Press)—Through the efforts of Mrs. Nellie McClung Grain, Albert Johnson, the eccentric trapper, who hates the sight of his fellowman, is still racing a few jumps ahead of the police pursuers. Wanted for the killing of one police constable and the wounding of another, the last man in the north who are rapidly drawing to a close, police officials think.

While more than a score of constables of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, troopers and Indians are on Johnson's trail, an advance guard of two crack mushers is close on his heels. Supplies for the pursuers are being taken from Akiavik by air by pilot W. R. ("Wop") May, noted northland flier.

"BAD MAN" REFORMS

Here is a boy whose timely pinch-hitting has rescued several games for the New York Rangers out of the fire already this year—and who looks like one of the coming headliners in the National League—all because he learned to make his fuel for the shots on the goal rather than waste it as he used to do on the Vancouver Lions and the Winnipeg Maroons in the days when the enemies antonym, To Les Patrick goes the credit for the change, for if ever a recruit came to him with a name as a "bad man" it was Somers when the manager-coach says he merely talked common sense—but others had done so before him! Knowing Les as we do, we appreciate that he left him no particular brand of this commodity he hands out, but this case is proved more than ordinarily effective. In fact, he brought Art's petulant temper down from hallowed to 32 minutes, and this year he has served only 18 minutes—one of them being itfrey for violation of the defensive rule—all being lumped on the brand that comes from mixing it up too heavily. Somers is another recruit from the Canadian west who has made good in a big way. His was born in Winnipeg.

ALEX WEIR IS HIGH SCORER

Collects Fifteen Points in Ten League Game

A hockey fan in this city forwards the standing of the Intermediates with respect to goals and the assists garnered. The following is the article for which we thank the sender.

It is interesting to note that Alex Weir playing defence, led the Belleville hockey team in scoring during the season just finished. One point for a goal and one for an assist.

	Goals	Assists	Total
A. Weir	7	8	15
J. Leachman	4	6	10
B. Hull	6	2	8
G. McMeekin	3	2	5
R. Scott	5	1	6
A. Campbell	3	2	5
P. Morgan	3	0	3
L. Morris	2	0	2
R. St. Denis	0	1	1

It is also interesting to note that Les Tice was scored upon 28 times during the 10 game schedule which is an average of a little better than 2 goals a game. A very good record indeed.

KI-Y JUNIORS BATTLE TO TIE

Red Wings and Flyers Play 1-1 Tie in Fast Game

In a regular scheduled Ki-Y league game played in the junior series at the Belleville Arena Saturday resulted in a tie, when the Red Wings and the Flyers p.....ed fifty minutes to a one to one score.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators and was keenly contested throughout the entire game both teams were at full strength and these Ki-Y league games are attracting more attention as the league progresses.

The line-ups for Saturday's game were:

Red Wings— J. Simpson, R. Mutter, E. Jarrell, R. Burt, H. Green, and H. Thompson.

Flyers— A. Keegan, J. Boyle, T. McGuire, R. Smith, S. Robertson, B. Storms, H. Knott, A. Knott, P. Forster, H. Pointer and B. Schleider.

Gerald "Jerry" Hurley performed the duties of referee in a manner which was quite satisfactory to all concerned.

For the fourth time Canada won the Olympic hockey championship of the world when they held the fast U.S.A. team to a 2-all tie on Saturday. As Ted Hesting, the radio announcer for the final game of the series, said: after gaining a moral victory when they held the Canadians to a tie. Although Canada won the championship, they will have to look to their laurels in 1936. To say the least the Winnipegs upset the dope of the Eastern hockey moguls when they scored as many goals as they did.

Even Mayor Jimmie Walker was at the game on Saturday. Mayor Walker spoke over the radio after the game and stated that such competitive games only went to add to the better relations between two such countries as Canada and the United States.

The seventy hunters went last at it on Saturday and when they kept all packs that went over the boards. It reminded one of when Babe Ruth hits a ball into the stands and there is a wild scramble for the old apple. They never come back. It means the baseballs.

Well, to say the least Canada again won the Olympic honors and we are thankful that they achieved this much looked for honor. They scored 23 goals and had 2 scored against them. This alone is quite a record and left no doubt in the fans' minges. The Canadians will now tour the Eastern States and parts of Canada on their return home.

The Olympic games at Lake Placid have been a financial "flop" to date. The mild weather has been a detriment to the satisfactory for the winter games and there is no doubt but that the Americans have learned a lesson in the work of the Canadians as to capitalize too much on sport as entertainment rather than on the actual sport participants to rely upon.

Jewel Ens, manager of the Pirates until he was fired will be one of the coaches at Detroit next season.

Mr. Walter Reeves, of Belleville, received a wonderful average when his opponent as judge at the special show of Scotch Terriers in Hall No. 1 last week. Mr. Reeves stated that the show presented the greatest collection of Scotch Terriers that he had ever had the privilege of seeing. Mr. Reeves is considered one of the best dog judges on the North American continent.

How many old time baseball fans remember George Braidford? He used to pitch for Belleville about 35 years ago. Well to get at what we wish to inform the sport fans is merely this: Mr. Gumpelaar, who was curing for the Winnipeg curlers in Toronto last week, and they won, was a team-mate of Braidford's, when Braidford played in Galt over 30 years ago. Mr. Gumpelaar was also for the Winnipegs when they won the Western Canada title about two weeks ago.

Napanee is he'ding a big ice carnival tonight. They are having ice races and all that goes to make up a real evening's entertainment for the fans. Belleville is to be represented in the races by Jack Hornby, J. Moock, Cliff Gibson and E. Moock. All of these lads have been practising faithfully for the last month and will, no doubt, give a good account of themselves.

The local B.C.I. hockey team will now get down to work. They play three games this week. Tonight they meet the fast O.S.D. team at the local arena. On Wednesday evening the fans will see a double-header of collegiate hockey when Tweed meets O.S.D. and Napanee High School battles B.C.I. at the Belleville Arena. On Friday night the B.C.I. go to Tweed to battle the Tweed High School in a scheduled game. Coach Shiels has an excellent collection of puck-chasers and expects to be in the group title. The B.C.I. team were a credit to Belleville last year and there is no doubt, carry their honors high and long this winter.

RIOT IN NEWFOUNDLAND — PRIME MINISTER ASSAULTED

A demonstration by unemployed at St. John's, Newfoundland, resulted in the Prime Minister, Sir Richard Squires, being assaulted, and the Council Room in the Colonial House being wrecked by the mob. The invaders, numbering some 200 and supported by more than 2000 outside the Parliament Buildings, threatened to throw the Premier through a thre-storey window unless their relief rations were increased. The riot subsided when the Premier gave orders to supply the crowd with food. Above is a recent photograph of Newfoundland's Prime Minister, and a view of the Colonial House, where the trouble occurred.

Feed and Grain Dealer Tells His Side of Mild Winter FARMERS AHEAD

"This fine weather may be alright for automobile salesmen, ice-cream manufacturers and furnace dealers, but it's not good for a moment what fi has done to my business this winter," moaned a Belleville grain and feed dealer today when he came out of his store long enough this morning to observe the bright sun beaming down, whirls of dust blowing up a bare and dry street, and a reporter passing. Then he enlarged on the topic.

"If this had been an ordinary winter I would have cleared that pile out of the shed about once every two weeks." He nodded to rows of bags of shorts or middlings or whatever it is they feed livestock—which towered up to the roof in long tiers. "But it is now, though the farmers I have always depended on as good customers have been grazing their cattle all winter, letting them run outside all the year round. If the weather had been cold and if there had been as much snow on the ground as there should be they would have kept them in the barn and fed them other stuff —ensilage and bran and so on. But they've barely touched the silo this winter. And here I am stuck with lots to sell and nobody to buy.

Will Cry Together

"I'm going down and hunt up an ice man or a coal dealer, and we'll both have a good cry together. Why another month from now they'll be making dandelion wine."

"Well, that's another little angle to this weather we hadn't thought of before," remarked the silo thinker. And here I am stuck with lots to sell and nobody to buy.

"Yeh," mumbled the feed merchant, who had been over to hear the idle murmurings.

But speaking of angles, have you seen any angle worms lately—they say there's lots of them around.

Farmers Far Ahead

Further questioning among the officials connected with the dairying and farming industry reveals that farmers are far away ahead on winter stocks of silage and feed—that this has been the cheapest year for feeding—that the animals have wintered well and that the old known professionally as Mabel Ward.

MAY ESTABLISH INDIA REGENCY

Continuance of Out-Breaks Between Hindus and Moslems, Cause

Srinigar, Kashmir, India, Feb. 15 (CP cable)—Continuance of the outbreaks between Moslems and Hindus in Kashmir State have led to reports the government may create a council of ministers containing a majority of British officials.

This would establish a virtual regency for the present Hindu Maharajah and give the British authorities control of the state.

Another seventy-five houses were pillaged and burned at Mirpur yesterday. The loot of the Rhelum River was the scene of a fierce attack by Moslems in another disturbance. Fifteen Hindus and three Moslems were killed at Mirpur and five Moslems were killed at Dharmsli when a Moslem mob attacked a police party escorting Hindu refugees.

HENRY TO ANSWER HYDRO CRITICS

Expects to Hear Brunt of Attack on Behalf of Government

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—When the massed attack of the Opposition is launched against the Government on Hydro, Premier George S. Henry himself will carry the brunt of the Government's reply to the criticism, it is reliably reported in Queen's Park circles.

Not only will the Premier map the policy to be followed by the Government in what is expected will be one of the most spirited battles of recent sessions, but it is reported the Premier will also take the floor and deliver what will probably be one of the most important speeches of the whole session.

The Opposition leaders are confident that despite the Royal Commission into Hydro there will be plenty of ammunition for them to fire at the Government in connection with phases of Hydro not included in the two commission references. But the Government intends the criticism will be answered and in his speech Premier Henry, it is said, will deliver a broadside into the Opposition ranks.

That when the attack will be made by the Liberal-Progressive faction is a matter for conjecture, but it will likely come during the debate on the Speech from the Throne, which gives members plenty of latitude in what they may say. This debate resumed on Tuesday, when the leaders will hold the floor.

Mrs. Monkey Fa'ce is Undecided

By Thornton W. Burgess

Who for the children's welfare cares
The best home possible prepares.
—Mrs. Monkey-face.

Mrs. Monkey-face the Barn Owl was in a most undecided state of mind. Yes, sir; she was so. You see, she was beginning to think of the time that would soon come when she would have the care of a lot of eggs, and after that of a lot of hungry, growing children. Never before had she been so undecided. Always before eggs had been laid in a dark corner of the belfry of a church a long way from where she was now living. Never had there been any question as to where the next should be. It always had been in that particular place for the very good reason that there had been no other place suitable.

Here in Farmer Brown's big barn it was different. There were several places where the precious eggs might be laid. The trouble was that not one of those places really suited her, yet she could find none better. To begin with, the floor of the hayrack was too far below the rafters on which she and Monkey-face liked to roost, and too far below the hole in the gable window by which they entered and left the barn.

"There are two corners down there either of which could be made use of, but I don't like either one," she explained to Monkey-face. "They are dark enough to begin with. Sitting on eggs all day in a place where there is so much light would drive me crazy with impatience. That two-legged creature who comes into every day to take some of the hay would be sure to see me and scare those eggs."

"Why not make a nest in the hay way over in that dark corner where the hay is? Use up under the roof?" asked Monkey-face.

"I've thought of that. Perhaps that is what we will do," replied Mrs. Monkey-face. "It would be all right for the eggs, I suppose, but the hay would remain, but I've noticed that there is less and less hay every day. Now, I want to do if that hay should be taken while the babies were there. I must have them!"

Monkey-face couldn't. He admitted he couldn't. He shook his head dolefully. "I hadn't thought of that," said he. "I can see as it somewhere in this big barn there should be a suitable nesting place for a couple of Owls who are not too fussy."

"But I am fussy about some things" declared Mrs. Monkey-face. "I am not fussy about a nest, for I can get along without any nest at all if the place is right. But I am fussy about the place. It must be reasonably dark and it must be where we are not likely to be disturbed. I sometimes wish that we were back where we came from."

"I don't!" exclaimed Monkey-face in a most emphatic manner. "What nicer place to live than this barn can you ask for? As for living, we haven't known that it is to be one long hungry day when arrived here. No, sir; I don't want to go back, and I'll bet I can give you do either, my dear."

"I am not thinking about ourselves, I am thinking about the family we will have by and by," replied Mrs. Monkey-face. "I am trying to look ahead and plan the thing that is best for all. I hope that church belfry where we used to live is a good nursery for young Owls, and I know that there is no one in Tinkly to disturb us or them. But I haven't quite made my decide to go back there after all. Just now I am undecided, the most undecided."

"It looks to me like borrowing trouble," declared Monkey-face. "Perhaps by the time you need it you will have changed your mind the way you want."

"Perhaps," replied Mrs. Monkey-face, "but I doubt it. I've looked and looked and I am getting discouraged."

"The trouble with you is you are trying to look too far ahead," declared Monkey-face.

"I didn't, goodness knows what the result would be," retorted Mrs. Monkey-face.

YOUR CHILD —AND DOGS

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A mother made the remark one day that she wouldn't think of having a baby without a dog for it. And inasmuch as she has three young children and three dogs, I believe she meant it. Both child and dog has its own dog, and to go through childhood without owning a dog is very sad, to my way of thinking.

Dogs and babies seem to have a common understanding, an understanding which is denied all but a few grown folks, and it builds something very unselfish and considerate into the child's nature to be responsible for a small, four-footed playmate.

In the first place, even a young dog will provide good protection for baby. I have the privilege of watching this combination very near to me. Baby is just on the ground for his nap, and Buster, the dog, he heads the carriage, and even the mail carrier has to make himself known by the summons of his voice and a friendly pat before he is allowed near the sleeping infant. Strangers cause him a bark.

And with an older child, a little girl of nine, who has owned a dog one year, there is a companionship which can't help but have a good effect upon the child's attitude, not only toward all animals, but toward any living thing under or younger than she.

Last spring this little girl sent the dog angrily into the house because she had the mean idea to put a piece of cotton on the chick

Haligonians Say Columnist Wrong

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX.—When columnists write about clipper ships they should be very careful because in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick there are many old sailors and their descendants who beg the history of those majestic and colorful vessels of the last century.

A recent assertion that the American ship Dreadnaught had made the fastest Atlantic passage under sail is challenged by Roy Nicholson, 343 Robie street, Halifax, who has written the following:

"Authorities seem to agree that such a claim has no foundation in fact. I quote from "Greyhounds of the Sea" by Carl D. Cutler, (G. P. Putnam and Sons, 1930). In his article "The Frankincense of Newburyport," F. B. C. Bradlee cites the occasion when the ship left New York on February 17, 1856, and quotes Captain Samuel's letter (detailed in 1926) that the statement that she was off Queenstown nine days and seventeen hours out.

"Captain Clark disposes of this claim in seemingly conclusive manner, (p. 266 "Clipper Ship Era") giving the abstract of the Dreadnaught's log showing that when only days and twenty-one hours out from Sandy Hook she was more than 1,000 miles from Queenstown. In any case the alleged record is not a "port to port" one and, in consequence, is of little interest or significance. Captain Cape Cod's claim for what port was she bound, and how long did it take her to get there?

"The fastest crossing to the eastward would appear to be that of the McKay clipper "James Baines", made in September, 1854, from Boston Light to Rock Light, Liverpool, her time 13 days, 28 hours, 30 minutes. "Some Famous Ships and Their Builder, Donald McKay". Taking into account the distance travelled the trip of the Mary Whitridge made in 1855 from Philadelphia to the English Channel in 12½ days is perhaps the fastest crossing on record.

The 'dock to dock' record of the Red Jacket, New York to Liverpool in 13 days one hour and twenty-five minutes, September 1854, remains. However the Conquest of Saint John, N.B., made in 1855 by Captain Bowyer, "Some Famous Ships and Their Builder, Donald McKay". Taking into account the distance travelled the trip of the Mary Whitridge made in 1855 from Philadelphia to the English Channel in 12½ days is perhaps the fastest crossing on record.

"Other fast eastward trips are those of the Southampton, New York to Falmouth, June 1850, in 13 days and 12 hours; the Typhoon, Portsmouth, N.H., to Liverpool, in 13 days and 14 hours during May, 1851.

"For the westward crossing, I can find no record to equal that of the "Howard D. Troop" of Saint John, N.B. Under command of Captain Raymond Parker this steel ship is credited with a run of 12 days from Greenock to New York, February, 1902. The trip from Tory Island (North of Ireland) to Sandy Hook in New York harbor was made in 13 days, 2 hours (p. 172, "In the Wake of the Wind Ships").

"The record for wooden ships is probably held by the famous clipper s/p Andrew Jackson, Liverpool to New York in 15 days during December, 1860. This is the ship which it is said to have broken the record of the Flying Cloud, on the New York to San Francisco run.

"The picture of the Dreadnaught as "Loaded Down Flush" on the moon of the 'packet' than of the 'extreme clipper' build. I believe that the first six crossings were made in 24½ days. Also that during her longer career her speed was less than 264 miles. This figure has been exceeded by a good many American clippers.

"The Howard P. Troop is credited with 351 miles on September 21, 1900, under command of Captain Smith. The famous McKay clipper ships Lightning and Donald McKay, Sovereign of the Seas, and James Baines, are credited with runs of 473, 421, 430 and 423 miles respectively.

"Apparently it took a 'greyhound of the seas' to cross the Atlantic in record time under sail in the 'Golden Age of Sail.' Such being the case, the Dreadnaught's record will stand a lot of 'proving'."

STREET CAR HITS TRAIN

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP)—A street car Saturday night crashed into a freight car of the C.P.R. at the Ontario Agricultural College line.

Robert Whetstone, motorman, was slightly injured and a number of women students from MacDonald Institute escaped with a shaking up.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL IS BROKEN INTO

Sacred Vessels Thrown on Floors and Damaged Class Rooms

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 15.—(By the Canadian Press)—Canadian Martyrs' Roman Catholic school was broken into overnight by vandals, who threw sacred vessels upon the floor of the Chapel, damaged class rooms and attempted to pry open the door of a tabernacle. Damage was not large. Last October vandals forced an entrance to St. Mary's Roman Catholic pro-Cathedral here and did considerable damage.

So far as could be learned, nothing was stolen from the school.

Stockholm, Feb. 15 (CP)—The Swedish government has indicated its intention to extend until May 15 the suspension of the gold standard, according to today's newspaper.

University of Toronto Reduces Staff Salaries on Sliding Scale Basis

Pay Cut to Apply March 1 on Same Lines as of Civil Servants

GOVT REQUEST

Tuition Fees in Arts Will Rise From $75 to $100 Next Session

Toronto, Feb. 15—Salaries of instruction members of the University of Toronto staff, including the administrative, teaching and operating sections, will be reduced as of March 1, on the same sliding scale basis recently promulgated by the Ontario Government for civil servants and cabinet ministers.

Coupled with this week-end announcement, decided upon by the University board of governors at its meeting last Thursday, was another spring notice of increased fees to file for Arts students, in the Arts unit of the University proper (University College) and of the federated universities and Arts colleges, Victoria University, the Province of Trinity College and St. Michael's College. The fees will rise from $75 to $100 a year, effective with the 1932-33 session, and will be accompanied by an enlargement of the loan and bursary funds for needy and deserving students.

While the University and the federated colleges are identical in raising fees, the independent colleges are not affected by the salary reduction and thus far have not considered any move in that direction, it was learned. The affiliated colleges, under their own finances, it was pointed out, and in any event the salary schedules at these institutions are lower by far than at University College and the other units of the federated University of Toronto as a whole.

Requested by Government

The executive and finance board of governors of the University "reluctantly found it necessary to make," it quote the official announcement were made at the request of the Government, and with a view to conforming with the governmental pay cuts as the departments directly under its control, it was announced by Canon H. J. Cody chairman of the board of governors.

Another official remarked that since the University was almost entirely supported by the provincial treasury, an "invidious distinction" would be drawn if its employees' salaries were left intact after the civil service salary schedule had been decreased.

It was also understood that provincial authorities had been more insistent than usual that the university should be pared down, to permit an obviously consequent shrinkage in the grant that will be necessary for the government to contribute to the University during the next year or so. While the Government did not directly suggest a salary cut, it was said, it indicated that its own example in aiding that line could hardly be ignored by the University.

Considering the salary reduction in conjunction with the approaching jump in tuition fees at University College, as well as reduction in other expenses to be effected by the University, it is estimated that the governorship will need to contribute between $85,000 and $100,000 less to the university during the coming year.

The estimated year's saving from the salary reductions is set at between $50,000 and $60,000, the 1,200 Arts students in University College will contribute $30,000 more revenue through the $25 increase in fees, and savings of from $5,000 to $10,000 will be made in other directions, it is expected.

Lives Life of Riley At Other's Expense

Calgary, Alta. (By The Canadian Press)—Goldilocks and her temporary occupation of the home of the three bears of fairy-tale fame had nothing on a bold intruder of a Calgary home. The modern intruder was arrested—he lived in grand style several days and then made his exit, leaving plenty of dirty dishes behind him.

Police still are on the hunt for the culprit. He sought the comfort of the home of R. G. Woods and, in South Calgary, while the family was absent from the city. When Woodward returned he found the residence in the front room burning a cheerful welcome. In the kitchen the gas stove was giving the meter a run for its money while stacks of dirty dishes were piled on tables and chairs. Several days' supply of food was missing.

PRINCE GEORGE IS GIVEN COAL SCUTTLE

London (By The Canadian Press) —Prince George was given a coal scuttle recently when he visited the Carron Iron Works at Falkirk, His Royal Highness opened a new infirmary at Falkirk which had cost $500,000, and he also planted a hawthorn tree. At the iron works Peter Hill, aged 81, the oldest employee, shook hands with the Prince and handed him a photograph of Falkirk, relic which the Prince said he would treasure as an interesting memento of the visit.

SALT DOES NOT HURT CEMENT

Residents Perfectly Safe in Sprinkling Salt on Walks

"Sodium chloride—ordinary table salt—does not affect cement. It does not deteriorate the walks in front of residences, when sprinkled on them to remove by melting any ice or snow which may be there, and the other cement surface, if that cement has been well mixed in the beginning with a proper aggregate, has had time to acquire property and is free on the surface from pores and voids to allow the salt to penetrate."

That was the opinion of the letter received from one of the highest authorities that could be found on this matter that has been under discussion in this city for some time, Mr. A. B. Lemoine of the advertising and technical department of the Canada Cement Company.

City Engineer Mott remarked today: "I have never heard of any legislation prohibiting use of salt on any cement walks. As far as the department is concerned, it is all right." He cited the case of Ocean City, where for minute after minute after ice and snow had begun to melt and refused to freeze again in the day time, sprinkling of salt on the roadways and was also copied in other parts. But right away some of the police in other towns drew the attention to the authorities to the fact this it was supposed to be against the law to do so and was claimed that the practice was injurious to the cement—that the salt would have a corrosive effect even on the cement. When word reached the city that this was being done in other cities, prohibiting the act in this city, the police authorities on this paper began to "has his doors." Thinking of concrete sea walls all over the world, and numerous other tanks and so on that have been standing for years without any appreciable effect, he at once wrote to the Canada Cement Canada Cement Company. The letter they sent is reproduced below:

"We should not think it injurious to a concrete surface that has been well cured and made with non-porous aggregate, with just enough water in the mixture to obtain the plasticity required, to lay and work the cement.

"Sodium chloride would have a mechanical effect on porous concrete surfaces as the salt solution penetrates the pores. On the other hand, concrete is used for the construction of tanks made to store hot and cold brine for industrial purposes. We believe that the picking and grading of snow plows or other tools would have a much more harmful effect on sidewalks.

"We are enclosing a booklet, in which you will find the result of a survey made on scores of tanks made to hold brine at various temperatures. You will notice that concrete is used almost exclusively for this purpose and the fact substantiates our opinion on this matter."

Signed: A. R. Lemoine,
Advertising and Technical Department.

16 Year Old Boy In Solo Flight

Calgary, Alta., (By The Canadian Press)—Believed to be the youngest pilot in Canada, 16-year old George Scott made a solo flight in an aeroplane at Bassano, Alta., recently, George made the flight in the plane owned by his father, Dr. A. G. Scott, who is known as the "Flying Doctor."

Mr. Scott has travelled thousands of miles in his Gypsy moth 'plane making his round of calls by air. He is one of Alberta's flying notables which include George Ross of Lethbridge, the "Flying Rancher," and Bishop Geddes, the "Flying Bishop of the MacKenzie Diocese."

Dr. Scott's air-minded son was taught to fly by Howard Sandgate, Calgary aviator, who revealed the youngster's natural aptitude for the air. Young Scott has named George the "Flying Child."

Compulsory Health Insurance in B. C.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 15.—Compulsory State health insurance in British Columbia for all employed persons with not incomes up to $2,400 per year, and optional insurance for the remainder of the population, were the recommendations of the State Health Insurance Commission, whose final report is now in the hands of the Government. The scheme would provide for free medical services, including drugs and appliances. The insured would be given free choice of doctors, within reasonable limit.

GRAND JURY IS UPHELD

Justice McCardie Says He Favors Retention of System

London (By The Canadian Press) —In charging the Grand Jury at the opening of the Cambridge Assizes recently, Hon. Sir Henry A. McCardie, Justice of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, took occasion to speak in support of the British Grand Jury system which is being condemned in some quarters as out of step with the times. His Lordship said:

"It is well in these days that the public should realize that a Grand Jury possesses high constitutional rights. It may reject any Bill that is made before it; it may indict upon its own initiative.

"In my view it is desirable that the Grand Jury system should be retained at assizes throughout the country. I see no reason to forgather the leading men and women of the county, and that they may join in the administration of justice. Because the Grand Jury is directly associated with the Judge of Assize in dealing with serious crime that may occur. Because a Grand Jury represents an important element in the life of the Constitution.

"In these dangerous and bureaucratic times no one can foresee the day when the Grand Jury may not become the last and supreme national importance. I emphasize there fore that we should emphasize the importance of maintaining the security and independence of His Majesty's Judges.

"For generations past these Judges have been a bulwark against selfish oppression. If once the security and independence of judges be destroyed or impaired then a British institution will have passed away. I mention this because of recent attempts and recent events that I regard with deep feel ing for further.

"I would say to you, as I would say to the whole British people, that if that prestige, independence and security are once destroyed it will be impossible to restore them fully again in the future."

CANADA WINS OLYMPIC TITLE IN REAL GAME

Scores Tying 2-2 Goal With 33 Seconds to Go

WINS ROUND 4-3.

Maintain Stonewall Defence in 30 Minutes' Overtime

Lake Placid, Feb. 15—Canada won her fourth consecutive Olympic hockey title after a bitter struggle with an aggressive United States team here Saturday afternoon, holding the Americans to a 2-2 tie through 30 minutes of overtime play. The vaunted defensive skill of the Winnipegs was strained to the limit as the United States team bored in with the hope of an extra period goal to decide the title.

Having beaten the Americans 2-1 in overtime in their first meeting, the Canadians were two points up, and held desperately to their draw yesterday, the extra point confirming them as 1932 Olympic champions.

The United States never before made such a potent threat to gain the world's hockey supremacy, which Canada has so jealously guarded as her own since the game was admitted as an Olympic sport. The Winnipeg Falcons, Toronto Granites and Varsity Grads have all maintained Canada's traditional supremacy in the hockey world and now the title reverts to the hockey team from the western city.

Out from Under

Saturday they harassed Winnipegs twice struggled out from underneath to tie the score as the United States unleashed a surprisingly effective attack and covered up with a nearly impregnable defense.

With a minute to go the Canadians were beaten 2-1. Norman Rivers flung a hard drive at the United States goalie which bounced just inside the blue line, and the red light flashed just 33 seconds before the third period bell rang.

Rivers' goal gave the Canadians another chance for the three ten-minute overtime periods they stood solidly on the defensive and turned back the opposition. Devastating backchecking and crushing body checks disrupted those drives of the questing United States forwards. Winnipegs heaved the puck down to the other end of the ice as often as they could and made their opponents skate after it.

It was a hard and rugged game with the ultimate issue very much in doubt from the third overtime period had ticked away. The Winnipegs were surprised by the first strength of the United States squad and barely escaped the first game. Saturday they nearly made the same error. The game was barely two minutes old when the losers put the puck in the net. Big Bill Cockburn, Everett standard into the Winnipeg's defense and took a pass from Moe Roberts, slammed the rubber into the cage as it lounged his stick.

A little shaken by the unexpected turn of events, the Winnipegs worked for a few minutes and then settled into the attack. The United States defense of Cockburn and Garrison turned them back with heavy bodychecks. "Hack" Simpson, lumbering 185 pound Winnipeg reserve defenseman, finally broke through. Serene and unruffled, Hack fought off the defense with a heavy shoulder. He swung right up to the goal mouth and drew Farrell out before he shoved the puck in.

U. S. In Lead Again

The Winnipeg look if for a while then and the United States took the lead again. Two Winnipegs were sitting in the penalty box when Palmer scooped a rebound and sent a bullet-like shot glancing off Cockburn's leg into the Canadian goal.

The Canadians, unwilling to go through another such game Saturday, came back with a whirlwind finish in the third period, but the United States defense would not bend. The U.S. attack formed in the middle of blue sweaters in front of Farrell and dumped the Winnipegs in the ice when they checks at every attack. Rivers' snipe shot from the wing solved the problem and Canadian supporters settled through the packed arena breathed easier.

End Piles Quick

No Salves—No Cutting

Your itching bleeding, protruding piles will go when your sluggish blood circulation is checked, blood circulation in the weak, flabby parts restored. That is the secret here. Salves or cutting can't do this—but strong medicine must do it. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Hemmeter, has proven success by it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood heals and restores the almost dead parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record right in this City, that J. M. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.

In parts of Ireland a game similar to donkey-per is played with a table fork.

FIND FLINT LOCK OF GUN

Probably Relic of Indian Days on Lesser Slave Lake

Calgary, Alta. (By The Canadian Press)—From Lesser Slave Lake comes a relic of the days when the Sioux Indian journeyed to the north and the south on the war path against the Cree of the North. The relic is a flint-lock from an ancient gun, found by fishermen in one of their nets as they, toiled on the lake. It has found a resting place in the Calgary Museum.

It is believed that a Cree Indian, paddling his canoe across the lake was killed by a pursuing Sioux war party and plunged to the lake's bottom, rifle in hand.

Another valued gift to the museum is one from Robert F. Russell, of Calgary. It is a solid silver nugget tea spoon, presented to Captain Marmaduke Russell by Queen Elizabeth back in the days when Sir Walter Raleigh introduced tea to England.

Quick Action Frustrated Plans Laid by Louis Riel

Regina, Sask. (By The Canadian Press)—Quick action by the government frustrated well-laid plans to snatch Louis Riel, noted leader of the Saskatchewan rebellion of 1885, from the gallows at Regina. After his death Mr. Hamilton arranged for burial at a little church property and, with his friend, stood guard over the grave remembering died down. Mr. Hamilton later accompanied the remains to St. Boniface, Man., where proper interment was made.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

He was not Steven Barclay. How did she know how quickly she thought, by any hasty or misjudged attempt to precipitate him into her life, turn that expression of boredom on the face of a dreamer.

She did not amplify her bare statement.

He was shocked.

"Did you believe me," he asked after a pause, "when I told the manager my name was Smith?"

"If you say it's Smith," Ellen observed irrelevantly, "then it must be Smith."

Her tone was clear, her eyes limpid and innocent. It was the man's turn to flush.

"I'm afraid you won't understand," he began uncomfortable before that lucid gaze, "but anyhow I must explain. My name isn't Smith. Why I said it was I hadn't decided—"

"Whether or not you'd trust me with the secret," Ellen supplied smoothly.

She was not offended. Larry drew a breath of relief.

"You've being darn nice about it," he said. "Well, anyhow my name is Larry Harrowgate, age 27, occupation artists of sorts, prospects nothing!"

"I'm to take that as a warning?" "If you want to take it that way," they both laughed ecstatically.

"No, but seriously," he presently resumed in a voice which he tried hard to make brisk and sensible, "did you mean what you said—about the floor? Do you really like it?"

"Seriously," she answered dutifully, although she still bubbled with excitement and laughter, "I do."

"Then that's that," he observed in satisfaction. "We're through with all the preliminaries. Now we can settle down and really get to know each other."

They were interrupted by a waiter demanding their order. Larry professed to a ravenous appetite and not even Ellen's warning that the food might be bad prevented him from selecting almost everything on the bill of fare. When the waiter withdrew he began to rally her.

"What's wrong with you?" he inquired solicitously. "Are you a canary bird? I never saw a girl before who wouldn't eat on the slightest provocation."

"I didn't want to order anything," Ellen confessed in growing embarrassment. "Besides, I get a percentage on what you pay."

"How foolish youngster! I would not think you were a profiteer even if you'd ordered a diamond necklace. I couldn't have paid for it, but then—you'll have to eat half of everything."

But when the food arrived, sandwiches and cakes and a bowl of steaming chow mein, decorated with slivers of chicken, neither wanted to eat. They wanted to dance again and again, to dance forever or until they dropped from exhaustion. Like children on a holiday they skirted about the floor. Again and again they discovered with pleased and startled exclamations how well their steps fitted. Amazing, thrilling to change quickly from the decorous pace of the dance to the rowdy breathless complications of the cakewalk. Charleston—dancing to dance with someone who moved almost as you moved.

The whole day had been the most exciting of Ellen's life. She almost wished it would never end. But the ending, when it came, was sweeter still.

"You make a big difference to me," Larry summarized it with sincere fervor. "Just finding you, Ellen dear, is my summer for me."

"Me!—I'm glad," she said shyly.

"We'll go places and see things. You'll have to, of course, but I'm sure you won't we? What do you say, Ellen?"

"Oh, grand," she murmured.

Then in the midst of her pleasure she wondered why he'd asked anything more definite. She felt that he must have known that she thought he knew where to find her. If he never returned she must go to the main silent. How did she know how many girls he had laughed with just as he had laughed with her.

"What about tomorrow at ten?" he was asking eagerly. "You don't work Saturday afternoon, do you?"

She drew a long, fluttering breath "I'd love it."

She was gone.

CHAPTER VI

Ellen had never before realized how many steps there were in the two long flights that led to her own home. She was really very tired but her thoughts constantly flew back and hurried not to stop. The hall was dark and stuffy, piled up at the landings with rubbish a wailing Hamilton's disposition. The house was asleep, thankfully. Ellen knew she could hear the heavy sound of breathing and even the restless tossings of the sleepers. At the second floor she identified the familiar moaning sound as Papa Clarke's snore.

She chuckled and pushed on.

Halfway between the fourth floor and the fifth, she paused in surprise to see light shining from the living room door at the front of her own apartment. Oh, dear, someone was still awake! All the way home on the subway she had planned to creep straight into bed and drift off to sleep on the tide of her own glamorous imaginings. She did not want to share those imaginings or to discuss her experiences of the day. Now there was no help for it.

With a resigned sigh she unlocked the door and stepped into the Rossiter living room. Molly Rossiter, bright-eyed and wide-awake, sat at a battered mahogany table playing solitaire. Molly's solitaire was the joke of the family. Whenever she was beaten it was her habit to rearrange the cards and to proceed with the play. By faithfully adhering to that system she never failed to run out all her cards.

"I've just beaten old Sol," she announced innocently as Ellen entered.

Then she sprang up and ran to greet her daughter.

"Sh! down, darling," she urged. "You look tired..so death. Do you want coffee? Shall I rat it or will you make it yourself? Did you have a good time? Tell me everything."

"Help, help," pleaded Ellen faintly, as she sank into a chair and pushed her hair back off her damp forehead. "Don't bother to give me a chance. I'm winded. Don't bother about coffee. I'm going straight to bed."

"Not before you tell me all about it, are you" Molly wailed in childish disappointment.

"You should have gone to bed, honey," Ellen told her, as her temporary annoyance faded, "but since you didn't, what do you want to know especially?"

"I couldn't have slept a wink," Molly protested earnestly, clasping her hands about her bare knees. "I was too anxious to hear about everything—about the dress particularly. Did you look beautiful! Where is it?"

"It's in Dreamland. I guess I looked all right," Ellen tackled the questions in reverse order.

"Ellen don't be so provoking! You aren't telling me anything! You only said over the phone that Mr. Barclay had lent it to you. What was he like? Was he nice?"

Ellen understood that Molly wanted to know whether or not Barclay had been personal. Her mother was trembling with eagerness to share Barclay's every intonation, his every facial expression. What had he said to her? What had he said? How had he looked? She wanted to know not only what Ellen had thought but even what Ellen thought Barclay had thought. In short she was prepared for a sentimental orgy.

Ellen could not help being mildly irritated when her mother was in such a mood.

"He was rather nice," she answered listlessly. "He's quite old, you know—not likely to be sentimental. But extremely kind."

"Then you saw him only in his office"?

"He drove me to Dreamland," Ellen conceded reluctantly.

"Ellen, that's simply marvelous!" Molly exclaimed ecstatically. "I was sure this morning that something was going to happen. I told you. Don't you remember?"

"Oh stop it!" Ellen wanted to cry.

But she managed to hold her tongue. Molly lost in romantic speculations, saw nothing of her daughter's disgust. Now did Ellen's patient and not quite truthful assurances that Barclay had said his one word to indicate anything except friendly interest, dislodge Molly from her fixed intrenched notion that he had fallen in love with Ellen upon first sight of her.

Ellen forgot how important the meeting with Barclay had seemed before that other meeting at Dreamland. She forgot that there had been nothing pallid about Steven Barclay's image in her mind until she had looked into Larry Harrowgate's shining, admiring eyes.

Not until Barclay and the drive through the park had been pretty thoroughly gone into was she allowed to go to bed. Then at last Ellen had failed to elicit—the story of the meeting with Larry Harrowgate.

Ellen woke in the morning to hear subdued giggles. Something furry brushed across her nose and she opened her eyes upon Mitzi's kitten. Buzz, scampered to the edge of the bed, pulled Mitzi into her arms and tossed his hair . . until squealed with delight.

"Oh gee," gasped Mike, after a few minutes of uproarious roughhousing, "I'm glad you're up. Some pin came for you. That's why I came to wake you up."

"What came?"

"A great big long box with lots of green stuff in it."

Flowers! From Larry? Ellen was out of bed in a flash and into the living room. Myra and Molly were both at the table examining a giant corsage.

"It's from McClelland's!" Myra called out excitedly. "Mother and I thought you'd never get up. Did Mike wake you?"

MR. AND MRS.— TRIALS A WIFE HAS TO PUT UP WITH

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 35.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The panther undercloud even less than the apes. Now that the blacks were disposed of, Sheeta walked slowly back and forth about the stake, rubbing its sides against the ape-man's legs and purring like a contented tabby. Tarzan wondered at the absence of Muganthi. Had the apes devoured his black friend? To all his questions, Akut, the great ape, merely pointed in the direction of the jungle.

The night passed with Tarzan still fast bound to the stake. Toward dawn his fears were realized—the blacks were returning! Already they were preparing for a rush to recapture the village. Tarzan thought only of his little son somewhere in this cruel, relentless wilderness. That and the growing conviction that perhaps Jane had somehow—somewhere—fallen into Rokoff's clutches were all that weighed now on his brave heart.

Help from his devoted beast, all that he could hope for, had come to him in the instant of his extremity—and failed! "Tirsee," he thought, "are surely my last moments of life." There seemed nothing further for which to hope. Now the savages were yelling like fiends and half across the clearing. Suddenly, Tarzan heard a shrill scream come from the village. It was the familiar enamored call of Sheeta—he saw the stalwart figure of Muganthi running toward him.

The huge black man was panting heavily as though from strenuous exertion. He rushed to Tarzan's side, and as the first of the savages reached the village gate, the knife of Muganthi severed the last of the cords that bound Tarzan to the stake. Seizing a spear from a fallen savage, Tarzan, with Muganthi at his side and the snarling pack about him, rushed at the natives just as they poured through the gate.

ELECTRICITY MAY PUT END TO MOSQUITOES

Electrical Furnace Supplies "Hum" to Draw Them

IS LIKE DRONE

Lynn, Mass.—By producing electrically a typical "mosquito hum" the mating song of the female mosquito, thus luring the males, it may be possible for mankind to overcome the mosquito pest, a discovery that engenders such a hope has just been reported by Professor Elihu Thomson, director of the research laboratory of the General Electric Company here.

Thousands of male mosquitoes met death last summer in the electrical laboratory directed by Professor Thomson because tuned electrical energy into the resistance heating of the furnace produced the hum of the female mosquito. Attracted by the loud drone could be heard through-out the plant surrounding the building. It was evidently audible for a long distance, for an extensively marshy district just outside the plant, 70 mosquitoes in that locality by actual count, have seemed like the chant of a multitude of male voices singing in unison in chorus. They consequently flew into the trap. The investigator had but a few moments later everything dead upon the cover of the furnace where the electric hum was numbers, were observed by th laboratory staff.

Professor George H. Parker of the department of zoology at Harvard told Professor Thomson there is plausibility in the explanation which Professor Thomson advanced. Female mosquitoes, professor Parker said, are lured by the males, but the males are silent.

"The three-phase 60-cycle hum of the heaters in the furnace," said Professor Thomson, "is to my ear an exact representation of the note one hears as a female mosquito flies into one's room in the night. It is notable that in spite of the great numbers of flies there were no reports of bites from the men employed in the furnace house. The males of the flies bit but they fail to do it attempting to secure nutrition, for the nourishment and development of the eggs which they proceed to lay in the standard pools.

magnetic 'hummer' which, at small expense of energy, can spread over a large space its peculiar hum and attract the males; perhaps also repelling the females. Various ways of trapping the males may be suggested, as they may be dessicated or cooked to get rid of them. They may be burned, or drowned, or shocked.

"Certainly, if the male can be drawn to a spot and destroyed the energy-laying power of the female would be curtailed and we shall have a great diminuation in the mosquito population. It is possible even that the race of them can be thus decimated or extinguished by proper utilization of these principles."

The hum may not be fatal when each residence will include with other sinister equipment, a little electric "zee sterfetter" handy and inexpensive, which upon being plugged into the house circuit will send out the properly tuned hum in just sufficient volume to lure the males from all parts of the grounds, destroy them and finally altogether eliminate the mosquito by allowing not more than one generation to breed in a season.

Accompanied at Time of Shooting

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 13 (CP)—Police yesterday said they had obtained from George Anderson, singer, a statement in which he said ago under mysterious circumstances, an admission that he was not alone when he was wounded.

Anderson, they said, refused to name the man or persons with him at the time of the shooting.

Anderson was found seriously wounded in his automobile on a lonely country road near here. Police said they expected he would give them further information as his condition improved. He was lodged in his throat, will be removed in a few days.

EMPIRE CABINET SUGGESTED

London, Feb. 15 (CP cable) — Empire cabinet, comprising a representative of each Dominion and two or three British statesmen would be a valuable institution at the present time.

The newspapers reached this conclusion in editorials which discussed the appointment of Right Hon. Stanley Melbourne Bruce, assistant treasurer of Australia, as "Minister Representing the Commonwealth" at London.

So stringent are bar examinations today that only 465 out of every 1,000 aspiring lawyers ever pass them.

The air route from San Francisco to Chicago is 1,930 miles.

Half England Owners of Radio

London (By TheCanadian Press) —Half the homes in the British Isles are possessed by radios, according to wireless figures for 1931 issued by the Post Office Department. Government revenue, including 28,000 free licenses for the blind, from over 4,250,000 licenses in force on Dec. 31, 1931, an increase of 900,000 during the year. The increase is easily a record the previous licenses being 844,000 in 1930. An official at Savoy Hill admitted to a reporter that the British Broadcasting Corporation itself was pleased. "But we shall not be satisfied," he added, "until they are all." he said, "This would make a total of about 9,000,000 licenses."

BEST METHOD FOR RESULTS

Praise, Not Reproof, Has Been Established By Tests

Calgary, Alta. (By The Canadian Press)—Praise is the best method of obtaining results from children. Tests recently made by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene (Alberta division) with 1,000 boys and girls in schools from grades four and six, revealed that a gain of 89% was brought better returns than a vigorous clap administered to 11%.

The children were divided into three groups of equal ability—the first group was given commendation lavished on them, the second group was reproved for poor work and general inferiority and the third group was left entirely alone. The first group received no recognition whatever and the same treatment was meted out to the second group. This lasted for four days.

The first day's results showed that the Praised group averaged 20 problems correct per hour. The Reproved group mastered only 14.1 problems; the Ignored group scarcely made any gain. After the second day's test, the difference was still greater in accuracy.

Children must have a motive for their work, the committee report points out. Praise by all means proved the most effective. The Condemned group was doing merely for the mechanical task; the motive of the Ignored group fluctuated between fear of reproof and a desire for praise; the Reproved group responded to fear and the best effects of reproof soon were off."

ORDER PRISONERS TO BE STRAPPED

Deputy Provincial Secretary Acts After Outbreak at Guelph

Toronto, Feb. 15—Aggrieved at what they considered was an unfair curtailment of their privileges, 50 prisoners in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph staged a serious disturbance in the dining room of the institution last Monday. Secretary was maintained by the Provincial Secretary's department for nearly a week, but C. P. Nealands, Deputy Provincial Secretary, when approached last night, admitted that there had been trouble.

"The policy of economy in expenditures has been extended to institutions as well," said Mr. Nealands. "We have cut down on the tobacco ration and on fresh meat and other commodities, but the men have no reason to complain. It was discovered by the superintendent, Mr. John Hunter, that about 50 of the 300 in the dining-room at the time started shouting and stamping their feet. They yelled that they were hungry. What would happen would be a reduction in the amount of food. Guards were rushed in and they removed them one by one. One of the guards received a cut on the face from a pitcher thrown by one of the prisoners, but it was not serious.

"The superintendent communicated with me and I ordered an immediate investigation of the complaints. Finding that the ringleaders were hardened criminals in the main and that their complaints had no grounds, I ordered that they be given 10 strokes of the strap.

Must Maintain Discipline

"Discipline must be maintained," continued Mr. Nealands. "Most of the men involved in the disturbance had served terms in the penitentiary and had been sent to Guelph to finish incomplete sentences. There are 800 prisoners at present, and among such a large number there are always some who endeavor to cause unrest and affect discipline. They have had no reason to complain. Instead of giving each man a pint of beer every forty-fourth night they were given a package every fifth night. This was one of the economies we put into effect. The men are required to do a good day's work and that is what caused this group to stage a disturbance.

"These men get plenty of wholesome food, and there are thousands of respectable, law-abiding citizens in the province today who can't get enough food to eat," declared Mr. Nealands.

Embarrassing Moments

Eskimo Villages Vanish Beneath Arctic Floods

NOME, Alaska, Feb. 10.—From fastnefees north of Muskokwim recently were the scene of a "ghastly tragedy" in which floods were reported to have wiped out seven Eskimo villages. The bodies of numerous victims have been found escaping in ice. Information reaching here today is that tlie floods struck a great stretch of country, possibly several hundred square miles in extent, just before Christmas. The report was brought overland to the mouth of the Yukon and mailed here in a letter. After the waters from numerous streams and high winds had subsided, the message said, severe freezing weather set in. The low-lying mainland east of Nelson Island was the district in which the floods were most severe. Serious floods have occurred there before, old-timers here recalled. With little high country to which to escape, the inhabitants of the villages were trapped, the letter said. Partial confirmation of the floods, residents here pointed out, could be seen in the fact that at about that time high waters and floods occurred as far north as Nome, 260 miles, were scalp injuries.

TROOPS MASS ON BOTH SIDES FOR BIG PUSH

apan Has at Least 25,000 Men and Ample Equipment

WILL PROTEST

ettlement Officials Object to Landing of Nippanese in Concession

Shanghai, Feb. 15.—A battle at would make hostilities around Shanghai during the next four days a mere skirmish appeared inevitable today as both Chinese and Japanese massed more and more troops all along a chapel-Woosung battlefront.

The coming of bloodshed on a large scale seemed all the more certain as feverish efforts of neutral mediators to avoid it met with failure every where. Japanese and Chinese staffs and French ministers sent all of Sunday seeking a loophole which might open the way for new kind of negotiations, but found none. Meanwhile, the Japanese Influential Chinese themselves in numerous conferences tryin to find some means of peace, but the early hours of Monday found them most pessimistic. The conference was T. V. Soong and H. H. Kung, both former ministers in the former Nanking government.

Although the Japanese completed landing of soldiers from seven transports at Woosung Sunday, in the tactical settlement yesterday, large numbers of reserves were still busy today unloading equipment, which they intended for a "big push." Besides Desperate Resistance

The Japanese concealed the number and disposition of troops along the battle line but military observers estimated that they had at least 7000 men and ample modern equipment ready for battle. The Chinese likewise continued to dig into their positions and predict that they would die before they gave in.

The Chinese manpower was apparently equal to the Japanese, if not greater, but their equipment, reserves believed, was far inferior. Out of the holds of the Japanese transports came tanks, howitzers, and heavy artillery, aerial bombs and cavalry equipment. Many Mongolian ponies and mules, which apparently were intended to give the Japanese greater mobility in the marshy ground in the Shanghai region, where tanks might be handicapped, were brought ashore.

Japanese ministerial officials today said they would call their governor's attention to the landing of thousands of Japanese troops in the International Settlement area.

It was said the Japanese gave the Chinese 24 hours notice of the movement, a definite promise that other Japanese troops, if brought in, would not land anywhere in the International Settlement. At that time the Japanese Consul General, Kumatsu Murrati, said no landing troops in the International Settlement was contemplated.

The Protest Pertinent

The Shanghai municipal council will protest the landing on the ground that the agreement which created and maintained for twenty years the present extensive purposes against China or any other power.

The latest word from the Japanese officials as to their intentions was denied that a Japanese invasion was at hand and explained that the only object in sending Shanghai of large troops forces is to make the place safe. He said he still hoped for peaceful settlement involving voluntary withdrawal of both Chinese and Japanese.

His last night Rear-Admiral S. Isimada commanding the naval forces of the Japanese, told correspondents that in view of the Japanese attitude it probably would be necessary to land troops.

The admiral intimated that if the Chinese troops did not voluntarily withdraw the Japanese would drive them back perhaps 30 miles from the boundaries of the International Settlement.

Western Farm Women Meet to Thrash Out Problems

Call For State Medicine and Commerce Study of Birth Control

MUCH DISCUSSION

Edmonton, Alta. (By The Canadian Press)—Women's social endeavor in the west was the keynote of the opening session of the annual convention of the United Farm Women of Alberta here yesterday. Both rural and urban problems were discussed in resolution from and passed upon by United Farm Women of Alberta at their recent convention. The organization met simultaneously with conventions of United Farmers of Alberta.

Leaders in prairie political and social life addressed the four-day convention. When delegates left for their rural homes, much had been done to thrash out problems confronting the farmer and home-wife.

Intense interest in the social life in Russia was manifested. Opening an address, J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member of the house of commons for Winnipeg north centre, commented: "I don't know much what I should talk to you." "The women of Russia", came a voice. Cries of affirmation followed.

"Women generally," the labor parliamentarian said "have attained equality with men in Russia. Perhaps it is an equality which you would not enjoy, as we saw them digging ditches and sweeping streets side-by-side with men. But it is the only place where there are few or no women, but I believe if there were a war they might be drafted."

Although many delegates came from drought-stricken areas of Southern Alberta, all maintained a courageous outlook and displayed the optimistic spirit pervasive in the province. A resolution for the legislature member for Gleichen, offered a stark picture of conditions "where there is not enough to feed a gopher, let alone a crop of eggs," she said, "and if any, none to spare for sale. In some places even chicken little has not been used while green as a vegetable."

Affirming their former stand, delegates voted in favor of a system of state medicine. Geo. Hoadley, provincial minister of health, expressed his personal conviction that eventually the work of combating health units will have to be extended to take in curative medicine as well as the present preventive work. A resolution was passed requesting the executive to investigate the whole problem of birth control and to report to the next annual convention.

Right of girls to compete in provincial field crops competition was restored, following representations by a committee to the Alberta department of agriculture. The competition was opened in 1930 but the prize girls were barred, because many women in Alberta operate farms and women, but not girls, may succeed rights, the committee took up the question.

Swedish Agriculture Shows Changing Trend

Stockholm, Sweden (By The Canadian Press)—The lighter standard of living in Sweden in late years is reflected in the trend towards highly specialized and scientifically managed agriculture. A review of Swedish agriculture just issued by Ernst Holtz gives much interesting data with the general conclusion the entire trend is in connection with the cereals and animal produce required by a population that has every decade grown stronger economically.

A remarkable movement city-wards has taken place in the last half century so that today, while the total agricultural production has trebled, the agricultural population itself has decreased by 40 per cent.

Cultivation of rye and oats has decreased a great deal in the past 10 years while that of wheat has considerably increased. Potatoes are generally grown on the farms for home consumption, however, the profitable sugar beet growing has been greatly reduced owing to the importation of cheap cane sugar.

The area of grassland has grown especially in the northern part of the country. More than four-fifths of the vegetable produce is used for the feeding of domestic animals, of which line of Swedish agriculture has scored its greater successes.

Throughout the animal stock of cattle has not increased since before the War, improved methods such as feeding have made the production of milk per cow considerably more than doubled. Similarly owing to the fall in prices, while the breeding of pigs has developed rapidly, the largest stocks of pigs are on the small farms in the south of Sweden. At present there is a yearly output of pork and bacon of close to 141,000 tons, of which only 30 per cent is exported. The total surplus of animal products exports reach a value of about $27,000,000 annually, however, is more than offset by the surplus import of cereals and products thereof.

ELECTIONS IN IRELAND START BY BLOODSHED

Government Party Candidate and Detective Killed By Gun Fire

SUSPECT ARRESTED

Cosgrave in Final Speech Blames De Valera, Followers' Methods

Dublin, Feb. 15.—(UP)—A volley of gunfire, which killed one government party candidate and one detective, marked the first outbreak of violence today in the Irish Free State campaign for Tuesday's general elections.

Patrick Fogarty, member of President William T. Cosgrave's Cumann Na Ngaedheal party, and a detective named McGeehan were killed while electioneering in Parfait. Reynolds was a candidate for re-election to the Lower Chamber of Parliament.

A former policeman named Lidgy was arrested. Reynolds and McGeehan were emerging from Liddy's home when the shots were fired.

Reynolds was a prominent politician and chairman of the Leitrim Board of Health. He was survived by a large family. McGeehan, who was the sergeant of detectives in the chief witness Saturday at the inquest in the death of James Fahy, a Republican leader, who was alleged to have been beaten to death after arrest. The verdict was that he died of natural causes.

Reynolds had been a Carrick-on-Shannon, where he attended a political meeting. He was shot on his mobile home in Ballinamore, but stopped in Parfait for gasoline and other purposes. His constituency was Ellip Leitrim.

The election has aroused bitter political feelings throughout the Free State because the vote is expected to give Ireland an opportunity to decide whether it wants fers allegiance to the English Crown or a renewal of her 700-years' struggle for complete severance.

Cosgrave Blames Fianna Fail.

President Cosgrave, foe of Eamonn De Valera, head of the Opposition Fianna Fail, made his final campaign speech in Dublin shortly after the shooting. Cosgrave declared that the Fianna Fail party had never lost contact with the element directly concerned with violence in the Free State government.

The followers of De Valera are "holding themselves free to adopt other methods they may see fit when following," the President said. His reference were to recent reports of Fianna Fail and its Opposition extremists were organizing for armed resistance by the government, despite the fact that De Valera recently has frowned on talk of an uprising.

The President has warned Ireland that a De Valera victory would plunge the country into economic ruin with grave political consequences.

The general opinion is that the election will be closely contested, with the outcome in doubt. Both the Cosgrave and De Valera parties may be so evenly divided in parliament that a few independent Labor leaders will hold the balance of power.

Coating of Oil Applied on Breeding Ground in Winter

Winnipeg, Man (By The Canadian Press)—While citizens of Winnipeg and province generally endure a grip of practical zero, business men in this city are busy planning a warm weather campaign whereby they may spend the summer in this neighborhood.

The tiny wrigglers, as yet unborn, are still dormant before they see the light of day. It promises to be a war to the death. From the air as well as the ground, intensive barrages of oil will be laid down.

Each spring for the past five years public-spirited citizens of this city have asked the doors of millions of prospective "skeeters". Forays were made into their favorite haunts where a coating of kerosene oil was applied.

Experiments with an aeroplane last year proved that sawdust and oil mixture could be applied effectively in a ratio of only ten or twelve gallons per acre. This method, useful for spreading it over large areas, will be used again this year.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY AND MADGE EVANS NEXT AT BELLE

Robert Monigomery is started by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "Strangers May Kiss," which will open at the Belle Theatre Wednesday for two days, matinee daily. The picture, a romantic comedy, was written especially for the young favorite by the noted English playwright, Frederick Lonsdale, whose "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" proved so successful a vehicle for Norma Shearer.

Madge Evans, who recently scored in "Guilty Hands" and "Son of the Gods," has a similar lead, and the large supporting cast includes Roland Young, last seen in "The Guardsmen," Frederick Kerr, Reginald Owen, Sarah Haden, Evelyn Hall, Halliwell Hobbes, Jackie Searl, Norman Phillips, Jr., and Alec Mowbray.

Rises Away From Home

The story concerns an idealistic English chap who runs away from home because his father objects to his ambition to become a playwright. Impressionable as he is adventurous, he drifts about as a sailor, gambler, newspaper reporter and what-not, until he meets an admiral's daughter in South Africa. After her parents rush her back to England to hasten her marriage to a titled fiance, she runs away on the eve of the wedding and marries Monigomery. Their happy fortnights do not seem to be much longer than that, for the boy manages to get on the wrong side of the law and is forced to flee to Canada, where he finds employment as a lumberjack. Eventually the bride is driven by poverty to join her husband, goaded by desperation, finally puts over a successful play.

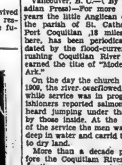
Lewis Stone, who plays the role of the father at the wedding and marries Madge Evans in the picture, has also been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play opposite Greta Garbo in "Susan Lenox."

Monigomery's latest vehicles are "Private Lives" and "The Man in Possession."

At The Capitol

DRAMA OF THE YEAR IN ALL ZEAVE MEN

Does a man achieve heroism by free, expressing character? Or is it a bit of the craven in every brave man? "Maker of Men," the Capitol picture starring Jack Holt with Richard Cromwell, Joan Marsh, John Wayne, Robert Alden and others at the Capitol theatre tonight, is a drama of a father and son who arrived at an understanding of each other only after they come to blows in a misunderstanding.



Here the boy learns that it takes more courage to be a quitter than to be a hero—how he learns that there is a mental punishment worse than physical pain—how the coach learns that the understanding and sympathy of a teacher is sometimes more powerful than the hard discipline of a stern martinet is depicted in "Maker of Men," which is said to blend comedy, pathos and thrills in a collegiate drama that has an appeal for old and young, parents and children.

And Clyde in Comedy, scenes of Sino-Japanese conflict and curiosities complete the program.

Earns The Title of Modern Noah's Ark

Vancouver, B. C.—(By The Canadian Press)—For more than 30 years the little Anglican church in Port Coquitlam, 18 miles east of Vancouver, has been surrounded, dedicated by the flood-current of the raging Coquitlam river, which earned the title of "Modern Noah's Ark."

On the day the church opened in 1909, the river overflowed its banks while services were being held. Parishioners reported salmon could be heard jumping in the shallow water by those inside. At the conclusion of the service the men waded knee-deep in water to their teams and rode to dry land.

More than a decade passed before the Coquitlam River went on another rampage, but the church was again inundated. Question of moving the building to a more central part of Port Coquitlam was made another decade passed before a move was finally made.

A road was cut through the bush and the church, pulled inch by inch, was placed in position under the church. At the conclusion of services, it was again rose. The church stood in splendid isolation as trees, roots and logs swept by. Anxious days and parishioners waited for the flood to subside. Then the little church was moved to its new and less precarious position.

Japan Erects Memorial to Last 10,000 Years

TOKYO—A memorial that will last 10,000 years has been erected in Japan to preserve the names of the earthquake victims of 1923.

Scientists first chose a very durable quality of white Japanese paper on which the names were inscribed in Chinese ink. Next this paper was rolled and stored in containers of the best quartz crystals. Another step in the process was to insert layers of monel metal to assure uniformity of temperature. Then these bands were covered with asbestos. The third received specially sterilized silk.

Quartz tubes were placed on the containers being fused to them, and the air was removed. Then the vacuum was filled with a certain gas for preservative purposes, and it was provided that interior pressure should equal atmospheric pressure. Asbestos bedding was placed over the containers and asbestos taping was used. These containers were placed in other receptacles composed of carbon and silicon.

Even years after inspecting the result of their labors, have decided that the memorial will not only last

23,000 MILES IN AEROPLANE

Journey Across Africa and Back Completed By Woman Flier

London (By The Canadian Press) —The longest, and in many respects the most ambitious, flight aeroplane tour in the history of aviation ended at Stapleton aerodrome, Edgware, recently, when Mrs. Westenra and her pilot, Captain R. H. Bushell, landed after a journey of 23,000 miles which began on May 6 and extended over the greater part of the African continent.

Mrs. Westenra is the owner of a small monoplane, and the idea of attempting the flight originated in her wish to visit her brother-in-law Sir Abe Bailey, in South Africa and to see other friends in East and West Africa. Consideration of ways and means showed at once that reliance on surface transport to three thirds corners of Africa would involve lengthy and arduous travel and Mrs. Westenra finally decided to make plans as the only attractive, and practicable vehicle for the trip.

Going south, she followed the usual route, now the highway of the Britishers between Egypt and South Africa. But on the return journey she broke through the established route at Broken Hill and struck north-east to Kano, Lagos and Nigeria. There they flew for hundreds of miles over the vast forests of equatorial Africa, where good landing grounds scarcely exist. Many of the emergency aerodromes cleared by the timid natives of the bushes and sometime some tags are no longer maintained, and in a few short months the vegetation will grow on all these places the aircrew of Mrs. Westenra's small machine made its way through the elephant grass and forests.

Mrs. Westenra spent Christmas at Leopoldville, and then headed north for Egypt, with the Sahara desert. There, in the terrifying wastes of the dark continent, she experienced the most anxious moments of the trip. Engine stoppages and the making extremely difficult the task of following the single motor-car track across the desert. Once the Imiah decided was the only safe way of reaching the oasis. They were forced to wait alongside the track, sending out by wireless, which was weighted down against the onslaughts of the wind by fastening to the wing-tips petrol cans filled with sand. No ropes were carried with the aeroplane, and Mrs. Westenra improvised harness by tearing a shirt into strips and joining them together.

A flight over mountain ranges, particularly at this time of year, is inevitably marked by heavy storms and violent changes in the air, a condition which hamper navigation. Both Mrs. Westenra and her pilot suffered the newspaper nickname of "Mad Wireless" although during a long period of service on the cross-Channel air lines, was never at fault. Aided by the turn-and-bank indicator which gave instant warning of the slightest change in the direction or of flying attitude he steered from point to point on a good course. All through the flight engine and aeroplane behaved perfectly.

REV. H. J. HAHN GUEST SPEAKER

Economic Condition is "Man's Own Creation" Says Speaker

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—If objective conditions are the way of free exercise of the ballot or the right of free speech, those responsible must answer for the consequences, said Rev. Herman J. Hahn, evangelical minister of Buffalo, N. Y., addressing a capacity audience in Massey Hall here last night. Mr. Hahn was detained at the international border recently when he tried to enter Canada to speak in Toronto.

He branded the existing economic system as "rigid hodge-podge of human law and misery, that system which makes a man a slave to the situation, his own creation."

The meeting was held under the auspices of the National Labor party.

WILL ASK JAPAN TO CEASE HOSTILITIES

Kidnapped Social Leader Escapes From Captors

League Will Refuse to Recognize Territorial Changes Made in East

Understanding With China is Urged Upon Japan

PRESSING APPEAL

Four Powers Realize That Efforts Have Come To Naught

By ANDRUE BERDING

(Copyright, 1932, By the Associated Press)

Geneva, Feb. 16 (AP)—A drafting committee of the League of Nations Council was instructed today to frame an urgent appeal to Japan, asking her to cease hostilities in the Far East and telling her the League will refuse to recognize any territorial changes which have occurred as a result of "Japanese intervention."

The committee got its instructions from the twelve neutral members of the council this morning, and met to compose the appeal for submission to a second meeting scheduled for five p.m.

Seek Understanding.

The council decided the communication should also ask Japan to try to reach an understanding with China. As for the "territorial changes", the council told the committee to draft the appeal on the basis of article 10 of the League Covenant which guarantees territorial integrity of league members.

The appeal was decided upon as the result of a conversation between Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the British Cabinet, to the effect that efforts of four powers toward peace had come to naught and that as a result it was felt desirable to address a pressing appeal to Japan.

The council did not deal with China's request for a meeting of the entire assembly of the league. A public council meeting will be held for that purpose on Thursday.

It was learned that Japanese delegates to the World Disarmament Conference here had received instructions not to object to the holding of a meeting of the assembly but to "let events take their course".

BRIEF TILT ON CHAPEI FRONT

Big Battle is Uncertain as Ever as Powers Play Game

By MORRIS J. HARRIS

(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press)

Shanghai, Feb. 16.—Japanese and Chinese artillery engaged in a brief duel on the Chapei front today, but the battle line remained as uncertain as ever, and the shifting movements of the two armies seemed to have become a game of checkmate.

General Yang Hu-Cheng, the dapper, brilliant young poet-commander of the Chinese forces, shifted his 50,000 troops with amazing rapidity, apparently to block Japanese lines, also, and each side apparently sought to counteract the increasing preparations of the other camp.

Both sides purported for something, a visit by the position reached indicated, but nobody seemed to know just what to expect.

The Chinese Marksmen declaimed presented the nineteenth round away which is declaiming the city with 250,000 Mexican dollars, about a dollar to each of the soldiers now in the army, as an expression of "gratitude and good will," the bankers said.

Earlier this month Shishaldin erupted and its smoke and ash carried great distances over the Bering Sea.

MANCHURIAN STATE PARLEY

Builders of New States Meet at Mukden Today

Mukden, Manchuria, Feb. 16 (AP)—The builders of the proposed new Manchurian-Mongolian State were all gathered here today.

The assembling of this group of formerly obscure Chinese leaders, each of them with Japanese advisers constantly at his elbow, was completed during the afternoon with the arrival of General Mah Chan-Shan, a few weeks ago defending "hero" of the beginning of the Japanese drive in Manchuria, from Harbin.

PLANES READY TO STRIKE JAPS

Twenty Year Old Chinese Pilot Will Take Part

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (CP)—During the day Japanese troops occupied strategic positions on the Chapei and Woosung fronts, but there was no activities.

Behind the lines near Chenju the Nanking government reserved six eight Chinese aeroplanes this evening, taking up and ready for action when the command should come. There were five pursuit planes and two bombers. A Chinese pilot not more than 20 years old, said there were plenty more where these came from. The pilot also said the Chinese had a few whippet tanks ready for use whenever they are needed.

There were new artillery batteries behind the Chapei lines, set up apparently to repel Japanese landing parties on the Hungjao road. The whole area between Chenju and the Chapei front, a stretch of about four miles, was a long line of barricades and trenches bristling with machine guns.

WIZARD FINDS DIVINING ROD OPEN SESAME

Method of Readings is Shown American Institute Today

KINDS OF WATER

Phreatic Water Transmits Electric Currents

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, N.Y., Feb. 16 — Karl Sundberg, Swedish electrical wizard, has discovered a universal "open sesame" to detect vast resources lying beneath the earth's surface.

His finds are scientific divining rod, is the transmission of electrical currents through the water which permeates earth's crust everywhere. Even in the solidest rock he finds water enough to send the sounding messages.

He reported his method of reading to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers today. Mr. Sundberg is world famous as a pioneer in using electricity to feel out the nature of deeply buried rocks. He is chief engineer of the Aktiebolaget Elektrisk Malmletning of Stockholm.

"There are two kinds of water in the earth's crust, he said, vadose and phreatic. Vadose is moisture near the surface, mixed with some air, sticking in small particles by molecular attraction to the various kinds of soil. Phreatic water is usually deep down, locked back by great pressure, permeating even the igneous rocks in countless billions of corpuscles almost too tiny for a microscope to reveal.

"In this water, he said, transmits electric currents applied to earth's surface. Through some soils and some rocks the currents travel easily. In others there is high resistance. Magnetic instruments pick up these currents on their return and the resistance shows in a universal language many things about the nature of the earth they have traversed.

International Business Machine was up around four points.

Unwelcome as the prospect of higher taxes might be, the announcement from Washington that additional revenues were being planned drew favorable response on the strength of Wall Street's conviction the National Budget must be balanced.

RADIO CORP'N MAKES GAIN

Higher Tax Prospect Does Not Stifle Buying at N. Y.

NEW YORK, N.Y. Feb. 16.—An early selling movement which sent stock prices down a point or more ran into stubborn resistance today and the market more than recovered its losses under fairly animated buying.

A feature was active accumulation of low priced stocks. Large blocks of Radio Corp. Common were purchased on the way to advancing around one point net. The preferred issues were up one to three. Trans-America Corp., was also well bought: United Aircraft, Kroger, Alaska Juneau and Montgomery Ward also showed gains.

Announcement of an increase of 1-4 cent a pound in the Copper Exporters failed to attract particular buying to the Coppers which, however, were steady. McKeesport Tin Plate was a strong feature. U. S. Steel, Bank Par, American Telephone and Western Union turned their early losses and into moderate gains.

Boy of Four at Shelter Transient with 70 Yr. Old Man on Way to Prescott to Cross to United States

RESUME TOUR

The youngest person yet to pass the night at the city's lodge for transients, a four-year-old boy who arrived at the lodge about six thirty o'clock Monday night. He was accompanied by a man seventy years old, who registered as George Thomas and gave his nationality as being Canadian.

The old man and the boy were comfortably dressed and the attendant was surprised when the old man asked for food and shelter for the night. The story told by the man was, briefly, that he and the attendant reported his arrival with the child to the city police department. A constable took them to the police station for questioning and later sent them back to the lodge to sleep.

This morning after breakfast they were again taken to the police station and placed in charge of Constable Kidd. The man said, that he desired to reach Prescott, where it was his intention to cross into the United States. It seemed strange, that a man seventy years old and a child four years old, should be wandering through the country, but as nothing against the man could be learned, Chief Kidd sent them on their way. The child seemed quite happy and contented with the aged man.

Plane Safe as it "Lands" in Ocean

Rome, Feb. 16 (AP)— Seven passengers were rescued from a twin-motored Italian seaplane fifty miles off Malta today by the British destroyer Brilliant.

Both the plane and its occupants were taken to Malta by the destroyer, which had been called by wireless to succeed to the crash.

It is explained that the seaplane had come down in the ocean to repair a motor. This was done with little difficulty but the ship was unable to take off because of the heavy sea. A wireless message brought H.M.S. Brilliant out from Malta to the rescue.

LAVAL'S GOV'T MEETS DEFEAT IN THE SENATE

Likely The Premier Will Tender Resignation to President

LEAVE PARLEY

French Attendants at Geneva Hurry Home Fearing Crisis

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 16 (AP)—News of the defeat of the French Government burst upon the disarmament conference today with startling effect.

Andre Tardieu, French Minister of War and head of the French conference delegation, prepared to leave for Paris immediately and it was thought other members of the delegation would follow him.

Paris, Feb. 16—Premier Laval's government was defeated in the Senate this afternoon on confidence by a vote of 157 to 134.

After his defeat in the Senate on a question of confidence this afternoon, Premier Laval went to the Elysee Palace immediately to present his government's resignation to President Doumer.

It was expected that the government would resign, but no announcement was made immediately.

After the vote in the Senate Premier Laval said, "and this expense is decreasing, while the expenditure for education has increased to a great extent."

Argentina's program, he said would be acceptance of the draft convention as the basis of discussions in the conference, permanent international supervision of armaments, no ships above 10,000 tons for countries not a party to the Washington and London agreements and a provision that foodstuffs be not considered contraband of war.

TIRES PLAY AN IMPORTANT PART

Sir Malcolm Campbell at Beach Ready to Break Record

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 16.—Tires will play an important part in the forthcoming attempt of Sir Malcolm Campbell, famous British sportsman, to break his own world's automobile speed record of 245 miles an hour, the Englishman said today. The centrifugal force exerted at speeds greater than four miles a minute, Sir Malcolm has said, requires tires built and tested to hold up at a clip of miles an minute.

These tires, 37 by 6 inches, are 14 ply and are designed with a thick coating of smooth rubber barely one thirty-second of an inch thick. They will carry an air pressure of approximately 120 pounds.

Declines to Estimate.

He has declined to estimate the speed he hopes to attain as soon as beach conditions become favorable but observers say he believes they may be sets will not be far from 260 miles an hour.

In a test ride, he would be skimming along the hard packed sands of the beach approximately 200 a second. This is about equivalent to the ordinary city speed over time the clock ticks, with the wheels revolving at the rate of forty times a second.

"I have often been asked what is the use of a machine like these high speeds," said the 47-year-old Englishman during preliminary driving trials.

"The lessons learned are most valuable as undoubtedly racing improves the breed.

Argentine's Remedy For Disease of World in Arms

By ANDRUE BERDING

Geneva, Feb. 16 (AP)—Two school masters for every soldier was the suggestion for disarmament made to the world conference today by Dr. Ernesto Bosch, Argentine representative. This, he added, is the proportion for which Argentine budget provides.

"Argentina's expenditure for her army amounts only to one-sixth of her entire national budget," he said, "and this expense is decreasing, while the expenditure for education has increased to a great extent."

Argentina's program, he said would be acceptance of the draft convention as the basis of discussions in the conference, permanent international supervision of armaments, no ships above 10,000 tons for countries not a party to the Washington and London agreements and a provision that foodstuffs be not considered contraband of war.

INTEREST ON BONDS PAID

Australia Forwarding Funds to London and New York

Canberra, Australia, Feb. 16 (CP) —The Commonwealth government, ultimately responsible to the bondholders for interest on the Queensland's plan of 1927, will tomorrow forward $1,000,000 to London and New York the amounts necessary to meet interest payments on bonds of the state of New South Wales, payable tomorrow, the state government defaulted on February 1.

The Commonwealth has already forwarded $1,000,000 to London to state the amounts disbursed on its behalf to bondholders in Australia, in London and £200,000 in New York. The Commonwealth treasurer announced, late last month, it would be unable to meet the full interest requested a sum of £500,000 from the Commonwealth government. The latter, however, declined to provide this, and also declined to meet the payments to overseas before steps were taken against New South Wales as a measure of protest by the Commonwealth on behalf of the holders of the state bonds.

Kidnapped From Saranac Lake Carried to Cleveland

LIFE IN DANGER

Feigns Sleep, Knocks Guard to Floor With Blow on Stomach

Cleveland, Ohio. Feb. 16 —After a spectacular escape from kidnappers who had kept him prisoner, his life in danger, since last Thursday, Harry H. Blagden, 45, wealthy eastern sportsman, staggered early today into the home of a friend in Cleveland. He was suffering from knockout drops, rough treatment and illness.

Blagden, prominent in New York and Washington society, had been held for ransom since last Thursday when he was kidnapped from a cottage at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Relatives had feared he was murdered.

Carried to Cleveland

He said he was brought to Cleveland by his kidnappers after many hours of traveling and probably two days' imprisonment in a windowless room above a garage which he believed was in Albany, N.Y. All of the time his life was in danger and once the abductors threatened to kill him.

Shortly after their arrival in Cleveland, two of the kidnappers, known only as "Jim" and "Pete" went into a house to eat, leaving Blagden lying in the back of the truck under guard of a third man called "Curly".

Pretends Sleep

Blagden feigned sleep, he told police later, and when Curly relaxed his vigilance, the sportsman summoned all his remaining strength and knocked the guard to the floor with a blow to the stomach.

Wrestling a revolver from Curly's hand, Blagden struck him with it several times and then ran until he found a house. There he had no idea in what city he was until he inquired of a passer-by, then, remembering the harrowing experience, he went to the home of his friend, Joseph Kelly, and summoned police.

Kelly related how he was kidnapped.

FOUR RESPONDS TO INVITATION

Rev. Paul Gelatt, Oshawa, is conducting nightly services at the Bayside Baptist Church. The subject last evening was "The Confession of an Atheist," from the text, "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." from Psalm 14, verse 1. This is the description the speaker said, of the natural man who has not been regenerated through the atonement of Jesus. Many were reminded of Evangelist Terry while listening to Mr. Gelatt. Four responded to the invitation last night.

FIRE RUMOR AT DESERONTO FALSE

Street rumors current in this city this morning to the effect that a large fire had broken out in Deseronto some time yesterday night were entirely groundless as learned by a telephone investigation from this town this morning. It had been reported that the fire in question had been almost entirely consumed.

Mr. Harry Moore, publisher of the Deseronto Post, did report, however, that ice 'cutting operations were in full swing. A thickness of about a foot had been attained, and belated operators of power cutting machinery were hoping that the rapid harvest of the ice which has formed, of late, is reported to be of excellent quality.

Belleville is privileged indeed in being afforded the opportunity of hearing this well known Canadian.

Col. W. N. Ponton underwent a second operation this morning in the Hamilton General Hospital, following that which took place about a week ago on his return from Alaska, via N.Y. TRAFFIC SIGNAL OUT OF KILTER

The swinging traffic sign on the four corners at Front and Bridge street swung out of action at an unusual early this morning, but shortly after it had begun to flash its alternate red and green rays of the light bulbs inside suffered a nervous breakdown and finally expired.

A few motorists drew up, obedient to the habit for the light to change, waited, grew impatient, settled back and waited some more, and then as the lights still did not change, wondered if this was really February 29 or April 1 or Pooh's Day. Still the light did not change and the knocker was learned—the light was out as completely as Dempsey in the 10th memorable scrap in Philadelphia. From then on it was every man for himself.

Shortly after midnight, the field artillery of the local Hydro company appeared on the scene, took a tentative survey of the situation, erected a ladder, pried open the door of the red light and replaced the burned out bulb with another one. Then once more traffic resumed its normal flow.

BOB CHADWICK JOINS HIS SHIP

AIR COMPRESSORS ARE INSTALLED

The installation of new air compressors on foundations just recently completed in the plant of the American Hardware Corporation has now been completed by workmen of the Patterson Construction Company, who have been engaged in numerous alterations in that plant for some time.

The compressors which have been installed are two of the latest type, designed to operate by means of pneumatic machines, and are considered a more flexible means of power energy than other existing types.

Besides the work being completed in the factory of that corporation a number of men from the Patterson Company have been busy in making alterations in the old brass building on the southeast corner of Front street and East Bridge. It is expected that the place will be occupied by the Income Tax office very soon. Some of the equipment of that office has already been moved in today.

INFLUENZA CASES REPORTED IN CITY

There is some influenza in the city at the present time, and this is the opinion of Dr. Ponton, of that weather-and dampness which have masked the winter season.

VALENTINE TEA GIVEN BY B.Y.P.U.

A pretty Valentine tea was held by the B.Y.P.U. of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church in the Sunday School rooms on Wednesday evening. The tables were all gayly decorated for the occasion and a large number of the young people were present.

After the evening's repast Miss Mildred Lloyd gave a very interesting and instructive talk on her recent trip to Europe. Miss Lloyd presented a number of splendid photographs by which the members were able to more thoroughly grasp the idea of the talk.

Miss Alma Hall moved a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Lloyd for her all too short talk.

The concluding service on Sunday night was under the direction of the B.Y.P.U. at which Mr. Graham was the speaker of the evening.

Supply and Demand Cause of Upturn

"Lent has a definite relationship to the fluctuating price of eggs. Every time they are as well as few and extra a dozen you can depend on it that they as well as many other commodities are following the well known law of supply and demand," declared Mr. George Ostrom, produce dealer, this morning.

"It is well known that when an article is in greater demand than it has formerly been there is a rise of that article goes up a little. The season of Lent as well as a few days soon in general, is characterized by an unusual consumption of eggs and while hens are laying as much as ever, in this district, although in the West the production has been greatly curtailed by the severe weather, yet time they'll be down again to the price they were before people

Loaded With Goods Truck Leaves Road

A truck owned by Ben Mepham of Frankford, and driven by Harold Pifield of the same city, went into the ditch on the highway about fourteen miles east of Belleville, shortly after four o'clock Tuesday morning and collided with a fence which it broke through. The truck did not turn over and the body it is said was only slightly damaged.

The exact cause of the accident has not as yet been determined. One engine, it is understood, since the accident, has been found to be in poor working order and the driver is waiting for the arrival of a truck from Hamilton to relieve his load of the load of paper products, which was being transported from Ontario to Hamilton.

Provincial Constable Byles of the Ontario Provincial Corps, is investigating the accident.

Frankford Boy Found Today

Frankford, Feb. 16 (Special)—The body of the late Delbert Anderson, who was drowned near Frankford on Friday when returning from school, was recovered at noon today after one of the most exhaustive searches ever organized in that locality. Two hundred men searched day and night for the body, and the mill pond and creek below Boais and searchlights were used at night and this morning places dynamited and the creek between Stockdals and Frankford was thoroughly gone over.

Mr. Walter Morrow was helping to drag the creek which runs by his rows at his farm. The body was found floating in the bed just below the surface of the water, a few yards from the place where the boy's dinner pail was found and about one hundred yards upstream from where his coat was located yesterday.

It is unlikely that an inquest will be held and the funeral, it is thought, will take place tomorrow.

Here's What We Think of This Picture!

IF WE were a newspaper critic reviewing "LOVERS COURAGEOUS" We'd write: This Picture will please just about every normal man and woman in Belleville and vicinity. Robert Montgomery has the best role of his career and Madge Evans makes the most lovable, beautiful sweetheart imaginable.

"LOVERS COURAGEOUS" is the kind of love story not often on the screen these days. There's nothing "stagey" about it—it's natural, human, lovable. It's about two young people who love each other desperately, normally. They are brave about their troubles. And you get an intimate, "inside" acquaintance with their young married life. It is wholesome, fine, inspiring! It's not wishy-washy! Plenty of spicy dialogue but never nasty. Even when Madge Evans says to Bob Montgomery: "Let's stay home and have a baby!"—you'll not blush. Because it's done so sweetly, so naturally, so beautifully. It's a happy thought! I liked "LOVERS COURAGEOUS" immensely. Let me know if you agree after seeing it.

"BAPTISTE" IS ATTACHED TO HIS TRADITIONS

They However Do Not Hinder His Economic and Social Progress

TAKES HIGH PLACE

Interesting Address on French Canada By Chas. Holmes, B.A.

"Baptiste is a mighty likeable fellow when you get to know him. He is steady, industrious and home loving. Attached to his traditions, yes, but those traditions are not such as to hinder his economic or social progress." Such was the tribute paid to the citizen of French Canada by Charles Holmes, B. A. in addressing Belleville Rotary Club on Monday. Mr. Holmes is now a resident of Toronto, but for many years lived in the province of Quebec and made a special study of French Canadian character and mentality. In music, painting and literature French Canada has taken a high place, and in many other ways they measure up to their English speak ing neighbor.

"There are many reasons, why we should esteem our French Canadian co-citizens," said Mr. Holmes "While much progress has been made along this line of thought during the last ten years, there are still those who consider the French Canadians are our inferiors on many counts. The belief is held by many:

—that the French-Canadian is densely ignorant and uncultured;

—that he does not even speak French, but a patois;

—that he is a priest-ridden bigot; —that he is disloyal to England.

"This is a broad generalisation of the characteristic attitude of many Anglo-Canadians to their fellow French co-citizens—it is a hazy picture drawn simply to point out that this attitude is due to a misunderstanding of the French-Canadian mentality.

"Let us first take the allegation that Baptiste is the ignoramus some would have us believe. There are 8,116 schools and educational institutions in Quebec, of a total of 7,18.- 873 children of school age, 597,264 or on the school roll with an average attendance of 82.90 per cent. Only 6.20 per cent of the inhabitants of Quebec, of all races, over ten years of age cannot read and write. New Brunswick, Manitoba, British Columbia have a larger proportion of illiterates than has Quebec. The general average of illiterates for the Dominion is 6.16 per cent.

Child Labor Law

"True, there is no law of compulsory education in Quebec—but is not the Quebec law which forbids the employment of children under 14 years of age unless they can produce certificates showing that they had a required minimum of schooling the equivalent of compulsory education?

Language and "Slanguage"

"But, say you, how about literature—the French-Canadian does not speak pure Parisian French, does he? right he does not—and thank heaven for that! There is no such thing as Parisian French unless it be the argot or slang of the apache. The man who claims to speak "Parisian French" is making a statement as asinine as if he were to claim he spoke Bowery or Whitechapel English!

"I have lived several years in France and let me assure you that the difference between the French spoken in Quebec and that spoken on the boulevards of Paris is all to the advantage of the much berated Quebec French.

"Of course, the language of French Canada evolved to a certain extent but the evolution was not along the same lines as those followed in France. Special local expressions were created, many of them better than similar equivalents created in France.

"Why speculate about petty differences in language that are all to the advantage of French-Canada, when there is so much difference between the English spoken in Canada and that spoken in England that one of the G.P.R. officials published a dictionary of Canadian colloquial terms to enable old-country Englishmen to understand we "colonials!"

"Let us revert to the topic of literature. It is quite true that a limited number of French-Canadians have produced their talents to writing—not because literary talent is lacking, but because thoughtful and thoughtless readers alike seek intellectual food in books from France which are sold on the Canadian market at much lower prices than it is possible to produce French-Canadian books for, owing to the limitations of the French-Canadian Field.

"The few books written by French-Canadian authors that have been published in France, such as those of Garneau, de Nevers, Charvemeaux, Tremblay, de Martigny, Desaulniers and a host of others were received there on the same footing as those by French authors. Hundreds of French Canadians have received from the French Government decorations as Officers d'Academie or Officers de l'Instruction Publique for their work in the realm of letters.

The Curé

"The curé in Quebec occupies the same position towards his flock as do our own ministers in Protestant communities. He may be an adviser on temporal matters when called upon for advice, but he rarely intrudes in non-religious matters unless invited to do so. Of course, there may be some exceptions—just as there are among ministers in Protestant communities—but taken as a whole the cures in Quebec are not the religious fanatics some would have us believe. If it were otherwise, would the Protestant minority in Quebec be treated in such a fair way.

Wolfe And Montcalm

"Let us again go back to ten pages of history. When Wolfe died victorious on the plains of Abraham, the defeat of the two decimated French regiments under Montcalm determined the ascendancy of the Anglo-Saxon race in the new world. It established that had Louis XV sent assistance to the poor French colonists, the results might have been different.

"The French-Canadians were unquestionably secrificed to the sensual proclivities of a king who had more love for the gown of a courtesan than for the flag of France. As soon as the Treaty of Paris was signed 65,000 people of the poorer classes, soldiers of fortune and laborers, remained in Canada, abandoned by the government employees, professionals, merchants and all the "worth while people of the colony. The 1200 "notables" who sailed for France constituted those they left behind of so little importance that they took back with them all the public records of the colony.

"This disgraceful abandonment was not conducive to the best feeling towards France on the part of those who remained in Canada.

"Later came a new form of gorgunnest in France—the republic—which stood for all that the French-Canadian was opposed to.

"On the other hand the crusade against French-Canadian nationalism conducted by most of the British governors until the very eve of Confederation was not such as to promote friendship for Great Britain.

All Canadian

"Is it surprising that the French-Canadians are Canadians by every fibre of their being and Canadians only? Whilst they have a certain love and admiration for both France and England, they do not consider these countries as their motherlands the one and only country that absorbs all their patriotism is Canada. Therefore, they are, in the last analysis, the only unhyphenated Canadians, because they have no parental ties overseas.

"Whenever Canada has been attacked, even by Britain's own sons, such as in 1776 and 1812, they did not hesitate to save Canada for Great Britain, because they did not want to be absorbed in the American Union, though Benjamin Franklin who spoke French like a native, had been sent to them to promise that their language and religion would be safeguarded if they took arms against England. They stubbornly resisted all promises and threats, and when our neighbors invaded the country they repulsed them by force of arms.

"Of course, there is the Papineau insurrection of 1837-38 and that was a case where the French-Canadians took arms against England. Go back to your histories again and you will find that all the time of the Tudors there existed intolerable abuses in Canada's public administration. Lord Durham was sent over to Canada by Queen Victoria to investigate the causes of the uprising only justifies it, but states that its real cause is "the inability of the average English statesman ever imagined that such a system as that which existed in Canada's administration could work."

"I have always wondered why the insurrection of 1837-38 is called the "Papineau insurrection," is this not a clever piece of camouflage to lead future generations into believing that French-Canadians only had a hand in this uprising? True, Papineau did protest against conditions existing at the time—but he and his people were not alone to protest. How did the same thing in Nova Scotia, Wilmot in New Brunswick, Baldwin and MacKenzie in Upper Canada.

Papineau's Lieutenants

"Even in Quebec, who did Papineau have as lieutenants if not two Englishmen, the Nelson brothers, one of whom (Wolfred) according to historian Trevelyn out-Papineaued Papineau. In the list of Quebec insurrectionist leaders who had to face trial or were exiled, we find the names of Samuel Newcomb, Benjamin Mott, Thomas Sharrow Brown, Dr. O'Callaghan and Benjamin Holmes. Most of these men were descendants from loyalist families who had abandoned the American colonies after the revolution—so, it may be implied that if they revolted against British rule as enforced in Canada at the time, it must have been for well founded reasons.

"However our opinion may be on this insurrection there is one outstanding fact that all students of Canadian history must admit and it is that we would not enjoy our present form of responsible government if that uprising had not taken place.

"We are often a bit hasty in accusing Baptiste of having a monopoly on disloyalty in Canada. Let us examine our own consciens for a minute. In 1847, after the signature of the indemnity bill was it not our own people who assailed Lord Elgin with stones and rotten eggs? Was it not our own exclusive club that scratched the governor's name from their membership lists? Was it not the St. Andrew's society that went so far as to return to the governor the amount of his subscription?

"Was it not our own people, and not the French-Canadians, who began an agitation in favor of annexation with the United States? Was it not our own people, and not the French-Canadians, who in 1849, burnt down the parliament buildings in Montreal.

Not A Subject People

"The French-Canadians must not be considered as a subject people—they must be considered as partners in Empire building and treated as such.

"Do you realize that today the people of British descent—English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh—only constitute 55 per cent of Canada's total population, while the French-Canadians constitute 28 per cent— the balance being made up of foreigners of all kinds from Arabs to Zulus?

"Certainly preponderate over the French group, almost 3 to 1—but there are a few figures for you to ponder over:

In 1763 there were in Canada 3,215 French-Canadians.

In 1795 there were in Canada 70,000 French-Canadians.

In 1844 there were in Canada 538,212 French-Canadians.

In 1925 there were in Canada 2,452,720 French-Canadians.

"Bear in mind that between 1850 until quite recently, there was a constant exodus of French-Canadians towards the New England States and that if this had not happened, there would now be 2,000,000 more French-Canadians in Canada than there are.

"The exodus of French-Canadians to the United States has been stemmed. The desertion of New England in favor of the South by the cotton industry, has caused thousands of French-Americans to return to Quebec. This is adding untold thousands to the phenomenal natural increase in Quebec's French population still greater increase can be anticipated now that the Federal and Quebec governments have joined hands to repatriate French-Americans, a large amount having already appropriated for the purpose.

French Outnumber English

"Is it possible to offset through British immigration the abnormal increase in Anglo-Canadian population, the French Canadian population through births and repatriation?

"How long will it be before the Anglo-Saxon elements will no longer outnumber the French-Canadians?

"The thought may not be pleasant to some—but facts are facts.

"Several years before Confederation, Lord Elgin prophesied that the last hand which waves a British flag on American ground might be that of a French-Canadian. Are not circumstances favoring the realization of that prophecy?

"Before another half century elapses we may have to face this new condition. Must it be feared? After all, what have we to lose by a predominance of Latin Canadians in this country? A bit of pride, maybe. But we have seen that French-Canadians are not mental inferiors. Their standards of living are well up to our own. They understand us and can live in harmony with us.

Is it not entirely up to us to learn to appreciate them?

"Yes, Baptiste is peculiar. You must live with him a long time before you can understand the why and wherefore of any of his actions. Do not criticize him, simply him-self on the motives that animate him. Win his confidence once and it will be yours for life providing you do not betray it—but to win his confidence you must run him the right way and not expect that your views must necessarily be the same as your ways, his ways. Remember he is a Latin and you are an Anglo-Saxon. You can at least both meet half-way. If you make the first step towards him he will surely make two steps towards you to give you a friendly grasp that means more than the casual handshake we bestow on all sides at every opportunity."

BIG PUSH ON SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Feb. 15.—Heavy gunfire crashed in the Chapei sector soon after dark tonight, ending a day of comparative quiet, and observers in the International settlement thought it might be the beginning of the big push in which 20,000 Japanese will be thrown against a Chinese army twice as big.

Heavy artillery was blazing from the Japanese lines and Chinese trench mortar batteries responded weakly. The fire seemed to be concentrated on Chapei, and the armies at Woosung had not resumed their engagement.

The Essex village of Lawford, which last year elected women to all offices, has voted them out and chosen a man for each post.

TROUBLED ALL LIFE WITH CONSTIPATION

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Real Relief

If you are subject to headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness and other effects that so often result from constipation, read Mrs. Turner's voluntary letter.

"For the past six months I have been eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and cannot praise it too highly.

"Am fifty years of age. All my life have been troubled with constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but has cured me.

"I thought I couldn't like the taste of bran, but Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delicious."—Mrs. C. J. Turner (address upon request).

Tests show that ALL-BRAN contains two things which overcome constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of waste.

Certainly this is more natural than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

AN EXPERIMENT

The development of a feeling of unity as essential especially at this Lenten season has given rise to an experiment holding daily union meetings under the auspices of a number of the Protestant Churches in Toronto, in which ministers of five different denominations will take part.

It has always been claimed that the appeal of the varied sects to the heathen world cannot but puzzle the hearers of the gospel in the Oriental field, and probably the Christian visitor at home is realizing that the differences, which are really non-essentials are what are stressed mainly under the divisions as they appeal to the heathen mind.

The present effort should add another proof to the united unity of the message of all the congregations.

Probably today the Christian world realizes more than it did the burden which faces Christian civilization which is under obligation in the teachings of its religion to carry the message to every creature and in every tongue. Time is passing, the Orient is developing and the world is moving. The 20th century will undoubtedly must be turned for the fulfilment of the message of carrying the Gospel into the remote parts, of the world.

Some of the unity of faith in services held at home ought to mean something for the non-Christian world as well as for the world at which still needs the reception of the Gospel.

TRADE SHIFTING

How world trade is shifting is pointed out in the Montreal Star, which cites the emergence of Germany as the leading exporting country of Europe in 1931, along with the publication of the Russian Soviet Government of its program of industrial expansion for the remainder of the year of the first Five Year Plan, which plans the production of $700,000,000 worth of machinery and 26 million tons of steel this year. The Star points out the declining trade of Britain and France in the same period and says while Russian production may fall far short of the enormous figures which are given above, yet the influence of Russian effort may be far greater than has been anticipated.

Would observers have their eyes on Russia and its progress under the Five Year Plan.

LIVING COST

According to a recent publication of the Department of Labor, Ottawa, the average cost per week of a family in twenty-nine staple foods calculated from the average retail prices in sixty-nine centres was substantially lower during 1931, continuing most of the year the downward movement which commenced at the beginning of 1930. It seems in the list of foods were lower at the close of the year than at the beginning, the most important changes being in the prices of lard, butter, cheese, milk, beans, and potatoes. The fuel was practically unchanged from the levels of 1929 and 1930, being but a very slight decline in the rents, the exact words of the report being "relatively slight" change. Including the cost of fuel and rent, the average for all the total showed much less decline than in that of foods only, being down for the year by four per cent. In June 1930 the index was at the lowest levels since 1916. Following the severe decline in price in 1920, prices were up for seven years and then commencing in 1927 kept mounting to the peak of 1929. The first half of 1930 saw the beginning of the break in the price of this food. Mutton prices fell away in June 1930 but the greatest decline was in pork and bacon prices. Bacon for instance fell from 40 cents per lb. in 1929 to 29 in twenty-two cents. Though there was the usual wide seasonal fluctuation in eggs, prices stood at some quite low levels, the prices remained the lowest for many years. Butter, bread, onions, canned vegetables were much lower.

Foods showed a drop in the cost of a family weekly budget in terms of retail prices from about $9.20 of $15.30 until in December last it reached $7.85 or a total of $8.49 for all 1931. Fuel went down from $3.27 to $3.18 last year or $3.10 for December. Rent was at $5.54 in January 1920 and at $6.95 for the year 1931 for one quarter months. The total shows that the family cost per week in 1920 was $24.-18, and that in December last it was $17.76.

The movement in wholesale prices during the year was less pronounced than in 1930. The downward movement in properties since August, 1929, yas, however, continued without interruption until the autumn, when a slight upward movement occurred, due mainly to some recovery in the prices of some raw materials, such as grains, non-ferrous metals, raw cotton and raw silk, also in the prices of eggs, butter, steers and milled products. The advance in grains and certain other commodities was not maintained in December and the index declined slightly. During October, November and December the number of commodities which advanced in price was greater than the number which declined. The level of prices as represented by this index was down 10 per cent at the low point in September from the level of the year 1930 as compared with a decline of 19 per cent between December, 1929, and December, 1930. Since the fall in prices commenced in August, 1929, until the end of 1931 there has been a decrease of 29 per cent, while as compared with the peak of prices in May, 1920, there has been a fall of 57 per cent.

In the classification according to chief component materials all of the eight main groups were lower at the end of the year than at the beginning, but in all groups except foods and their products the low point of the year was reached in the autumn and some recovery occurred before December. The Vegetables and Vegetable Products group showed much less decline than in 1930, the decrease being due mainly to lower prices for fruits, vegetables, bakery products, vegetable oils, and rubber. In grains and milled products the low point of the year was reached in September but this sub-group was higher at the end of the year than at the beginning.

LAUGHTER
By Aline Michaelis

Laughter? Well, without it
Earth indeed would be
Like a garden without flowers,
Just a mockery!

Laughter, how it brightens
Dark ways where we grope!
How its echoes quicken thoughts
Full of cheer and hope!

On the lips of lovers
Loving long and well
Lovely notes of ecstasy of mirth,
Notes of laughter, dwell.

And the little children
All their sunny days
They are brimmed with happiness,
Treading laughter's ways.

Like a badge of courage
Worn through good and ill,
Brave hearts meet whatever comes
With gay laughter still.

WAR IN CHINA was suspended for a day in order that the Japanese could make arrangements for the funeral of Emperor Whoopee on the occasion of the 2592nd anniversary of the death of the first Japanese Emperor. Perhaps we should say the late Japanese Emperor for he has passed away from the scene of his earthly activities to be more correct to say the early and late Emperor, for he was among the early Emperors of the line of the first Jap to rule in Japan, and now he's numbered among the late lamented, or otherwise, Emperors. Quite an interval between hostilities and all everybody yell "Banzai" and "Whoopee," and all that kind of thing. Take the Chinese army, for example. Indeed, it is said they stop fighting when it rains, and run for their umbrellas. That's all right when they're fighting each other but it gets tough work with foreign enemis. The enemy would just naturally take their umbrellas away from them. Just what the Chinese army was doing when the Japs were celebrating is not recorded. Just digging in, probably.

CONQUERING PIMPLES AND CONSTITUTION

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D. (Famous American Author on Health and Psychology)

Annoying and distfiguring pimples . . . doctors like to call it "acne" . . . is one of the commonest of complaints, especially as regards people. When appearing on the chest and back, even on the shoulders, they do not mind it so much, but when on the face . . . as LOUIS E BISCH they don't show. But when on the face the deepest sense of mind is the rule. Especially do girls worry so much.

Many remedies are tried for once and many of them fail. The chief reason for this is the fact that emphasis is placed on the treatment for the pimples when the real "it would be a lot, better if the general constitution were given attention to, the latter, in the last analysis, really being the source of the disorder. The pimples are not merely skin troubles. Much more are they the result of disturbances in the body, producing what might be termed a run-down condition and in turn affects the circulation, particularly that of the skin, the result in the latter being distressing blemishes.

We must bear in mind that the skin is an organ the same as are the lungs, kidneys and liver. It is specifically a most important organ of elimination, taking care of waste by the help of poisonous products through the elimination of sweat. Imbedded in the skin are certain fat glands — sebaceous glands — which keep the skin soft, smooth and oily. It is these latter which we must specially consider in a study of acne.

For the plugging of the tiny ducts of these sebaceous glands with oily, horny and superficial skin cells is what starts pimples to appear. A poor constitution with a poorly nourished skin of course predisposes to acne sooner or later, however, several of these fat glands get stopped up. The fatty secretion of the gland hardens. The familiar blackhead results. Later plugs enlarge, the contents of which become inflamed, pus is formed, and we have a crop of pimples.

If we will realize that acne therefore means a diseased skin caused by disorder inside, and that sometimes before such a state of health can be brought about, it stands to reason that it also takes time to conquer pimples.

First of all the general constitution must be built up. There may be errors in diet, faulty elimination, lack of exercise, and the like. However, especially in stubborn cases, there may be some focus of infection, instigated such as possible gland disturbances and also a definite state of nervous system. The number of chronic cases which do not get straightened out with the ordinary routine state has been overlooked, runs into the thousands.

Medicinal treatment also helps, therefore local treatment and above all constitutional treatment first. Lotions and creams may be of value, but blackheads, for instance, stands the violet and certain lamp rays.

Those acne cases are to be treated the same as thin skins, however. the freezing and electrical methodicles are required while in the latter only soothing ones. In fact, the proper treatment of chronic acne, because individuals differ so much from one another, is best left entirely in the job of the learned doctor who can draw on his expert advice in each case.

Lastly, the importance of keeping the skin clean! Soap and water should be used freely, a soap like sulphur being better. Cleanliness is more important than this. And if the acne is severe the use of a mercurio chrome wash cloth should be used, while if the skin is thin these should be used rubbing and only with a soft cloth.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Children are more likely to catch cold than adults. Overheating of homes, too warm clothing and too much food producing a toxic state are often responsible for the presence of adenoids or enlarged tonsils may also be factors.

A CASH AND CARRY WAR

Can United States, buying annually some 63 per cent. of Japan's exports; over 125 million dollar worth of silk alone, find any satisfactory basis of trade relations with Japan that is created with the war fever? Will Japan know, and can Japan must eventually realize, that it there is a war in Asia it will be a cash and carry war, and Japan has already loaded up with 400 billion dollar worth of goods for the battlefields, neither Japan nor China can afford to pay for them, and neither has the Great War possible. The interna-tional bankers, the Rothschilds and the Wigins, have too much to think about keeping themselves out of trouble over past sins, without investing their millions in belligerent countries that have nothing to offer as security except man power which no one wants and which is itself thrown into the dangerous maelstrom of battle. This war will not be paid for. It will burn over the country.—Vancouver Sun.

Heard On The Street

You here in the city must not get such a big kick out of it, but out in the country district the little war has passed the rounds a good many times, and a number of good folk out there who know the parties concerned think it is about the best little story they have heard in some time. Maybe they're right. Let's see.

x—x—x—x

It concerns a rural physician and his wife. Like all country doctors he has a very busy man's life, and his wife was a good one, and a keen psychologist. What he didn't know about human nature wasn't worth knowing. No frills about it. If you were sick he took a look at you, used a little of his applied psychology—and in a very short time you were up and around again, tending to your chores as if nothing had happened to you. Except for the bill, and his bitter medicine had done the trick and done it in quick time.

x—x—x—x

What with all the rainy weather and the changes of temperature lately, his wife took quite a case that it was time he had returned in his driver from some outlying calls she was there in bed waiting for him to come in and prescribe something for her. Talking in the slang of the day with a quiet appreciation of her certain condition and so she the doctor at once mentally diagnosed it as serious—quite serious. But not a flicker of that showed on her face, just a slight color could be remarked. "Everybody's got them now. Just a little rest and quiet and you'll be as good as ever. Here, take a little drink of this and then have, a little sleep and everything'll be alright tomorrow." Then, going out to the door, he didn't get up "Tomorrow" or the next day, nor the next. Instead of that she stayed in bed for some days, very, very ill, and the doctor was in constant attendance. "Just a slight cold," he would answer her—worrying all the while to himself as complications began to appear. But finally came the day when she could sit up, and then to walk around a little. She was not actually recovering and in a few more days she would be able to up and around again. That was about the toughest cold that anyone could ever have, she thought to herself, and possibly wondered why it had come to make it as ill as it did. Then it dawned on her, and she soon became sure that she had even lost all track of the doings of her neighbors. Then one morning she asked her: "What's been happening around here in Ontario"? That would tell her all about things near her village. One was brought to her. Idly she leafed over the pages to the "country correspondence". Here she item about one of her neighbors here was another one about—a baby she knew up the road a piece. Then she came to the item she was looking for—something like this was a . . . why, here was an item about herself! . . . Mrs. (Dr.) . . . . . visited for a few days with friends from a very severe attack of PNEUMONIA!" Again she read it! Soooo—so that was it, was it? Pneumonia! she had been sick—— Oh, wait until I get that old band of mine . . . . . ! Tell me it was only a cold would he!" The next morning there was a letter from her husband, and in it there, if you've read this far, read your home town paper!

x—x—x—x

To get closer home, another little story obtrudes itself as a tragedy of local life. Some time ago there was a little item about the lids some day of having nice shiny hardwood floors in the home he prize he many by hand, reached for the telephone and set the hardwood floors

O. S. D. MAKES REAL SHOWING IN GROUP GAME

Belleville Collegiate Defeats School 10,to 6 in Interesting Contest

COLLEGIATE SMART

Coach Shiels This Year Has Well-Balanced Squad

In a game, which termed out to be a scoring melee, the Belleville Collegiate hockey team defeated the Ontario School for the Deaf "rockstars" by the score of 10 to 6 at the Belleville Arena last night. The game was full of fast, clever plays which were roundly applauded by the few spectators present. Although there were not as many features in the exhibition, the players received much more than their money's worth during the hour's scrimmage.

Jimmie Pulwell and Jimmie McGuire were the outstanding stars of the night both on the offence and on the defence as their passing and blocking was most deadly during the early minutes. They were closely followed by "Bob" Thompson, the hefty defenceman of the O.S.D. who played havoc as a threat all during the game but was closely checked by the efforts of Meloche and Bontzari.

Well Balanced Team.

Coach Shiels presented a well balanced, quick passing team to the B.C.I. pucksters. Bert Poisier, in the nets was called upon to make a stop after stop as Carl Sargent and Jimmie Pulwell played their usual brilliant game on the left wing line of High, Jimmie McGuire and Cy Sanderson were working very nicely and they accounted for a lot of their goals. Jimmie Hall drew subbed the defence and did an A1 job, while McElrath, Goyer and "Hammy" Craven formed the second forward line. The Collegiate boys were called upon to display more of their hockey ability than they exhibited with the result that they scored 10 goals during the night's play.

Bell Classy.

Bell, in the nets for the O.S.D. although but a lad, gave the fans a mighty fine exhibition of goal tending and it was no fault of his that his team came out on the short end of the score. Thompson and Meeckitz, on the defence, were a tower of strength to their teams especially on the offensive. The forwards of Meloche, Richardson and Merrite were good as were Bontzari, Boyle, Meldhaw and Dargie. The boys from the School for the Deaf must learn to cover their man, when the opposition is inside the defence area, if they expect to win very many games in the Collegiate loop. On Wednesday night the O.S.D. entertain the Napanee Collegiate while the B.C.I. boys take on the Tweed High School in the second half of a double-header at the local Arena.

The Play.

The game opened fast and the O.S.D. boys counted two goals in the first three minutes of play, when Richardson and Thompson scored. One minute later, High scored for the Collegiate only to have Bontzari make it 3 to 1 on a nice solo effort. The B.C.I. forwards then went to work and on a series of nice combination plays coupled with one individual rush they scored four counters in last five minutes of the period making the score 5 to 3 for B.C.I. Only two penalties were handed out in this period when Meeckick and Barrigage were banished. The second period was much more close checking with the result that only one goal was scored and that was on a nice solo effort on the part of Thompson. when he beat the entire B.C.I. team. Only one penalty was meted out in this frame and that was sent to Thompson for an accident trip. The period ended 6 to 4 for the local Collegiate.

The final period saw the O.S.D. boys throw caution to the wind and before they knew, what it was all about Jimmie Pulwell left them all behind and made the score 6 to 4 for B.C.I. Soon then made a nice individual effort and beat Pichter for 6 to 5. Goyer and Thompson scored and the score stood 7 to 5. This was the last scoring for the O.S.D. boys but as they were on the offensive the B.C.I. forwards got in on a couple of three counters, when Jimmie McGuire scored on the flying moments of the game.

The lineups:

Belleville Collegiate — goal, Pichter; defence, Morgan and Pulwell; centre High; wings McGuire and Barrage, subs, Andrews, Craven, Goyer and McElrath.

O.S.D.—goal, Bell; defence, Thompson and Meeckick; centre Meloche; wings Richardson and Merrite, subs, Bontzari, Burrie, McShane and Dixon.

Bill Green fulfilled the duties of referee to the satisfaction of all.

UP HE GOES

Glenn was cut out for hockey stardom from the start. We remember seeing him play in the Interscholastic games which gave Centennial high school an unbroken series of wins in 1929 and then going over to Montreal A.A.A. headquarters to see him working out as a star of the then Allan Cup contenders, and ultimate cup winners, starting right in the same style in the same season. Before that he had played junior O.H.A. in Toronto, when he was just a kid of fifteen, though I don't recall having picked him out from the herd quite so early in his career. He played with the Montreal A.A.A. until last year when, half-way through the season, the Chicago Blackhawks of the National Hockey League purchased his contract, knowing the howl that home-town Montreal would have raised if they had let him slip through—and besides, they knew it was only a question of "when" he would be starting for some National League team. They knew he was good, but the last year has proven beyond a doubt that professional hockey has secured a star who will carry on up to the zenith. Good luck, Glenn!

Current Sport

By The Observer

We notice that the St. Michael's College hockey team of Toronto kind of rubbed it into the Peterboro Petes at their eastern game in Toronto, in the O. H.A. playdowns on Saturday. The lack of seating 23 goals did not add to the prestige of the team, we would submit. It only went to show that a Toronto team can just can't get away from that "Hog-Town" idea. There is no sporting reason why the surprising fact that their record "rub it into" the youngster and less experienced players from the Lift Lock City. But then the sports in Toronto aren't given to sportsmanship.

Today marks the first spring training of a major league baseball team when the Chicago Cubs open their 1932 season at their Catalina Island training camp. The rest of the teams are training elsewhere but they all be in training before the end of the month. Only one team out of the "Big Leagues" starting their training camp in March and reminds us of the fact that the worst part of the winter should be behind us.

The new executive of the Belleville Nationals have started to work and the first task of the committees have organized the Chicago Blackhawks at the present time. There is a feeling for co-operation among the various committees this year and baseball looks like a feature sport.

There were 14 teams entered in the local Church Basketball League at the Y.M.C.A. this year. All of the various group winners have received cards or trophies except the coming winners of the girls' loop. It is the duty of the league executive that they will have sufficient knowledge concerning the fact in the final series to enable them to buy a permanent trophy for the ladies' loop. The game is a good one and it is to be hoped they will be able to obtain their trophies, with the appearance of the fans tomorrow night.

After their win last night the B.C.I. hockey team can take the lead of their loop by winning from the Tweed High School tomorrow night at the Belleville Arena. The game is the second of a double-header when the O.S.D. take on Napanee C. I. in the first game and B.C.I. battle Tweed H.S. in the second tilt. The local students seem to be headed towards another banner season and Coach Shiels's sparkplug like ar no time with his "pets" On Friday night the locals journey to Tweed for the return battle to be played in the "Maple Leaf Town."

Did you know that Jack Quinn, Brooklyn moundsman, will be 41 years of age in July has been playing major league baseball since 1909 when he first started with the Yankees. Jack started his baseball career in 1905. He says he can still fool plenty of major league batters and demonstrated this fact quite often last year.

Here is one for the old-timers: Paddy Ryan, generally regarded as the first heavyweight champion, had only four fights in his entire career. He won one, lost two and the other was stopped by the police. Today a good top-notcher has that many fights in one season.

Then we might cite Ed. "Strangler" Lewis, the wrestler, who is over 40 years old and has engaged in over 1,200 bouts in his lifetime. Some people are glutions for punishment.

Ed. Lally's O.S.D. "pocksters" threw a scare into the B.C.I. team last night when they ran in two goals in the first three minutes of play. The boys from the O.S.D. are not to be trifled with for they will upset most any good team's "apple cart," when they get used to playing with the fans. Had they not bunched so much last night perhaps the scores would have been another story to tell today.

Although the B.C.I. kids won the battle by the score of 10 to 6 they learned to respect the hockey ability of the boys from the O.S.D. Jimmie Pulwell, for the B.C.I. and Bob Thompson for the O.S.D. were the stars of the night and they were carefully watched in the final frame. The return game between the two teams should see a bumper crowd at the local arena. The game was worth "two bits" of any man's money.

The members of the Belleville hockey teams are guests of the Belle Theatre to witness the picture "He-Man Hockey" today night. Mr. Forbes cordially invited the Belleville hockey players, their wives and sweethearts to see one of the first hockey pictures ever filmed.

BOWERMANS WIN MATCH

Old Fashioned Spelling Bee Held at Hillier Town Hall

Hillier, Feb. 16 (Special)—The great event of the season, a spelling competition of the schools in Hillier township, was held in the Town Hall, Hillier, on Thursday with pupils of Bowerman's school carrying off the honors, successfully winning from each school. The hall was crowded old and young, men, women, boys, girls, even babies, all on the alert for the presentation of the program. This was the largest audience attending gathering of the hall, every available seat being taken.

Words Well Used

There were four pupils from each school in the township, two schools spelling against each other until one side was finally vied. Brown, the principal of Wellington school was the judge in the choice words which baffled the spellers were: assassinate, cataclysm, grimly, nauseous, exaggerate and drowsiness. Belfry was a catch word, spelled "belfrey" in the last Public School Speller, which was accepted.

The program in connection with the spelling competition was excellent, the school children equalling if not excelling the older ones in the rendering of dialogues, orchestral music, songs, etc.

One of the features of the evening was the presentation by Public School Inspector Strathem of the Gold Medal awarded to the pupil making the highest marks in the county at the Entrance Examinations, which Miss Ketchley carried to Master Donald Alexander, 12 year old pupil of Bowerman's Public School Creek school. At the close of the programme, the members of the Women's Institute served light refreshments. The pupils and teachers thanked the institute for the splendid entertainment and to be congratulated on the distinction they won.

Letter to The Sports Writer

Bellevire, Feb. 16, 1932.

"Observer" Sports Department,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

Your reference to George Bradford in your column of yesterday's Ontario Intelligencer brings back memories of other days. No doubt Bradford played with the Belleville team with the Guelph Maple Leafs that he established his reputation. He was the delivering end of the Bradford-"Mickey" Powers battery.

Your statement that Jimmy Congalton—not Gungalton — had played with the "Leafs" of Guelph is not correct. The Congalton who played with the old "Leafs" of Guelph is Bill—Jimmy's brother. You, like the Sports Editor of the Mail and Empire have got the two boys mixed. Bill was the tall thin one, commencing his career with the "Leafs" of Guelph, subsequently going to Flint in the Michigan State League, thence to Chicago Nationals and afterwards to the Boston Americans and winding up his career with Columbus in the Western League. Bill Congalton played for the Guelph Maple Leafs team when Bradford and Powers were the battery for that team and if I remember correctly one season, when Congalton had won the Eastern Ontario championship, the play-off was between that team and the Guelph Maple Leafs, and Congalton who was an outfielder and left hand thrower and batter, pitched the game for the "Leafs" in Cobourg and won the game. He would be somewhere around 1926 or '26; Jimmy Congalton was the batsman for the Guelph team at this period and afterwards played with the Toronto team in the Eastern League.

My memory is fairly clear regarding Congalton, Powers and Bradford since I had the opportunity of playing with them at different times.

Yours truly,
O. A. STOKES,

Belleville, Ont.

LEAGUE TITLE IS AT STAKE

Bridge St. and St. Michael's Lassies Will Be Contestants

While the Y. M. C. A. basketball team is battling it out with the R.M.C. cadets in the Limestone City on Wednesday evening, Cumberland Street gymnasium will also be the scene of several hard fought battles for cage-loop honors. At eight p.m. the Bridge Street girls will oppose the St. Michael's quintette to determine the league championship. In a previous tilt the Bridge District squad annexed the honors and if the St. Mikes' girls fail to turn back the Bridge Street lassies at their next meeting the latter will automatically become the 1932 championships. By winning their opponents the St. Michael's girls can tie up the series and make a third game necessary. These two teams are very evenly matched and can always be counted upon to give their supporters plenty of action whenever they meet.

BATTLE 90 MINS. TO TIE

Tweed and Madoc Entertain Large Crowd in Real Game

Before the largest crowd of fans ever gathered at the Madoc Arena this year, the Tweed and Madoc Intermediate hockey teams battled ninety minutes to one all tie last night.

The game was a fine exhibition of the winter pastime and the fans left the rink feeling that they had been more than repaid for their attendance. McGuire scored the first goal of the night early in the game for the Tweed teams and just before the bell rang for the end of the period Henderson batted in Adam's rebound for the tying counter and both teams played cautiously from then until the end of the game.

McGee and "Bud" Hulin, the two rival goalies, were the stars of the evening as they made many seemingly impossible saves during the ninety minutes of play. As the game was of a clean nature only a few penalties for minor infractions of the rules were handed out by referee Ross Burtt of Trenton.

The line-ups:

Tweed—Goal, McGee; defence, A. Geraldi and G. Geraldi; centre, Rashotte; wings, Campbell and McGuire; subs, LaFontaine, Marsw, F. Geraldi and Terry.

Referee—Ross Burtt of Trenton.

First period—
Tweed—McGuire 4.50
Madoc—Henderson (Watson . 14.00
Second period—No score.
Second period—No score.
Overtime—No score.
Final score, Tweed 1, Madoc 1.

WHAT PARIS IS WEARING

SCARVES

Paris, Feb. 11.—What a little thing a scarf is, but what a lot of things it can do. And nothing was ever more true than that statement applied to the 1932 scarf in particular. Here is an illustration.

The dress is plain with a V-neck and puff sleeves over the elbow and fitting the arms from just below there to the wrist. Three seames give it an entirely different aspect. Two red silk triangles are used first. They are both the same size, and equilateral. One point clips to the side of the V-neck, and the other point to the other side of the neck and the ends wrap around the waist and tie in a small bow at the left side of the waist.

Next a white scarf is placed around the neck, crossed in front at the waistline and tied in a knot with the ends going around the waist and fastening in the back in a small knot. A clip or pin fastens the scarf to the front of the V on the dress.

The third scarf is of blue and white plaid silk and is clipped to the side of the neckline near the shoulder opposite of it, that is. Beginning there, the scarf continues around the back of the neck, comes over the other shoulder, goes across the front of the dress and ends under arm seam at the left, one hand holds it there for a minute until the other has had time to wrap it around the waist and slip it through the loop that made when it comes back to that point. A bow with one loop finishes this third arrangement.

Belts and Buttons.

A belt, a button and a bow—show how the fashion winds will blow. And believe us, those little and very, while unimportant items are now highly educated and are receiving Ph. D. degrees in cleverness every day here.

There are belts, par example, that leave even the imagination up a tree in discovery how one gets in or out of them. Some of the fastenings are intricate to the naked eye, while others look so complicated it would seem that nothing short of a miracle could result in successful application.

And buttons! Your monogram cut out and rounded or triangled is about the latest fashion trend and when each of three letters (if you have that long a name) is done in different colors, the dress is set off nearly it can inspire accessories to match.

As for bows—with one or two of them, a piece of string, and some straw (these will be the spring bows), it won't be long before you will find that you have another beau.

Rotary Auxiliary Club is Formed

A ladies' Auxiliary of the Belleville Rotary Club has been formed with the following officers:

Secretary-Treas.—J. A. McPee.
Convenor of Crippled Children Work—Mrs. Jas. Ross, assisted by Mrs. Harry Hill.
Committee Members—Mrs. Van Blaskies, Mrs. John A. Kerr. This organization of ladies will assist the Rotarians in their work for the needy and merry and will give special attention to the work for crippled children.

"BANG" STYLE SHOWN AGAIN

CHICAGO—The spring robin red breast will see the bang back in favor as a style of the feminine crowning glory. Not the formal bang of Victorian days, nor that tufted effect worn by Victorian fashion plates, but a light, soft, slightly irregular bang will be worn in monotony of foreheads long bared to the elements.

Very piquant are curls peeping out from under the brim of the new hats that slant down over the right eye. Equally pleasing, the hairdressing manner, will be worn by ladies that stray out from the left temple.

Daily Beautifying A tentions Rewarded

Fate gets a lot of hand knocks that Fate doesn't deserve. A woman taking inventory in her mirror makes a face at herself and says:

"Wouldn't you know it? That's fate for you. Has it in for me, the old meanie. Why can't I look young like that skippy young grandma who lives next door?"

Ah, indeed, why not? That grandma might be able to deliver a three volume lecture that would tell an interesting story, one that would put a smile on the face of Pate who must ever be kicked about when a woman feels like biting nails or pulling hairs out, one by one.

Grandma has the beauty system. She believes in taking out insurance against the marks of Mister Time. She knows that every Pate bawler is responsible for many of her spiritual and physical defects. Scowling has dug in the brow lines. Neglect has allowed her complexion to dry up, go to seed like a garden in the autumn. She has been unwisely lit can inspire accessories to match.

soaking, followed by a rousing old fashioned shampoo with plain brush. Complexion gets it quick slapping with finger tips that have burrowed into the massage cream jug, the neck is not passed by as something not worth bothering about. Necks reveal age sooner than faces sometimes.

The glorious mop is brushed. The comb is dipped into hot water and the permanent wave whipped to it action, so as to put on a nice wave pattern. Over the head a cap of net. There you are, little wavelet. Ready to be combed out in the morning, quick as whinks.

More time than is given to the complexion and hair is given to the hands. Keeping hands young and fair is a time consuming effort. Discolorations are removed by rubbing with a cut lemon. Nails of hands and fingers are gently stroked with a disappearing lotion. On every finger nail is dabbed a bit of cuticle cream. Of all horrors deliver grand is the mannish and shredded, broken nail curse.

Be not scornful of daily ordeals or to hang onto the evidences of youth. In the long run of the years it counts for good.

There is the comforting effect it has on the spirits. One is clean and dainty anointed with fragrant ointments, nice to look at warmed with a feeling of self respect.

If beauty ills sneak up as they do sometimes, it is satisfying to realize that one has put up a fight. One hasn't been a lazy lout. One has at least faced the old dragon with courage.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dinner Coat Accessories

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When in a restaurant of high class, and I am dining with my young man friend and another young man friend who asks me to dance, may I go with the one he passes my table to the one appointed him by the captain, he steps and says "Hello" and asks me to dance?

My friend to the gentleman who has asked me to dance, may say:

2. Also please give me the correct accessories to be worn with a Tuxedo for a lady. That is, the watch, the fan, the following at very nice affairs, and I am quite at a loss when I come to black tie; black vest with white tie, floor length or black vest; white tie with white vest?

3. Also, I go down about once a week and every young man I invite for luncheon and we eat in a fashionable restaurant, the captain of head waiter always nods and usually gives us the same table. Should my friend tip him, say once in every few weeks, or isn't this necessary?

4. Also I understand it is not proper for a girl to take out her handkerchief when eating and wipe lip stick at the table. Am I right?

1. All that is necessary for this introduction is the mention of the two names, and it doesn't make any difference which name you mention first. Both are correct. Thank you.

2. With a dinner jacket (Tuxedo) the lady wears her usual dinner gown, a black bow tie, of course. Her watch, fan and handkerchief are correct, so no deviation to this.

3. No matter of waistcoats, there may be a deviation. Customarily only a black waistcoat is worn with a dinner jacket, and the correctly dressed man wears a black waistcoat with his dinner jacket. As he wears a black tie with his dinner jacket, he wears the black waistcoat with his dinner jacket. He makes the white tie and the white waistcoat with his formal tailcoat.

But some men wear the white waistcoat with the dinner jacket to register a bit more formality than the black waistcoat implies, and while this, strictly speaking, is not the thing to do, and is incorrect, it has been more or less accepted. But the black hasn't ever been form—only as bigarre.

4. For such constant and friendly service as this it is customary for the gentleman to tip the headwaiter occasionally. It's a pleasant and generous gesture, and will, of course, be appreciated by the headwaiter.

5. Right you are. It's better form for her to go to the dressing-room and go through these beautifying motions.

Replying to a Toast.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the proper thing for the groom to say at a home reception when the guests all drink a toast to the bride and groom? Should he rise or remain seated and what should he say?

CHARLES.

The groom rises to acknowledge this toast. He may make the simplest kind of acknowledgment—"Mary and I thank you, with the deepest appreciation, for your good wishes and for your friendship" — to a longer speech, worded appropriately to the group of guests. That is, if there are only a few relatives and friends present, he may make quite quite a "speech", but usually he only says a sentence or two.

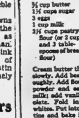
FLOWERS EVERYWHERE seems to be the rule for Spring. Hats are also taken a part in fact black crushes with a high brim treatment and massed back and sides with crushed red velvet carnations. With it is a tiny muff of the same red flowers.

WE CAN'T FORGET the charm of prints and each Spring most of us invest in at least one print frock. A charming model features dark shades on a white ground and there is a broad inset girdle emerging in dachate and silver lame's, a square neckline and the sleeves end in points.

BE CAREFUL in the selection of your costume jewelry. Most certain types are being shown for certain frocks. With a simple but smart afternoon frock an ideal choice would be a leaf necklace in dark green enamel, or, perhaps, of carved black silk rope and fastened with a black and silver clasp.



LUXURY IN THE HOME is well represented by the latest negligees. A lovely negligee coat is fashioned of water green velvet with silver lace which has a fitted waistband, cut on a tulle ground. There are full sleeves, a pointed, tulle trim and fluted lines.

TRENDS MAKE A SLIP that looks good and yet is bulky when worn under a light frock. A new fad that eliminates all lines draws back is made of pink georgette and is trimmed with rows of shirring in hemstitching.

NEW NOTIONS about nightgowns have much more interest since the white has ousted the pyjama as sleeping attire for the modern girl. A charming new model uses pink crepe de Chine and has a deep openwork bound with pink satin ribbon. The centre panel is finely pleated.

Farmer Brown's Boy Takes a Hand

By Thornton W. Burgess

He is the truest kind of friend Who doth assistance freely lend. —Old Mother Nature.

Farmer Brown's Boy was delighted when he discovered that Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face were making their home in the barn. In the first place, Jumbo and Gwen were unknown in that neighborhood, and so he was greatly interested in these unexpected visitors. In the second place, he had an idea that there was going to be a decided check to the mischief wrought by Hals and Mee of late and that these queer-looking birds would be the cause of it. Thirdly and lastly, he wanted to make the acquaintance of these feathered folk.

"I do hope those Gwis will nest in the barn. It would be great fun to have a lot of funny little Gwis to watch," said Farmer Brown's Boy.

"It wouldn't be so much fun to have to provide chickens to feed them," suggested Farmer Brown.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked pretty sober. "That is true" said he. "Perhaps they won't touch the chicken. That is one of the things I want to find out. I don't believe they touch birds when they can get enough Rats and Mice and such things. I've been collecting the pellets they have thrown up lately, and so far I haven't found any feathers in them. They have been wholly of the bones and fur of Mice, Rats and Shrews. Probably when they have a family and have to have a lot of food they will catch some birds. But I don't want to bother the chickens. Anyway, I want to find out for myself whether or not they are useful. I have an idea they are. I have been so far, anyway."

How Farmer Brown's Boy has been looking ahead quite as much as Mrs. Monkey-face and giving a lot of thought to the matter of housing-places. He knew as though he knew, just about what Mrs. Monkey-face would like and what she would not like. He tried to put himself in her place, and the result was that he couldn't find what seemed to him a first class place for raising a family of young Gwis in that barn. He looked up at the rafters and studied them thoughtfully.

He nailed boards across the rafters for a floor.

"There ought to be a place for Gwis to stretch their wings where it is dark and where no one would be likely to disturb them," said he, and studied those rafters more than ever.

The result was that Farmer Brown's Boy spent a very busy forenoon with Quaker Jackson on the rafters from the haymow. He carried up a lot of old boards, nails and hammer and saw. Close up under the roof in the darkest spot over he nailed boards across the rafters for a floor and then he nailed more boards to make a little room, leaving one side open. This was the side toward the gable window through a hole in which the Owls went in and out.

Of course Monkey-face and Mrs. Monkey-face watched what they were driven out of their favorite corner. They flew back and forth from the barn to the old apple and making all sorts of queer noises. They didn't go very far away, and the sun was shining brightly and they didn't like it at all. What Farmer Brown's Boy was about they couldn't imagine, but they were sure that it was going to spoil them. They were suspicious of it, very suspicious of it.

When at last Farmer Brown's Boy climbed down his ladder for the last time, taking his tools with him, and they were left in peace, they were still suspicious. They fle wall around that little room on the outside and tried to guess what it was for.

"It has spoiled our favorite perch," declared Mrs. Monkey-face indignantly. "Now I know what I shall do when nesting time comes around."

"What?" asked Monkey-face anxiously.

"I shall go back to that church tower," declared Mrs. Monkey-face. And she meant it.

FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS SLOW AGAIN TODAY

Much Speculation Regarding Reports on Wheat.

Toronto, Feb. 16—There was no life to the list on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Prices were not depressed, at least not noticeably so and gains were fully as numerous as losses, but it simply was impossible to work up any interest.

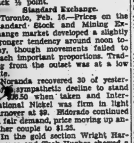
Walkers came nearest to exciting a public following than any individual issue. Scepter Co. is another organization in this company had the street wondering to just what extent such a re-organization would affect present shareholders. This morning the stock crept upward another fraction, reaching 3½ by noon. Walker, which sold off yesterday following the news the dividend would be passed, was steady and unchanged this morning at nine, which is pretty good sign this stock has been well liquidated. Smelters and Noranda were both unchanged last night as well.

G.P.E. sold at the same price, Brazilian, Ford of Canada, Imperial Oil slightly higher. Dominion Motors also moved up. On the other hand, Page Hersey dropped ½ point and Steel of Canada, Dominion Stores and Loblaw were easier. Oils were most irregular, with Imperial the only issue to go higher. Anglo Oil was unchanged while International Petroleum similarly dropped back ¼ point.

Standard Exchange.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Prices on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today showed a slightly stronger tendency around noon today, though movement still failed to reach important proportions. Trading from the outset was at a low volume.

Noranda recovered 30 of yesterday's unexplained decline to stand at 29.50 when taken and International Nickel was firm in light turnover at 39. Hudvada continued its fair demand, price moving up another couple to $1.25.



In the gold section Wright Hargreaves and Jack-Hughes showed a slightly easier tendency, but Granada advanced to $1.10 and Lake Shore was up 5 at $23.25. Among cheaper issues Buffalo and Sagamac displayed small gains.

Peninsular Petroleum and Oil Selection, up minor fractions, exhibited the only changes in a quiet oil section.

TRENTON MAY MAKE PLAYOFF

Defeat Bowmanville 1 to 0 in Overtime to Keep in Running

Trenton, Feb. 16 (Special) — Trenton and Bowmanville here on Saturday night 1 to 0 after ten minutes of overtime. The ice was hard but very rough and passing in the first two periods was more luck than good management. The locals are trying hard to get into the playoffs and by the way they are going are going to be in them. They go to Bowmanville on Monday night and if they are able to take them in their own camp they will be tied for second place. Each game they play finds them a little better, than the last one so despite the fact of having no ice to practice on in the early part of the season, they still have a chance to go farther than some of the teams who have had every advantage. Too much credit cannot be given to coach Ross Burt in the coaching of the team. He has spent a lot of time on the team and he doesn't draw any big salary but is doing the work gratis. Colwell in goal for the visitors deserves a good deal of credit for the way he stops the one goal, he stopped them all. Moles on left wing did the best for Bowmanville, he had Steenburg hopping to stop him time and again. Candler at centre and Jackman on right wing were good and turned in a nice game, Cameron and Chartrand on defence were also stopping them until the game took a hard fall into the boards in the second period and was thrown from the game. He sustained a wrenched elbow and it is not known at the time how badly the blow he got in the ribs injured him. C. Piper, I. Piper and Jamieson and Hooper rounded out the visitors squad into a smooth working machine. To Trenton, Johnson and Rosenfeldt were playing their last game for the season as scoring the goal is concerned, of the three of them being in it the death. York and Fillon on defence are a hard pair to get through and their rushing is like lightning. Culverson, Segin, Miller and Bowen all played good hockey working with the one thought in mind to get in the playoffs. Steenburg in goal seems to have been underrated by some but his last night's game should convince the most skeptical that he is capable of defending the Trenton net.

The lineups:

Bowmanville—goal, Colwell, defence, Cameron and Chartrand; centre, Jackman; wings, Jamieson and Moles. Alternates C. Piper, I. Piper, Johnston and Hooper.

Trenton — goal Steenburg; defence, York and Rosenfeldt; centre, Jackman; wings, Rosenpiol and Johnson. Alternates, Miller, Culverson, Segin and Jackman.

Penalties

2nd period—Bowmanville, Jamieson.

2nd. period—Trenton, Rosenpiol; 3rd period, Rosenpiol.

Referee—Joe Smith of Kingston.

Sewer Blockage on Church and Purdy Streets Discussed By City Council Meeting

Deputations From These Two Sections Waited on Council

NO RELIEF

If Cellar Drains Hooked to Sewer Resident Assumes Responsibility

Beyond hearing two deputations, the first from Dorset street, respecting an alleged blockage of the sanitary sewer on that street, and the consequent over flow of water into cellars of homes at that street, another one from Purdy street with the same complaint of flooding, but caused by the lack of drainage facilities, the passing of previous by-laws recommended and the award of contracts for the new Fireman's suits and the reconstruction of Dundas street, Trenton Ave. sewer be constructed, very little new business was transacted at the regular meeting of the city council, held last evening.

Mr. J. A. Ockers, representing the citizens of Church street was the first to be heard by the council and to the attention of the council the fact that owing to the bad condition of the sewer on that street had been in a standstill state of disrepair. After every rain, he claimed, the water and filth from the sewer backed up into the cellars of all who had made connections with it and threatened the health conditions of that street. The local Board of Health investigated and recommended that be at once draw the attention of the city council to the matter. This has been done years before, according to Mr. Ockers, but it never has been attended to, and from time to time attempts had been made to clean out the sewer, but strongly urged that remedial measures be at once taken to alleviate the nuisance.

Alderman Bennett: "Have you a drain running from your house into that sanitary sewer?"

Mr. Ockers admitted that he had, and was then informed that it was distinctly against the bylaw to hook up any connection with a sanitary sewer. When queried as to what method then should be used to drain the cellar, Alderman Bennett admitted that it was a very hard question to answer.

Alderman Donahue: "Flooding is prevalent all over the city. When the sewers were built in the first place they were too small. Hundreds of houses all over the city had connections from cellars to storm drains and so on into all the sewers in the city and added to that a very large number of catch basins are also draining into the sewers, and consequently when it rains the sewers are unable to take the water away as fast as it pours in and backs up into suits. Weeds and roots of trees further complicate matters. Accordingly to bylaw those who do hook their cellars into the sanitary sewer must assume all responsibility for everything that may follow. Frankly there is nothing that can be done to relieve that particular sewer as the high grade of the trunk sewer in Dundas street—prohibits lowering Church street drains to any more available remedy."

Alderman Mills stated that when he lived on that street years ago the trouble was as acute then as it is now. Also at one time approached the city council then on the same matter, but was assured to be nothing that could be done.

Ald. Woodley: "Would a trap be of any benefit to the owners of those houses?"

Alderman Donahue: "They are really only a makeshift arrangement at the best. A trap: don't would clog them up completely."

The recommendation was then made that the chairman of public works and city engineer Chas. Mott be appointed as a special committee to investigate the condition and seek if possible some remedy.

Mr. Brown, who lives on Purdy street, and who was the next speaker to address the council stated that there was at last four feet of water in his cellar. My potatoes and other vegetables are swimming around in there now as it is like that every year."

Ald. Donahue: "How many houses

What Council Did

"Passed the recommendation that the Central Relief Committee be allowed to draw on the Bank of Montreal for sums not to exceed $6,000.00.

"Rescinded the recommendation passed on February 11th regarding Purdy street, and recommended that:

"Awarded the contract for ten (10) Firemen's suits to Quick and Robertson at $26.00 a suit, No. 8087.

"Awarded the contract for ten (10) Firemen's suits to Chas. J. Symons at $26.50 a suit, No. 3287.

"Received the recommendation of the special committee appointed to investigate Outside Drainage and Cellar Drains, be: that an amendment should be made to city bylaw No. 1604.

"Received a deputation from Dorset street regarding the sewer flow of water into cellars from the existing sewer on that street.

"Received a deputation from Purdy street also respecting flooding of cellars on account of inadequate sewage facilities.

"Moved by Alderman R. P. White and seconded by Alderman Geo. Bennett, That this Council be instructed to prepare the necessary bylaw for the construction of a Sanitary Sewer on Dufferin Avenue for the petitioners who have signed Local Improvement Act, Sec. 8.

"Appointed a committee of two, Alderman W. Donahue and City Engineer Chas. Mott to investigate existing conditions of Church street sewer."

are there on that street."

Mr. Brown: "Seven or eight but we have not complained as they too are owned mostly by people now residing in the United States."

Mr. Ockers: "Before the contract is awarded for the construction of a Sanitary Sewer on Dufferin Avenue for the petitioners who have signed, Local Improvement Act, Sec. 8.

Alderman J. D. McMillan: "Has any report ever been made by that Packing Committee named some years ago?"

Alderman Geo. Bennett: "I was about to propose that I feel that the time is opportune to take the initiative on this question, and with the aid of the Merchants' Association and the Chamber of Commerce we should begin to get some arrangements made. The matter is a pressing one." This matter was laid over until some arrangements could be made with the other two bodies to make preliminary reports.

Alderman who were present were: J. Imlah; H. Morgan; T. Marshall; H. Armstrong; D. McMillan; C. Wilkinson; Geo. Bennett; W. Donahue; R. P. White and H. Hill.

TWO LINE SYSTEM

Private and National Systems Can Be Preserved in Canada

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 15 — (By The Canadian Press)—A National Transportation Board vested with wide powers in the direction and control of railways in Canada, continuance of the Canadian National System under government control, confirmation of appointments, to the C.N.R. directorate by Parliament, and reconstruction of the financial structure of the railways, were suggested as among the suggestions advanced to the Commission on transportation here today by Robert J. Tallon, Canadian President of the Federated Railway Clerks and Vice President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Mr. Tallon also said that railway mileage be divided "fairly evenly" between the C.N.R. and the Canadian Pacific, that their auxiliaries services be jointly controlled, and that motor vehicle traffic be subjected to some form of taxation. Among other things he suggested tolls be charged for the use of Canadian canals.

Fair Division.

Canada's interests will best be preserved and furthered through the maintenance of a publicly and a privately owned railway system, dividing the railway mileage fairly equally between them and subject to rigid governmental regulation, said Mr. Tallon. By virtue of his office he represented the views of 120,000 Canadian railway workers before the Duff Commission.

In order to prevent development of wasteful railway labor recommends that competition be restricted to a minimum, declared to be known as the National Transportation Board, "which may, under its own initiative or upon request submit for investigation and report, investigations, hold hearings, and issue orders preventing such ruinous competition."

Under Government Control.

Railway lines to which the Canadian National System continue to be leased by the federal government in relation to the government be "satisfied so as to reduce the hazard of political interference in management to the lowest terms possible."

Other suggestions for immediate revolutionary changes are suggested by the appointment of additional National directors and in defining their duties.

Directors should hold office for six years and appointed "as representatives of definitely specified areas or economic interests, such as financial, manufacturing, agricultural and labor." The reconstituted board would be appointed by the governor in council and in addition confirmed by parliament. The board would have the right "sole power" to appoint the President and Vice-President of the Canadian National.

Instead of the Minister of Railways and Canals and parliament controlling all constructions, the railway labor recommends that the proposed National Transportation Board be vested with authority to give "final approval to new construction, extensions, new services or facilities, raising new capital and authorizing the acquisition of all securities." It also suggests the creation of a transportation advisory council on which the Minister of Railways would be chairman, to give continuous study to all questions of transportation problems.

Board Would Help

"The creation of a national transportation board, working in coordination with railway managements freed from political interference and unhampered by wasteful constructive activities of a transportation advisory council, will then be ready, equipped to make for a high type of self government for the Canadian transportation industry."

"If this objective is realized," he added, "there will be no more need for the exercise of the power of inquiry and report now enjoyed by the Minister of Railways and Canals. This power will and should be confined strictly to the proposed national transportation board."

Railway labor urged that the financial structure of the Canadian National be revised so as to "eliminate all liabilities which have little if any justification in that structure as judged by sound railway financial practice."

Mr. Tallon declared that, apart from the Central Vermont and parts of the Grand Trunk Western, none of the lines now comprising the Canadian National system have ever gone through the process of receivership "and so have not had their financial structure revised in like with reality."

"The chief difficulties confronting Canadian railways," he said, "arise out of past financial operation of these railway companies which have since been merged by the government into the Canadian National system. They are a heritage of the past which no railway management, no matter how skilful and efficient, no matter how loyal and co-operative, could possibly have liquidated in the last ten years."

Unjust and Harmful

"In the judgment of railway labor it is utterly unfair and unsound and most unfortunate and demoralizing to expose the Canadian National longer to the critical, fault finding, ridiculous charges, absurd comparisons and other forms of attack which it has been subjected, especially since the advent of the depression because of the so-called Canadian National debt.

"It is manifestly a permanent structure," he continued, "in to perpetuity. As an instrument of service it should be seriously detrimental to Canadian national unity and welfare to jeopardize its interest. No good purpose can possibly be served by exposing business secrets on account of the National management for the existence of which it is not in the least responsible. It is unjust, unsound and harmful.

"The one question transcending all others in importance is the method needed for relief so Should the Canadian National system, its management, continue to struggle under the present heavy handicaps, longer continue to struggle under the present heavy handicaps, burdened debt, reared upon their shoulders because of circumstances over which their wisdom have elected not to let down those who had faith in the future of Canada and advanced the funds to build railways?"

APPEAL DISMISSED BY JUDGE DEROCHE

In the Division Court held yesterday before His Honor Judge Deroche the appeal of Mrs. Mary Cavanagh vs. Nick Chaggaris was heard. The former sued Mrs. C. for wages as her employer, for wages to the amount of $400.00 and was given $75. In the first hearing, before Magistrate Mikel last month, judgment was handed down in favor of Mrs. Cavanagh. Convers is the amount sued for. Yesterday's hearing, however, after hearing the evidence submitted, Mr. Deroche dismissed the appeal. Counsel appeared for the plaintiff while R. D. Arnott appeared for Chaggaris.

NO INCREASE IN THE SPEED LIMIT

Minister of Highway Believes Limit is Reasonable

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10 (CP) — Accepting the invitation of Provincial Minister of Highways, last night to speak at the annual meeting of the Canadian National and Ontario Safety League, Toronto motorists have no reason for an increase in the speed limit for automobiles in Ontario.

The present limit of 35 miles per hour, he said, was moderate and has been responsible for the very low percentage of accidents in the province.

He urged individuals to become "traffic conscious."

METAL ROTOR EXPLODES AND THREE HURT

Students at Toronto University Victims; One Critical

DOING EXPERIMENT

Whole District Shaken; Investigation Begun Into Cause

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Victims of science's crusade in aid of industry, three University of Toronto students were injured yesterday afternoon by the explosion of a metal rotor being used in a Mining Building laboratory, in an experiment designed to evolve a new method of producing carbolic acid out of the coal derivative, benzene.

The injured students are in the emergency ward of Toronto General Hospital, one of them in critical condition.

The sharp, terrific explosion, which was heard for a radius of several blocks and reverberated throughout the building, blew out the windows on two sides of the room and scattered glass on the street below. Debris was hurled at Col-lge and McCaul streets, damaging cars in the laboratory, billowing out into the corridor on the third floor of the building.

Those Injured

The injured students, hurt principally by flying pieces of metal, are:

R. Arthur Wood, 21 years of age, of Cooktown, living at 794 Palmerston Avenue; fourth year mining student in School of Practical Science. Suffering from jagged puncture of the shoulder, and serious loss of blood from severed subclavian artery. Condition reported as dangerous, but conceded a fighting chance of recovery.

H. T. Wright, aged 22, of 119 Overlea Boulevard, Lambton Mills, Fourth year Engineering student in mechanical engineering course. Injuries include punctured abdomen and chest, and burns, though not serious, about the arms from flame of explosion Condition causing no anxiety.

T. Rose Nicholson, aged 22, of 59 Hepbourne Street, Toronto. Fourth year mining student. Suffering from minow punctures in legs, but one serious condition. Was able to return to his home after treatment and examination at hospital.

Dazed and bleeding, Wood and Wright left the building where they soon picked up and rushed to the Mining Laboratory, attendants and fellow students who ran to the scene. The dozen other students working in the laboratory, though stunned and shaken by the detonation and concussion, fully pulled themselves together and with in a body with other mining students to offer their services in the confusions at the hospital, only a block away.

TOKIO RUSHES NEW DIVISIONS FOR BIG DRIVE

Crack Troops of President Bring Chinese Strength to 50,000

ARTILLERY READY

Foreigners Urged to Vacate Interior as War Flame Feared

By MORRIS J. HARRIS

Asso. Press Staff Correspondent

Shanghai, Feb. 16.—Japan withheld her big drive today, apparently determined to wait for still more guns and troops in order that there be no repetition of the costly lesson experience at Chapei, where outnumbered Japanese bluejackets were compelled to withdraw before Chinese army.

Fifty thousand Chinese soldiers have been concentrated in the French lines and fortifications in Shanghai and at Woosung. Latest official estimates put the Japanese strength at 29,000 with additional men already on the way. Tokio reported that still more units would be despatched, in view of the threat that the Chinese will refuse to give in until they are overwhelmed.

During the last twenty-four hours there has been just enough guns fired to keep China aware there was an enemy army in the field. At dusk Monday, heavy artillery blazed away at the Chinese lines at Chapei. A weak response came from trench mortars in the Chinese sector an hour or so the tumult subsided.

Japanese Units Landed

Shanghai resounded to the tramp of marching men all day Monday as Japanese units were moved off to the Chapei and Woosung fronts. Other outfits were landed from transports and sent to Japanese cotton mills, factories and warehouses which have been taken over as concentration points.

General Tsai Ting-Kai, Chinese commander, announced that two new division, numbering approximately 20,000 men, had been added to his army. This gave him a total force of almost 50,000.

The Chinese also improved their position so far as artillery is concerned. New howitzer batteries have got in line, and the 10 field artillerymen worked desperately to strengthen their secondary defences. Extra supplies of ammunition were sent to Chinese machine gun detachments.

At the same time approximately 10,000 men of the Japanese forces, including British, United States and French marines, and the defence they have raised around the International Settlement and the French Concession.

Indications that the United States authorities feared disorders in other parts of China were given in an announcement that United States Lines were among the lower Yangtze Valley ports where unrest is acute. Other foreigners also were reported to be moving into the interior.

The United States Consulate said it had advised evacuation of interior parts of China within 100 miles of Shanghai.

Public Works Hit Hard-est With Nine Millions Lopped Off

RAILWAY 6 MILLIONS

Public Debt Interest, Justice and R. C. M. P. Only Increases

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.— Reductions and retrenchments on a wholly unprecedented scale, executed with a severity that gives new meaning to the phrase "cut to the bone", were revealed in the main estimates for 1932-33 which Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, tabled in the House of Commons.

They show that the total estimates (main and supplementary) for the last fiscal year 1931-32 $454,-

Public works appropriations are cut by $9,000,000, railways and canals by $6,000,000, post office by $4,000,000, and so on down the line through the gamut of branches of the public service. Apart from the increase in the tax in the interest on the public debt, the sole increases in expenditure are $4,000 in the Justice Department and $485,000 for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Increases in the latter are occasioned by extensions of the respective organizations.

The estimates, which cover the fiscal year commencing April 1 and ending the 12 months starting on April 1, total $356,772,794. This, according to official statement, represents a drop of $43,628,248, below the total amount expended on the public service last year. These main estimates are approximately $30,000,000 less than the main estimates for 1931-32 tabled last year.

Part of the monumental reduction has been achieved by the ten per cent in civil service salaries announced last week by Premier Bennett. This cut accounts for between $7,500,000 and $8,000,000 of the large saving by which the Government is making way for its economy budget.

Aviation, including air mail routes has suffered so far as additional cuts in the estimates. Expenditures under this heading are cut from $3,442,000 this year to $1,750,000 in the period starting next April, a reduction of approximately 70 per cent.

Other Departmental Cuts

Other departmental cuts are: National Revenue, $2,500,000; Trade and Commerce, $3,500,000; Marine, $1,000,000; Agriculture, $1,200,000; Pensions and National Health, $2,000,000; National Defence $2,600,000; Pensions, $2,500,000; Interior, $1,000,000; mail subsidies, steamship, $500,000; railway, $6,100,000.

How great a problem the Government faces in thus cutting expenditures to the bone is apparent from the mendous an achievement has been scored by this unprecedented reduction—is shown by the fact that of the $356,000,000 total expenditures $215,000,000 is uncontrollable and cannot be reduced. This large irreducible portion of Government spending is largely required by debt interest, which amounts to $137,000,000, and war pensions, running to $48,000,000. After these and similar items are allowed for, there is left of the $356,000,000 only $139,000,000 for the operation of the machinery of Government and the provision of the necessary public services.

Apart from Judges' salaries and other expenses unalterably fixed by statute, practically every one of the departments of the public estimates has been pared down below the reduced figure at which it appeared last year. In many departments every vote has been cut.

Many cases of pneumonia develop from neglected colds

Unless checked, the "simple cold" pulls down the body resistance and frequently paves the way for pneumonia's deadly attack.

It is wise to treat every cold promptly. This is doubly important during the next few weeks when pneumonia is at its height. Rubbed on chest and chest, Vicks acts two ways at once in relieving colds:

(1) Its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the breathing.

(2) At the same time, it acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

Ellen's fingers trembled with the mad delight of tearing away green cardboard and massed layers of satiny paper. Roses, wet and darkly red—one of them!

"How many are there?" Molly inquired, distractedly disgruntled.

"Millions, it looks like. I can't count them. Oh, the beauties!" And she wrenched the card free and began to open the envelope.

She blurred with clumsiness but the trifling was perfectly distinguishable. The writing was not Larry's. With the success of your new venture, B." read the message.

Ellen was ready to cry in her disappointment. She had been so sure! Larry and Molly were far too casual and flustered to notice anything amiss. Flowers and boxes in the Rossiter household were rare enough to cause any amount of excitement.

"I told you, I told you," Molly was insisting. "They're from Mr. Barclay, aren't they?"

"Yes," said Ellen.

The girl read the message a second time in an effort to recapture some of her original delight at receiving such a splendid gift and failed. The card fluttered from her fingers. Molly pounced upon it. Together she and Myra read the short note and exclaimed and speculated and published quite enough to make up for any lack in Ellen.

An umbrella stand was rushed to service. It was the only vessel in the house deep enough for the long stemmed beauties. Deploring Mr. Posterthwaite Molly cut down the smooth green stems of half a dozen buds and arranged them at a shabby breakfast table. Ellen's eyes were all for the tall splendor of the American Beauties that filled close to Ellen's chair.

"They're four feet long if they're an inch," she muttered happily, tipping into her place at the head of the table.

"Mother, if you say that again," Myra said crossly, "I'll scream."

"I'll join you in the screaming," the offender smirkily. But she added with a curious look at her sister, "Aren't you pleased, honey?"

"Of course I'm pleased," snapped Ellen. "What am I supposed to do dance a jig?"

"Ellen's got a fellow! Ellen's got a fellow!" chanted Miss, catching gleefully the excitement of his elders.

"Be still, Mike," said his mother serenely. "Don't tease your sister," Myra said Myra exchanged a long significant look. Ellen caught the look. It occurred to her a little forcibly that she only person in the entire household not delighted with Steven Barclay's generosity was the recipient of it.

CHAPTER VIII

The initial excitement over Steven Barclay's generosity and Steven Barclay's intentions simmered down to quite an breakfast proposed. Further thing, Mike with his clamorous demands for "More tea, Mother," and "Just a little teeny bit of your coffee Mom," made any sustained discussion impossible. After he had gulped his food and scampered away, Molly was at the fascinating topic again. She went straight to the main issue.

"Mr. Barclay is a bachelor, isn't he, Ellen?"

"I don't know and don't care," Ellen answered on a note of going sentiment. "Oh dear! I'm sorry," she apologized, as tears welled up in Molly's eyes. "I didn't mean to be rude. I just hated being made a Roman holiday. I think he's a widower."

"Grass," supplied Myra. "He's been married twice. I don't know what happened to his first wife but she died the second one—got a Mexican divorce. The papers were full of it at the time." Myra added self-consciously, "You see, Mrs. Barclay was Leda Gray—that dancer—you know—she was a terrific scandal."

"Oh," said Molly uncertainly. She was dashed. "Then that's different," she wasn't that different, she added, reluctantly compelled to loyalty to her sister. "Only, dear, remember the whole story isn't—it was all the woman's fault."

"I should say it was her fault," Myra commented warmly. She annulled her statement. "Look at your arm chested from the first but Mr. Barclay was a newlywed when he got a divorce in Mexico—incompatibility or something. Everything he settled on her and they say he got $1,000,000 for taking back his maiden name. Pretty cute! Sold him at all."

"That's awful. Then everything's right," sighed Molly, relieved but not ashamed to be so. "I'm sure he wouldn't have shown Ellen any favor are you trying to do?" she identified a thing that was a delight.

asked Ellen in a tone which she hoped hid her annoyance. "Make Mr. Barclay fall in love with me on the strength of a few flowers?"

"Don't you wish that, young lady, but you can't have my mother," Molly declared in her airy assumption of sophistication and gaiety. "Flowers might mean nothing from a young boy. But an old man doesn't do things like that and you're not trying to make me throw dust in our eyes."

Myra was furious. She was conscious of a sense that she was being ill-natured and ungracious, although that she was blaming Steven Barclay because his flowers were not from another man, blaming him, as well, for her mother's foolishness. But she could barely restrain herself from throwing them from the table when Molly began to talk of the impropriety of his gifts.

"Why, I need two or three light little dresses for evening," she was saying. "Luckily it's summer and you can wear anything. I do wish your Aunt Myra would send another box. It's about time for one."

"What are you thinking of, mother?" Ellen protested in a vain attempt to check the tide. "You're making tremendous plans on nothing at all. It won't have it!"

"Well," responded Molly, hurt, "if you don't want us to share your pleasures with you—why I guess—"

Ellen was suddenly remorseful. Mother was mother, 'delightin' feather-headed, irresponsible. There was no need to destroy her gayety. As she comforted her, Ellen's amused tolerant look went to meet Myra's self-conscious eyes. And she saw with an unpleasant shock that already, sensible Myra, for once, had sided against her. Myra believed she had been flagrantly caught with Molly readily forgave the grave injury that Ellen had done her. The easy tears dried and she was laughing, chatting again.

"You'd better be good to me," she gayly rebuked Ellen. "I've a surprise I've been keeping for you. Yesterday after you. telephoned almost not having the rain—you'd went out and bought you a lovely printed chiffon with the cunningest little jacket that you take off—when you dance."

There was an appalled silence.

Molly added nervously, defensively, "It was a great bargain and since we didn't have enough money to pay the rent anyway, why, I thought—"

"Oh, mother," wailed Myra, "can't you see there's no point at all in Ellen's working herself to death at Dreamland if all the extra money is to go for her clothes?"

"But now she can spurn the other dress to Mr. Barclay and start out right with him," urged Molly. "It'll come in handy anyhow. You'll see. Things are starting to happen to Ellen. No one knows how long she'll have to work anyway."

Ellen saw her way clear at least.

"I love working at Dreamland," she said. "It's not work. It's fun there. I want to keep on. I met someone—well anyway I couldn't give up going there for anything." She finished confusedly.

As Myra and Molly, their argument forgotten, turned their startled eyes on her she was conscious that she was blushing.

There was a long silence in the cluttered dining room where the dissolute, already growing hotter, trickled through curtains of cheap theatrical gauze and shone on the fine old mahogany table, where two pretty girls sat with their pretty, dark mother.

Ellen, the soft flush receding from her cheeks, was thinking of Larry Harrowgate — his gray eyes and his quick, infectious laugh, the way he had said he was glad he had found her. She was thinking that she would see him soon, good.

Scatter-brained Molly, rebellious and alarmed, was thinking that something had arisen to menace the bright fancies she had been weaving. What was there to say? What was there to do? A certain hardness in Ellen's square flushed jaw warned her that tears would be useless. So she held her silence.

Myra's thoughts were darting from Bert to Ellen. She was remembering the way she had loved Bert in the beginning, was remembering the way that love had faded with endless waiting. Surely Ellen could not in the brief space of one night have met another Bert. Surely life could not be so cruel that when it had seemed things were to be easier, just when, she admitted honestly, it seemed that she had at last met the man who was to rescue them all.

"Did you mean anything special, Ellen?" Myra asked at last with effort and hoped that Ellen jeering laugh would prove her wrong. "Is there a fellow?"

"No, I didn't mean anything special," she replied indifferently after an appreciable pause.

"That's nice. I'm pleased over the flowers, isn't it?" Myra persisted. "Now you liked better last night at Dreamland? You spoke of meeting someone there, it was a man, wasn't it, a man that you liked?"

Her breath was and fell on a long sigh.

"Yes, I did" Ellen replied defiantly, her bright, hostile eyes moving from her sister to her mother and back again. "Furthermore, I'm sure you and mother will be kind enough to let me handle it in my own affairs. I don't meddle in yours."

"I'm sorry, dear—"

"Don't dear me!" burst out Ellen in a passion of anger. "I don't think of you—make me sick. We're poor. All right, I can swoop the family fortunes by trying to trap a rich man into marriage. That's a fine bond-holder tradition. That's just great! It makes no difference what I—"

She burst unexpectedly into tears and rushing from the table ran into the bedroom and flung herself upon the bed. When Myra followed and sat down on the bed she refused to speak except to insist hysterically that she was all right.

"Listen to me," Myra pleaded tearfully, "I'm sorry, dear. I'm sorry I'm forcer her away. Ellen—"

"Oh, go away," wailed Myra, "can't you see there's nobody at all in Ellen's working herself to death at Dreamland if all the extra money is to go for her clothes?"

"But now she can spurn the other dress to Mr. Barclay and start out right with him," urged Molly. "It'll come in handy anyhow. You'll see. Things are starting to happen to Ellen. No one knows how long she'll have to work anyway."

"You've spoiled everything," Ellen sobbed, her voice muffled by pillows.

"We couldn't. Not if you feel as if things you do. Mother and I—I'm wrong and selfish. But we didn't understand, didn't know how it was with you. Tell us, Ellen, tell us with your heart that you think I'm such a brute."

MR. AND MRS.— ONE OF THOSE HUMILIATING MOMENTS

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 36.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Pierco and terrible was the battle that followed. Terrified at sight of a black man and a white flighting in company with a panther and huge fierce apes, the savages at last were slain or put to flight.

All but one fellow, who fell a prisoner into the hands of Tarzan. To him the ape-man promised liberty in return for information about Rokoff and his party.

The cowardly Rokoff's men appeared to have more fear of the giant white man and his strange companions than even the blacks themselves. The last that had been seen of them they were paddling strongly upstream intent upon escaping the Beasts of Tarzan. So once more Tarzan of the Apes, with his hideous pack, took up his search for the ape-man's son and the pursuit of his abductor.

For weary days they followed through an almost uninhabited country. After the battle the limits band had been reduced in numbers. Now, with Akut, there were but five great apes, and Sheeta was there—and Mugambi and Tarzan. The ape-man no longer even heard rumors of the three who had preceded Rokoff—no white man had heard of the white woman and child, although nearly all had had dealing (to their sorrow) with the Russian and his cruel band. The ape-man was puzzled.

The persistent hope that the child MIGHT be his was enough, however, to keep the ape-man hot upon the trail. And he was almost certain that Rokoff would be in similar pursuit. But nowhere along the way could he gain definite information. He brid up every native he came across and submitted each one to a careful cross-examination, but always with the same result—no one had heard of the white woman and child, although nearly all had had dealing (to their sorrow) with the Russian and his cruel band. The ape-man was puzzled.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a dram of Orlex Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can get the lot for you cost little to make at home at little cost. Apply to the hair a few times a week until the desired color is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Orlex will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Gov't Benches Applaud Liberal Leader in His Declaration

GEO. GIBBONS IS SPEAKER

Y's Men Meeting in Charge of Life Underwriters' Association

"Fractors of Success" was the subject on which Mr. Geo. Gibbons, District Manager of the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Peterboro, spoke to the members of the Y's Men's Club, at their annual Life Underwriter's evening last night. The meeting was in the hands of the local branch of the Life Underwriters and they supplied the programme, as well as the speaker of the evening.

Mr. H. G. Crowe, President of the Belleville Underwriter's Association, assumed the chair in place of President "Mel" Blanchard and called upon Mr. S. Burrows of the local Mutual Life office, to introduce the speaker of the evening. Mr. Gibbons upon rising, stated that he was very much interested in the work of the Y.M.C.A., as the association represented something which every community needed, the building of youth.

Business Selling

Mr. Gibbons started his talk by stating, that the work of underwriting was a business that was easy task; as, it was one of selling to the people, as he drew near the other car cut across the road in front of him. Mr. Davis was forced to make for the ditch and choose between striking a telephone pole or a large boulder. He chose the latter, destroying one wheel on the left and damaging the running board.

Fortunately he was proceeding at a moderate rate of speed and none of the occupants in the car were injured.

It is stated that Mr. Cuthbertson looked behind him before pulling into the road, but saw no one approaching. After making some repairs Mr. Davis was able to proceed to Belleville.

SERVICE HELD AT ROAD CAMP

Rev.- Merritt Price, Contractor, in Charge of Service

Tweed, Feb. 16 (Special)—Church services were held in the contractors camp on No. 7 highway near Actinolite on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Merritt Price, contractor, delivered an inspiring address to the men who worship in the camp's mess house. Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Dales and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Connolly of Tweed, assisted in the musical part of the service. Mr. Connolly rendered quartettes.

Besides music, to the number of about ninety, attended the services and voted unanimously to have the services continued each Sunday. The Shibite United Church choir assisted in the singing.

It is the intention of Mr. Price to hold services, also, of concrete in the camp for the benefit of the men. The concrete will be given every Tuesday and Friday night.

There is considerable musical talent both vocal and instrumental in such a large camp and who will be responsible for the entertainment. These numbers will be supplemented by assistance which will be given by people of the surrounding district.

SERIOUS FIRE IS AVERTED

Pile of Rubbish in Shurie's Drug Store, Trenton, Catches Fire

Trenton, Feb. 16 (Special)—The fire alarm was sent in on Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock from Bruce Shurie's Drug Store on Dundas Street. On answering the call the smoke was seen to be rolling out of the store and on investigating it was found to be coming from under the window. A grating over the sidewalk which had accumulated a great deal of rubbish and some passerby had probably dropped a lighted match or cigar stub down into the hole which ignited the rubbish, the smoke entering the store, which made it seem as though the store was on fire. On answering the alarm the fire truck coming out of Glenwood Street, on to Dundas Street, struck a Studebaker car standing there but no damage was done to either. The car was owned by Mr. L. Parnell, of Front Street who at the stranger around these parts and is not acquainted with the traffic rules in time of fire.

Chicago ranks fortieth in the U.S. murder rate. Memphis now tops the list and big cities are not the centres for frequent murders they are supposed to be.

Cases Come to Lawyers but Many Are Not Taken Up

Lawyers Not Trying to Make Trouble For People

MAKE PEACE

The young barrister waved me to a nearby chair, picked up a little celluloid letter opener and began to manipulate his nails. "Shoot", he said.

"Well, it's like this....shur I'm not taking up any of your valuable time....or do you legal men ever have any spare time....?"

"No, these are busy days." He waved a languid hand at a large pile of papers that lay heaped on the opposite corner of the desk. They were about so high.

Grievances

"Well", I began again, "it's like this. What about those fellows who come into your office every so often with some sort of grievance, filled with blood in their eyes and demanding "the law" on every one concerned. You know the old trick that has been practiced on them. I'm told they come in here every day or so waving their arms and shouting in the top of their voices....What about them?"

"How do you mean what about them?"

"I mean how about these fellows who go into a barber shop and come in....or do you talk it over with them and send them home with clearer ideas. You know I heard of one guilty little case myself the other day. It wasn't a matter up in your neighborhood. He had an idea that his next door neighbor was looking through the windows at every move he made, and that the neighbor used to make faces at him behind his back. The man I'm talking about was getting quite worried because he couldn't really engage in physical combat as he thought up the idea of getting his revenge in court. Maybe the only thing he had to go on was his own delusion but I know that he had been used to wander over into the garden next door every time he got a chance, and one day the man next door came out with an armful of rocks....."

Same Case

"Yes, I believe I had that same case look long ago", said the young barrister, tapping idly on the top of the desk. "In fact I've had more here ten minutes earlier than you did you would have seen a parallel case just leaving."

"It's like this," he continued, "Hardly a week goes by that some one doesn't come in here yelling some one is doing him dirt over some little thing that doesn't really amount to a row of peas when the whole thing is thrashed out. In this that case of the cow, the man who had the land didn't have the right was alright as long as things were going his way, but when things started to even up against him the cow was in the picture. Then he got mad, came to me and wanted me to have the man up for assault and battery. I'll bet there hasn't been any attempts at assault on him gotten there might have been a chance for the man to enter a charge against the plaintiff. I have handled it myself—even though one client might have been thrown out of court with one of the biggest fulgents would have had to spend a bit of money to get him back—even the man who entered the other one into court didn't have to pay for it all. Anyhow he would have had nothing to make what it cost him. That's the trouble with a lot of people who come in here—they haven't much of a case but they get so hot headed 'that they can't see it....until the thing is talked over with them and then they have a reasonable idea altogether."

"In other words, I am the shoe is on the other foot it pinches."

"Maybe you've added.

Strange Case

"And the really funny one," I pursued. "You do sometimes get a kick out of some of the people who come in here rearing to go to law over some of their neighbors?"

"Some of the funniest ones I can't even tell you about. They're so extremely funny that the individuals who were concerned in them would know right off the bat that we were making fun of them because the case is no individual in each one that it would be just like giving the belligerents their names.

"Couldn't you give them just as those two well known old antagonists such as 'A' and 'B'?

"Not a chance. We're pretty much bound to respect the confidences of any and all who come in here, just as doctors are. That's another curious thing you've brought up. Nobody ever thinks of asking a doctor what's wrong with their neighbor when they see him coming out of a house where their neighbor is supposed to be lying sick, ye all lawyers, it seems are fair game for everyone who wants to ask questions about the business of all who come in here. That's not fair, and they should know it.....

Never Tells Anything

"Anyhow I never tell them anything any how. If this city were a little larger then I might be able to give you a few good stories but all it would have to think up your own. And here's something to go strict on. No matter how funny a thing you think up, or how strange it may appear, even what little real grounds there really are for a law suit that you can think of never tell them to this office you are now in it has probably been prostituted. At any time or other myself or my predecessor has had to be called in to act as a friend ed-patiently while the story was told to us—red hot—in a steady stream as per the desperation that it was possible to inject in a story. It's listen because that's our business...and we hear them to the end. If there is a row for them all we explain it to them, but if we don't they haven't a chance then we sit them on their ear.

Turn Down Many Cases

"Lots of them just simply walk us a lot of Shylocks up in these offices but if they only knew how many cases we turn down in a week then they would be a bit different idea of it all. Maybe they do here in Belleville chasers' (shyster lawyers who are always to be found at any and all accidents almost as soon as they occur). Chasers are said to be found mostly on the American side; ambulance chasers who hang around hospitals looking for accident damage cases, which fee they will split with the victim when anything is done on their side' but you find any of them around this city. Other lawyers have the same class of cases that I do and they probably find as many or more suppose. However we never talk shop when we're together so I can't tell you what they do, but I do know that if you do want such information as you have tried to get out of me that you wont have any more success than you've had here.

As in News Office

"Look.....you're a reporter. Lots of things come to us that simply can't be repeated on the street. Now I'm not in it and dozens of people stop you every other day to tell something about this and that that really isn't any of their business.....that's right again, I take it.....but it's not for publication, you know me. What?.....no there's more to come.....Well, alright I'll sit down for a moment....."

The lawyer was right. So did we. Good luck, old man for the coming battle! May the best man win. And we wouldn't have you fight for all the tea in China, we thought as we wandered out on the sidewalk where the booming voice upstairs grew fainter as we passed down the hall.

Where Russo-Japanese Crisis Looms

The storm-centres in the Far East seems to have taken a long jump from Shanghai to Harbin, Manchuria, which is now occupied by the victorious Japanese invaders. It is reported that the Japanese occupation of the city; the hub of Russian influence in the province, is bitterly resented in the streets of the stricken city, according to dispatches from Tokio, Red troops are being concentrated at Vladivostok, Siberia, and strict censorship plus martial law, is in force. Photograph at the top shows a bird's eye view of Vladivostock, which is just outside the Manchurian border, where 70,000 Russian troops are said to be held in readiness in case of emergency. The lower picture shows part of the Red Army during a review. This picture gives a graphic idea of the extent of Russia's huge man power.

Men Outdo Women in Misstating Their Age

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—It is a myth, that women make a mystery of their ages more than do men. In other words women don't "kid" about the year they were born any more than do the men. The census-takers of the Province of Statistics asserts that this is a fact. According to these it and specials investigations in connection with census returns demonstrate is in general speaking, the truth.

But there is a difference between men and women in the manner of their telling "yarns" about their ages. Generally speaking, the tendency in women who are going to give the wrong age is to understate, that is, a spade is fifty-fifty whether the male is going to overstate or understate.

Females who understate their ages do so usually between the ages of forty. Approximately they are twenty-five when they reach this age. On the other hand, males up to the age of about sixty understate their ages with indifference. They are as apt to do the othe as the other.

After the age of sixty, however, the males begin to overstate the mark and keep on getting worse and worse. Females after about sixty, also overstate but it is a coincidence that they go a little canny on the overstatement. The man is bolder with his exaggerations. The legend of the centenarian makes this quite disputable.

The centenarians of the 1971 census, for example, were made the subject of a searching and complete investigation according to officials. About that time there was a plethora of doubt about what ages had made the long-lived characters of the table look very ordinary, and so on their stay upon Mother Earth is concerned.

Eighty-two of the persons recorded as centenarians in that census, 41 women and 37 males, were investigated. Three of the women had given their exact age, but more than they said they were, one by three years, one by two years and one by eight years.

So there were 34 males and 42 females who overstated their ages. Three of the men did it royally. One said he was 21 years older than he actually was, another exaggerated by 30 years and the third put 25 years on to his span. Accordingly, if the centenarian who put 31 years to his age, gave it as 121, he was really just a youngster of one hundred.

The centenarian women who overstated their ages were a little more modest in their claims. The first one claimed most; she did it by only 22 years. Of the 42 who overstated, 21 did it by less than ten years, whereas only 9 of the men understated by less than ten years.

Note that only very old people were dealt with in that investigation. The ages given by young people were not examined.

The censuses of 1911 and 1921, however, have now been examined more extensively and the cases of the persons who looked up, it is stated. Of these 378 gave their ages as exactly ten years more in 1921 than in 1911. Ninety-two males and 104 females gave more or less than ten years. It is an interesting chance of theory. More than 500,000 acres of land in 19 states were added to national forests in the United States during the past fiscal year. Purchase of this land was made at an average cost of $3.50 an acre.

The public has burned its fill of the flame of wild speculation and has learned to fear the fire. —Governor Roosevelt of New York

HIT BOULDER INSTEAD OF CAR

Alleged Front Driver Turned Into Path of Oncoming Car

Tweed, Feb. 18 (Special) — Mr. Alfred Davis, accompanied by Mrs. Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Beatty, all of Tweed, had a narrow escape from serious injury while motoring to Belleville on Saturday. Mr. Davis had been following a car, driven by Mr. Alex. Cuthbertson of Sulphide, for some distance. On reaching the old toll-gate, the leading car slowed down and drew to the side of the road.

Mr Davis thought this was a signal for him to pass, but as he drew near the other car cut across the road in front of him. Mr. Davis was forced to make for the ditch and choose between striking a telephone pole or a large boulder. He chose the latter, destroying one wheel on the left and damaging the running board.

Fortunately he was proceeding at a moderate rate of speed and none of the occupants in the car were injured.

It is stated that Mr. Cuthbertson looked behind him before pulling into the road, but saw no one approaching. After making some repairs Mr. Davis was able to proceed to Belleville.

Let us remember these things as we brought by prayer than this world dreams of.

Mrs. John Heagle sang very acceptably "If We All had the Spirit of Jesus."

Twelve members of Mount Pleasant Mission Band sang a pretty chorus which was very appropriate for the occasion, "Don't Stop Praying."

The closing prayer for our King, Country, and Peace was offered by Mr. A. W. Garrison and Mrs. James Sharp gave the dismissal prayer. O Thou by whom we come to God, The Life, the Truth, the Way. The path of prayer Thyself has trod Lord teach us how to pray.

OBSERVE WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

Protestant Churches, of Tweed United For Service of Worship

Tweed, Feb. 16 By Mail— The World Day of Prayer under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Societies was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Tweed on Friday, February 12th. The local Protestant churches united for this service.

The meeting opened with the singing of "Lord Speak to Me." This was succeeded by a brief period of silent prayer.

During the service prayers were offered for those parts of the world upon which the thoughts of Christian nations are focused at the present time. China, Japan, Korea, and Russia.

Mrs. S. H. Connor sang very feelingly, "In the Secret of His Presence."

The meeting concluded with the singing of "Jesus Shall Reign."

An enjoyable evening was spent in the school room of the United Church, on the evening of February 11th when the C.G.I.T. group entertained the Tuxis and Trail Ranger groups.

The girls presented a fine programme beginning with their C.G.I.T. song and a "Welcome" number to their guests. These were followed by several action songs and two skits, namely, "Melodrama" and the "Fatal Quest" which provoked much laughter and applause. Then everyone took part in a hearty sing-song and group games. A dainty lunch was served by the girls.

Present and Prospective

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle.
SCREEN FAVORITE HERE IN ROMANTIC HIT

Robert Montgomery, one of the screen's most popular personalities, will be seen at the Belle Tomorrow and Thursday. Matinee daily, in "Lovers Courageous," a romantic comedy written especially for this star by Frederick Lonsdale, the celebrated English playwright who wrote the Norma Shearer success, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

Montgomery's role is that of a happy-go-lucky Englishman whose ambition is to be a playwright and who consequently is always in hot water with his narrow-minded father who wants to make a poet master of his son. The result is that he runs away from home and after a series of interesting adventures, as a sailor, cowboy and hotel porter in various parts of the world, finally ends up as a tobacconist's assistant in British South Africa.

Family Discovers Affair

Here, he falls in love with the daughter of an admiral who is engaged to an English peer. When the family discovers the affair, the girl is sent post-haste to London, but Montgomery follows. Many obstacles stand in his way to winning the girl but our hero overcomes them in the same adventurous spirit that has always helped him out of difficulties and the end can be not only gets the girl but wins success as a playwright to boot.

Ideal Role For Star

The part is said to be an ideal one for the lackadaisical Montgomery who is always very much at home in charming, humorous and somewhat roguish characterizations as witness his success in "Strangers May Kiss," "The Man in Possession" and his most recent hit, "Private Lives."

The attractive Madge Evans has the leading feminine role and prominent parts are played by Roland Young, who last scored in "The Guardsman," Frederick Kerr, Reginald Owen and Beryl Mercer. The picture was directed by Robert Z. Leonard, who has such winners as "Susan Lenox" and "The Divorcee" to his credit.

"Wide Open Spaces," is the title of the latest Mermaid comedy which includes a cast of forty famous stars, and which is announced for exhibition on the same program with the popular Metrotone Newsreel, and a clever cartoon "Polar Pals."

"This Reckless Age"

"This Reckless Age," the Five-star Paramount hit, closes its engagement at the Belle Tonight. It is a comedy drama of parents who sacrifice everything for their carefree and unconventional children. It has action, some heart-throbs and abundant humor. Four varied short offerings precede the feature offering.

GUN DISCHARGES

At The Capitol
AUTHOR EXPERIENCED THRILLS IN WRITING "HEAVEN ON EARTH"

One of the most successful "first" novels of recent years, according to critics, is "Afrikaaner" by Dan Lucien Burman. It received the highest praise from book critics. Edward J. O'Brien, who rates each year's novels, says "There won't be as good a book out of America this year as 'Afrikaander'."

This absorbing book, based on the constant feud between "steam-boilers" and "shanty-boaters" on the Mississippi River, has just been brought to the screen by Universal and under the title of "Heaven on Earth," which opens to the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday for three days.

Burman, former newspaper man and short story writer, was born in Covington, Kentucky, and after attending public schools in Kentucky graduated from Harvard in 1906. Always a rover at heart, Burman has lived in many countries, and has accumulated a great store of literary material through his practice of living close to the common people of the countries visited. He has reported for the New York World, Cincinnati Times-Star and Boston Herald, contributing many strange tales of foreign lands. He was wounded in the World War and went on crutches for a year.

In obtaining material for Mississippi and other river stories, Dan Lucien Burman went to jail, shipped with his wife as members of the crew of a steamboat, tramped through the Southern hills as the backwaters of the Mississippi tributaries, and swamps at their mouths. Frequently he stopped in houses so primitive they had neither lamps nor candles but still depended on pine torches, sat with a Southern judge on the bench hearing cases and once by the use of a charm learned in Africa destroyed the spell put by a local hoodoo doctor on a negro servant of the friend he was visiting in New Orleans.

The popular Lew Ayres is starred in "Heaven on Earth," and his supporting cast includes Anita Louise, Harry Beresford, Elizabeth Patterson, Charley Grapewin and other well known players. Russell Mack directed.

On the same programme is a most interesting Novelty showing a Stargroove lighting, and eventually killing a snake.

Tonight is the last night of Jack Holt in "Maker of Men," and also the night when some half-dozen of Belleville's unemployed will participate in the "Pie-Eating Contest with hands tied and a nine-inch berry pie before each man. The contest is set for 9 p.m.

Arctic Storm Lays Screen May End Epic of Killer

AKLAVIK, N.W.T., Feb. 16.— (CP)— An Arctic blizzard laid a screen of white over the black hills southwest of Aklavik, hampering police somewhat in their search for Albert Johnson, fugitive slayer of Constable E. Millen. Reports received here from the "front" indicated that Johnson's trail had been picked up near Pierre House, in Yukon Territory, and his arrest was but a question of time.

Although the old order of the police, "to bring him in alive," is still in effect, mounties and trappers with past experiences of the wily trapper's deadly aim, will take no chances and a furious gun battle is anticipated when they finally close in on the wanted man.

Captain W. H. "Wop" May, noted Northland flier, who has been the "eyes" of the posse trailing Johnson, is reported "down" in the vicinity of Pierre House. No anxiety is felt on coming him on his plane. There are many places in that area which would afford safe landing and officials believe May is awaiting favorable flying weather before again taking up the search.

Veteran mounties, well schooled in the ways of the North, believe that the Arctic gale now whistling over the country through which Johnson is fleeing to make his bid for freedom, will prove to be a valuable ally. Johnson, they point out, is adept though he is at Arctic travel, is ill-equipped, and at this stage, in no condition to match forces against a "Northerner".

Johnson so far, has proved adept at trail-covering. An experienced trapper, there are few tricks of the trail he does not know. One method he has employed in fact of avoiding travel on the main river or contact with creeks. He has kept to the hard snow on the bare hills where the first breeze is sufficient to stir the snow and destroy his tracks.

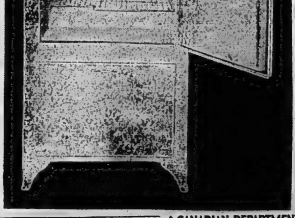
President Hoover Makes Appointment of Democrat to High Office



Washington, Feb. 16 (AP)— The United States Supreme Court seat vacated by the Venerable Oliver Wendell Holmes was given yesterday to Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, Chief Judge of the New York Court of Appeals.

Hailed in the Senate by leaders of all groups as a Liberal worthy of carrying on the traditions of Holmes, he was assured of confirmation by a universality of endorsement.

President Hoover chose the 63-year-old New York Jurist, who is a Democrat and a Jew, after weeks of canvassing the nation for a man of the Holmes legal and political philosophy. He reached his decision today, after a round of conferences with Senate leaders and advisers. Assured of support by the Senate committee, the nomination was promptly submitted for confirmation.

BRITISH BLUEJACKETS KILLED AT SHANGHAI

Red Army Total Half Million, Soviet Report Shows

Stray Japanese Shells Claim First Lives from Among Shanghai Troops

Poorly Directed Japanese Also Kills Some Chinese

BIG AIR BATTLE

Greatest Conflict in Air Since 1918 is Expected Shortly

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (Canadian Press Cable) — League expressed fears the fighting between Chinese and Japanese would inevitably result in casualties among British or other defenders of foreign property, were borne out today by the death of two British bluejackets. They died of wounds caused by stray shells.

The men were members of a landing party from H.M.S. Suffolk, which had been detailed to guard British wharves along a section of the Shanghai river front.

A number of stray shells from the Chapei area fell on the wharves during the morning bombardment.

The bluejackets were fatally injured, two Chinese were killed outright, other Chinese were wounded and much damage was caused. "It was not definitely ascertained whether the shells were from Chinese or Japanese guns.

Able Seaman M. A. H. Francis of Chatham died not long after being taken to a hospital ashore, while the other bluejacket, Able Seamman H. G. Price of Portsmouth succumbed to his injuries a few hours afterward.

Shells have frequently fallen within the International settlement and French concession and bullets have on numerous occasions.

London, Feb. 17 (AP). — Two British sailors wound'd when shells from the Chapei area fell on the Shanghai waterfront where they were on patrol duty died of their wounds today, the Admiralty office announced.

Both were members of a landing party put ashore from the British cruiser Suffolk.

The British bluejackets were members of a landing party guarding the wharves near the Whangpoo River. Shells that exploded with terrific force fell on the wharves near besides the two sailors struck a number of Chinese, killing.

Air Battle Ahead.

In the protected grounds of Japanese soldiers worked furiously with the new aerodromes near their headquarters at Hongkew, to get air armada ever put together on Chinese soil. There are more than a hundred planes in the Shanghai area and every thousands more.

Observers expressed the belief that when the big offensive takes place it will bring the greatest aerial battle since the Great War.

The artillery duel was followed by sharp fighting on a front of several miles.

Japanese naval headquarters said the Chinese directed the heaviest artillery fire, they had used thus far, on that it was one of their Hongkew, causing many casualties and considerable damage.

Japanese Ultimatum

Later in the day Captain S. Tomita, spokesman for the Japanese headquarters, said an ultimatum would be handed to the Chinese "in the very near future," demanding their withdrawal from Shanghai and that the expected big Japanese attack would not take place unless the ultimatum were disregarded. He said reports that the Chinese 19th Route Army would start tonight or tomorrow were "nonsense".

It followed a thunderous night during which most people in the International Settlement lay awake as the rapid and mighty explosions shook the city. Other sources said the Chinese reply to the Japanese guns was feeble as could be expected from the difference in artillery equipment of the two armies and that it was one of their poorly directed shells that struck the two British sailors, one of whom was attached to H.M.S. Suffolk in the river.

Cable Is Cut.

The great northern cable also was reported cut, so that an emergency connection had to be established.

At the aerodromes there was extraordinary activity during the day. Machambles Japanese Headquarters planes, which were being brought by parts from the mainland on the Whangpo by trucks. At least 1,000 soldiers, having temporarily deserted their posts in the "fatigue" line, swarmed over an auxiliary plot near the main aerodrome smoothing it down and preparing the runways.

Chinese Reary.

Pukow, China, Feb. 17 (AP) — General Chiang Kai-Shek, former President of China and War Minister Wang Ching-Wei said today they would not be fully prepared for the forthcoming Japanese offensive at Shanghai but they did not expect it for a few days.

The War Minister said he was quite confident of China's ultimate success.

Ultimatum from Japan

BY GLEN BABB

(Copyright, 1932, by the A. P.)

Tokyo, Feb. 17 (AP). — The Japanese government authorized the issuance of an ultimatum to the Chinese at Shanghai today threatening to drive the Chinese army away from the city by force unless it withdrew voluntarily.

At virtually the same time, the government received official advices from Washington that Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, was preparing to protest formally against the bombing of American soldiers in the International Settlement at Shanghai.

Protest to Japan Bombing of Camp

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (AP)— Sir John Hope-Simpson, Director of the National Flood Relief Commission who recently protected to the League of Nations against the bombing of his refugee camp by Japanese planes, sent another note to the League today. Consul Bailey reiterating that the attack on the camp was inexplicable.

The bombing occurred on Feb. 5 and 6 with a total loss of fifty lives and in a reply to Sir John's first note the Japanese said the camp was behind a barbed wire entanglement close to the Chinese lines.

QUIET POLLING IN IRELAND

Fate of Cosgrave's Gov't Not Known Until Thursday

Dublin, Irish Free State, Feb. 17. Polling over, and the fate of President William T. Cosgrave's government lying in the ballot boxes, an unofficial count began today in the task of counting the votes recorded in the Irish Free State general election.

First results were expected to be made known this evening but it was not expected that a definite trend, if any, would be uncovered before late tomorrow, the voting slowed up by the fifti voting was on the proportional representation basis.

The electors went to the polls in 145 of the 153 constituencies. Elections in seven Leitrim county seats will not be held until March 3, as a result of postponement following the death of Patrick Gallagher, Independent and a detective at Pontfield on Sunday. Dr. Michael Hayes, speaker, was automatically elected.

Election day passed with perhaps unprecedented quietness.

HOT RUST IS NOW OVERCOME

Cheap Alloy of Iron and Aluminum Discovered By Scientists

New York, Feb. 17—Hot rust does not bother the public, but is costly manufacturers, a lot of money.

So discovery of a new alloy which will not rust when hot was hailed at the meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers today. Hot rust has been ruinous to metal parts of furnaces, particularly the modern electrical ones.

To avoid this rust loss, said Nicholas A. Ziegler of the Westinghouse Company, furnace makers have employed very expensive metals for parts. He reported discovery of a cheap alloy, iron and aluminum, which does not rust. Silicon, three per cent of aluminum, he said, does the trick.

DOUMER HARD AT WORK UPON NEW CABINET

Barthoue May Form Some Sort of Interim Government

ELECTORAL REFORM

Five Great Tasks Await Incoming French Cabinet

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Feb. 17 (Canadian Press Cable) — President Paul Doumer is pressing swiftly and hard the formation of a new ministry. Scarcely was the resignation of Premier Tardieu in his hands following the government's defeat in the Senate yesterday before the conversations began. The party leaders of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate saw the President last evening, while throughout today the president continued talks with leaders of the groups in both houses.

As the Laval government was defeated in the Senate the normal course would be to endeavour to find there the head of the new ministry.

Barthou Favored

Louis Barthou, a member of the Union Democratique group of the Senate, is mentioned as one who might form a sort of interim government of the centre to carry France through the coming general election in October under a benevolent neutrality of both extreme wings until the election is over, it was said.

Andre Tardieu, War Minister, and Joseph Paul-Boncour are hurrying here from Geneva, where both were on the French delegation to the Disarmament Conference, and both are included in the numerous and varying list of possible premiers.

But whatever the outcome of President Doumer's conversations within the elemrs of the House it is clear all possible speed must be made. The five great problems will lie ahead of the new ministry. They are:

(1) Adoption of the electoral law for the coming general elections. The Chamber of Deputies' amendments to the electoral law which led to the present crisis, were submitted to the Senate only a few minutes before the government's defeat.

(2) Adoption of the budget both in the chamber and senate.

(3) Ratification of the powers of the French delegation to the Disarmament Conference, and both are included in the numerous and varying list of possible premiers.

(4) Appointment of French delegates from Geneva to the conference at Lausanne in June.

(5) Fixing and announcing the date of the general elections. Unless there is a prior dissolution, the mandate of the present parliament terminates at the end of May.

BOETCHER CASE GOES TO HAGUE

International Question is to Be Transferred

Geneva, Feb. 17 (AP)—The clash between Germany and Lithuania over the arrest of Otto Boetcher, President of the Council of the International Law Association and Club during an address by Hon. A. Chipman, Minister of Highways.

Increased gasoline taxes encouraged the bootlegging of gasoline, he said, whatever the cause, one sure would follow any attempt made to increase gasoline taxes.

Saskatchewan's susceptibility to bootlegging of gasoline was not due, he explained, to the weather alone, but to the sale along the western provincial boundary of distillers and naphtha from the Alberta oil fields. This gasoline was sold all along the provincial boundary at considerably expense to the government.

As to remedying conditions, the Minister indicated the likelihood of a tax being placed upon distillers and naphtha by the Alberta Government.

Student at Varsity Dies of Explosion

V. A. Wood, Fourth-Year Science Student, Succumbs Despite Blood Transfusion—Was Experimenting at Time of Accident

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 17—V. A. Wood, fourth-year student injured in Monday's explosion in the mining building at University of Toronto, died today. Wood suffered severance of the sub-clavian artery when struck by a jagged fragment of steel. Numerous blood transfusion were resorted to in an effort to save his life.

Wood, described as one of the brightest and most capable of the fourth-year students, was working under the direction of Professor M. C. Boswell in an attempt to produce carbolic acid by the direct oxidation of coal tar benzene and use in various chemical compounds as well as atmospheric oxygen.

The explosion wrecked the laboratory and shattered all windows of the fourth floor of the mining building. One other student was seriously injured but his condition is not critical.

Premier Wears Eye Shade and Bandage at Session

Presides Over Important Meeting at 10 Downing Street

WILL TAKE REST

London, Feb. 17 (AP)—Wearing an eye shade and a bandage over his left eye, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald arrived at No. 10 Downing street today to preside over an important cabinet session.

The Premier, who recently underwent an operation for glaucoma (diminuition of vision) in his left eye, also had a slightly swollen face as a result of a tooth extraction.

He planned to go later today to his country place, Chequers, for a rest before a three weeks' holiday prescribed by his physicians.

DREAM COMES TRUE, VISION OF DROWNING

Vision Leads to Spot Where Boy's Body is Found

MOTHER'S DREAM

Hundreds in Search For Body of Young Boy

Ranking with the strangest stories that have ever been heard in this section of the country was the one which was uncovered yesterday as the aftermath of the recovery of the body of little seven year-old Delbert Anderson who was drowned in Cold Creek near Frankford last Friday. Although the man who is concerned chiefly in the whole thing is very reluctant to make any statement in the matter, some of his friends have told the story.

Mr. Walter Morrow, who lives near the scene of the sad accident was one of those who had labored all day Saturday with the rest of the scores upon scores of men, who were scattered along the body.

Saturday Night Dream

Impressed and worried over repeated failures to locate the young boy he went home that night for a brief nap and during the course of it he dreamed that a certain spot in the river the body was lying. He went to that spot next day with his companions and located almost the approximate position, however, as the strong was very swift in that point, swelled by recent rains until it had overflowed its banks, the search was very difficult. There were so many places to look that there almost simply no chance on the part of the searchers. However, Mr. Morrow stuck doggedly to the task and at last, near where he had dreamed that it would be, he saw the tiny hand lying below the water, almost covered with sand. This was at noon Tuesday.

The body was in a pocket or depression of the stream, and had been washed over several bars to its present resting place. At the point of Mr. Morrow's hand the little boy's mother Mrs. Leroy Long of the Marlbank district, and Mr. Anderson, a Scottish-born Canadian, who is now living in Canada, Lord John Churchill, the British Parliament, the Rt. Hon. Lesse Embroglia, taxicab accident, English-Speaking Races

Mr. Churchill, when you see any indications of co-operation between the English-speaking peoples?" a newspaperman asked.

No, it is premature he did not. "The first thing," he said, "is co-operation in the British Empire and secondly co-operation in the English-speaking peoples, in that order."

He would have liked to see co-operation between the Federal Reserve and the Bank of England, between the two great creditor nations. He also favored a world conference on tariffs.

About saildarm and communism the future to do was to unite the weakness. There was a good spirit in the United States and in England.

Mr. Churchill, Will Rogers says that Gandhi's 'I'll Ole Boy-cott' in India is working."

Rogers is wrong.

Mr. Churchill indicated that will Rogers' information about India was inaccurate. In India, he said "things are not improved. The government is doing now what i always urged, upholding law and order and encouraging the restraint of trade."

As to immigration to Canada the population should be of British blood and not often over to the Doukhobors.

EMPIRE IS AT DAWN OF DAY

Winston Churchill Does Not See Sunset Signs

WASHINGTON, D.C., February 17—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)— Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill stopped pacing up and down the small drawing room in the British Embassy, took his cigar from his mouth, and consented to interview with Canadian correspondents, saying:— "I do not think this is the sunset for the British Empire—it is the dawn!" He clipped his words.

"With really good will," he said of the Economic Conference, "why is not there to be hopeful of essential results . . . It is obviously the important thing to put a ring fence around the Empire, even if not a very high one, to make the Empire economically self-consciious."

FLOODED WALKS CAUSE TROUBLE

Walk Problems Face City in Several Places

"Just one more river to cross", remarked the old lady to herself this morning when she hesitated before the small lake of water in the depression in front of the C.N.R. overhead gangway. Then she gathered skirts around her ankles and stood poised, like an eagle about to take flight.

But at that moment a young man, with fast legs encased in hip rubber boots, a rain coat buttoned up to his ears and an oil skin hat on his head dashed right ahead through the water——and didn't seem to mind it a bit.

And down at the south end of the town, at the corner of Front and the corner of Front and East Dundas another minister was facing difficulty as to how to get to church. but this will probably be all changed when a resident of that section, at present having considerable difficulty in the transfer of boats, gets into action and commences to ferry the citizens across. Fares will be based on the weight of the passengers, he declares.

Mr. Robt. Tannahill at St. Andrew's Men's Club

Tuesday night the regular monthly meeting of the Men's Club of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held in the Assembly room of the Church, and a large number of men sat down to a very excellent supper which was served by the Women's Association of the congregation at six-thirty o'clock. The tables were daintily and attractively arranged and decorated with lighted candles and spring flowers and the gathering was in every way most sociable and happy. During the supper, community singing was heartily entered into, led by Mr. E. W. Riley.

At the close of the supper, Dr. R. S. Gibson, the president of the club called the meeting to attention and several matters relative to the activities of the club were discussed and disposed of after which Mr. C. A. Cameron introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Robert Tannahill. Mr. Tannahill, who since his retirement from active service with the Bank of Montreal, has travelled extensively in the Orient took as the subject of his address "Shanghai" and his depiction of that city, which is so prominent in the public mind at the present time, was descriptive, interesting and highly informative. The geographical aspects, the architectural achievements and the social life and customs of Shanghai and of many other parts of China were told by Mr. Tannahill in a very lucid and entertaining manner.

It is now about a year since Mr. Tannahill visited Shanghai and it was a pleasure to hear his address on a subject with which he is so well conversant.

The appreciation of the members of the club was expressed to Mr. Tannahill in his address by Mr. J. Campbell.

Mr. George Wardle delighted the gathering with two most excellently rendered cornet solos, accompanied with the piano by Prof. Wheatley.

Dr. Gibson, on behalf of the club thanked Mr. Wardle for his contribution to the evening's enjoyment.

Mr. W. C. Bertram, a member of the club, is leaving shortly to spend the balance of the winter in the south and the good wishes of the club members for a pleasant holiday were conveyed to him by Mr. Arthur Ashley.

Much regret was expressed at the absence of Col. Ponton owing to serious illness and upon the suggestion of Mr. C. A. Cameron it was decided that the President, Dr. Gibson, should send to Col. Ponton the Hamilton, a telegram conveying the sympathy of the club members and expressing their hope for his rapid recovery.

BERRY PIES SMEAR FACES

"Happy" Day Wins With Time to Spare in Capitol Fun

The art of manacled mastication reached its climax on the stage of the Capitol Theatre last evening and set an official mark for real old fashioned pie eating consumption that will probably remain as the fastest time one ever has been consumed in this city.

Exactly five minutes was required by "Happy" Day to demolish his pie, with his hands tied behind his back, and a half dozen others who also competed were also finished in time ranging from very close to the period.

It may have been a bit messy to the participants in that novel contest, as attested by the large gobs of berry pie that hung to their faces before they could see through, but it was heartily enjoyed by the large number who were on hand to witness the performance. Seated in front of a long table on which a half dozen pies reposed the men who participated in the contest lined up with regular handcuffs encircling both wrists. At the word to go from Mr. Gilmer it was every man for himself with every man trying to finish his pie before the other fellow did. Between rounds of sallies which kept the audience in good humor, Mr. Day made a flying parent effort at entering himself Mr. Pillsbury's private home ahead of the field with lots of time to spare, a little sticky perhaps but still smiling.

This contest is the first of a series to be run by Mr. Holmes.

PATCHY FOG ALL AROUND

Drizzle of Rain and Slippery Walks in Early Hours

Thick, patchy fog, a chilling wind and lowering skies combined to make a dismal day of it in this city yesterday. The fog was more heavy in spots than in others, but the patience of the residents who were forced to wade through the pools of water on the walks and crossings, and also contributed greatly to the further slowing up process of traffic the day which had been vainly trying to form for some time.

Fortunately the condition of the weather did not duplicate that of last Thursday when the rain which fell from sodden, and turned sidewalks into veritable slippery glaze, over which residents struggled to stay with varying degrees of despair, but owing to the above freezing qualities of the weather on the day, the rain which fell is just partly freezing, making a more or less rough surface quite suitable, even though wet, for walking.

Employees of the department of public works were out with sanding units this morning and soon afterwards, when the weather turned somewhat warmer and the ice on the walks began to melt this work was discontinued.

WEARY WILLIE IS HERE AGAIN

With All The Glory of His Patches He Seeks The Wide Expanse

Through the dirge of Winter yesterday there drifted the first clear note of Spring. It was no so much a wave as a symbol of what is to come. The slowly disbanding hobo wake, will come others of the wandering clan to keep him company, like the robin they are the harbinger of the real tidings of Spring. Winter that should die and be succeeded by soft breezes that are already beginning to blow.

Soon there will be budding trees, birds sitting in the branches and twittering merrily. There will be also marbles, alligator pears, delicious and seed catalogues—then will we know that Spring has arrived.

But already, we have stated the first harbinger of the joyful season when all is young, sweet smelling and fresh has arrived in this city. With the advent of the Spring fat cats which have begun to make their appearance in Front Street wimbers, as also was seen under the overhead bridge on the Bridge road on the old rubber factory, cooking some slum in an old tin can and puffing it over with the snipe of an old cheroot which had been snatched from no one knows where.

A tramp, if you will. A "Weary Willie" is all the glory of patches, rent derby and shoes to match. One can be confused with the common transient, however, but a real knight of the road. Not for him are such effeminate shelters as small town flop joints. Not for him are the hitch-hikers' paths, but rather the long steel trail, the box car and a good bunch of tobacco now and then. Plausibility he is of the common type of bum and remains still the old reminder of days gone by. Years ago you saw him in Blue Jay Corn Plaster bill boards. Yesterday you could have seen him under the car bridge.

The last of The Mohocans.

Following a short illness, the death occurred, yesterday of Eula Maw, beloved wife of Arthur Austin, at the family home, 62 Burton street, The late Mrs. Austin was born in England, and has resided in Belleville the past nine years. She was a member of the Holloway Street United Church.

She left to mourn her loss are the husband and two small sons, Arthur and Billy, and her mother, Mrs. Alice Maw, of Trenton, was called home to care for her. During the holiday season word received by friends was to the effect that her mother-in-law had improved and that she would soon be returning to Trenton, but this was followed by the sad news that this aforesaid woman had passed away.

The late Mrs. Tucker, formerly Miss Ella Fraser, of Havelock, resided on a farm near Stirling after her marriage, from which they later removed to Trenton. About five years ago they left here to reside in Detroit. While living in Trenton Mrs. Tucker was a very active worker in the various organizations of the Bridge Street United Church. Later the remains were taken to the C.N.R. station for transportation to Glen Village, Nova Scotia, for interment.

Many were in attendance and the floral tributes evidenced the popularity of the deceased, and sincerely partially the sympathy felt for the family in the sudden and untimely taking away of the young life from their midst.

MRS. SARAH CRONK

Mrs. Sarah Cronk, mother of Dr. O. S. Cronk of this city, passed away this morning at her home in Parham and her funeral took place this afternoon at one-thirty.

PORTO RECAN BATTLE PENDS

Situation Very Tense in Central America Republic

Panama City, Feb. 16 (AP)—Despatches from Managua, Nicaragua, where a revolt broke out yesterday as an aftermath of Sunday's presidential election, said the situation was very tense and that decisive battle apparently was impending.

Loyalists and rebels fought the first battle in the streets yesterday, those despatches said, and a number of persons were wounded.

Dr. Juan Bautista Sacasa, who ran behind Ricardo Jiminez in the election, seized command of the Belistas military barracks, and a group of 1,500 rebels gathered there, the reports said. The rebels were also reported to have taken over the Pacific Railway and were using it to transport volunteers, war materials and provisions to San Jose, the Capital.

PILOT BOAT IS DAMAGED

English Freighter Raby Castle Staves Planks Above Water Line

Boston, Mass., Feb. 16—The British freighter Raby Castle, which was bound for New York after having discharged a large cargo in the Far East, collided with the pilot boat Liberty in lower Harbor today. The Raby Castle was damaged somewhat as she was about to drop the pilot. The Liberty received a number of stove planks but all were above the water line. After colliding by until it was determined no assistance would be needed the Raby Castle proceeded and the Liberty made her way into the inner harbor for repairs.

FRENCH MOVE APPRECIATED

British House Members Cheer Tariax Removal

London, Feb. 16 (AP)—There were loud cheers in the House of Commons today when Sir. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, announced that France had removed the 15 per cent surtax on British coal, recently imposed.

Some of the members characterized this development as the first concrete result of Great Britain's new tariff policy.

France imposed a surtax of 15 per cent on coal imported from countries with depreciated currencies—a surtax affecting Great Britain and Canada to some degree—last autumn after Britain had suspended the gold standard. Negotiations between Britain and France for the removal of the surtax were conducted for some time in December but without result. Following the liquidation of the substantial duties under the Abnormal Importations Act in November and December M. Louis Eloi-in, French Minister of Commerce, paid a visit to Great Britain and talked over trade relations between the two countries with Sir Hilton Young, Macdonald and some of the British cabinet ministers.

A Perfect Knockout

by Thomas Carter Dodd

Two brothers. Not as brothers should be. But as brothers seldom are.

Harry raised his ponderous bulk from the chair and went to the door. A click. He came back with the key in his hand. Unseen and understood. An instant's silence. Then—

"What's the idea?" Jim asked definitly.

"Vow," said Harry easily, his fat face wrinkling sneeringly over his underaimed brother, "we won't be disturbed."

Jim said nothing. But he passed his hand across his damp brow with Knowing Harry, he guessed what was coming. He shot a swift, furtive glance about the room. His home—the result of infinite labor. The labor of a little man who has achieved a measure of success in a small way.

Harry laughed, bolsterously. His laugh always made Jim squirm. A daring thought through Jim's mind—if only Myra could hear and give him moral support. But he brushed that aside. That morning he thought he had detected thinly veiled contempt in his wife's eyes.

Hadn't she reproached him for not sending Harry packing? He had tried it and always Harry had stayed.

A hope came to him—a thin hope Maybe he could buy his brother off and so end his visit. Hell. Unvoluntarily he shook his head. He was a runt and would always be a runt. To be looked down on, to be stepped on.

"You've got $500 in the savings bank," Harry said suddenly. "I want it. Need some new clothes."

"But—but," Jim stammered, his heart sinking, "that's all I've got. Be reasonable, Harry. Go out to California. Ill send you something each month."

The fat man never moved and now there was undisguised contempt in his face. Jim saw it, and increasing uneasiness gripped him. His imagination, stirred by fear, leaped beyond the five hundred. This house, which he had labored so long to acquire, into which he had put more than mere pennies, was free of any mortgage. Harry knew it.

Harry's eyes fell on the telephone book, rested there.

"Your boss would like to hear of that thousand you stole."

"That—that was years ago," Jim pleaded, aghast, "besides I put it all back and—"

"You've got to save my face since," but fear tore at his heart. The threat shook the edifice of his life to its foundation.

For years Jim had kept this big lazy hulk of a brother. Always he had hated himself for doing it. had despised himself for his weakness but, after one or two vain attempts to free himself, had accepted it as his fate. Now it was like a nightmare from the days of Old Man of the Sea. Jim bit his finger nails.

Then abruptly he blinked. That five hundred—maybe—

"Two hundred would take you," he began hesitantly, "to that governments land on the coast. You could live there on your pension and the little I could send you."

Harry sneered. "Not on your life."

In telling about it later, Jim said at this point he was like a drowning man going down for the second time. In a flash he saw a good share of his past, a slice that took in a long string of years.

And in order to understand what followed, you must see those years as he knew them and saw them now in one vivid picture, "even as Harry flipped the leaves of the telephone book.

Always a runt. Others cannot appreciate what a runt suffers. Way back when he was a boy it began. Harry was good-natured about it. Tweaked his arm painfully in a good-natured way. Slid on his chest. And always laughed. Until he had learned to defend himself, as he was scheming now. Always he had fallen short, unable to do the things he went to work; his brother continued playing. The runt supported the playboy through growing fear. Yet gradually he acquired a certain distrustful cunning. Grew, under duress, with one hand; kept with the other.

A little he gathered to himself, a wife. A small home.

Then came the war. They wouldn't take him because he was too small. Harry went. And also suffered in silence. Harry came back to laugh still more and—live on Jim. He had a bad leg, so Jim's influence got him behind a profiteer and wouldn't go to work.

Harry had the number. He looked at Jim with a sneering question. Jim, with clenching fists, shook his head. He was half out of his chair and trembling violently.

Harry took up the receiver, dialled the number. Jim tried to protest. His brother laughed at his weakness. Then Jim was striking with terror. So, going down for the third time, a cry escaped from Jim's lips. Harry hung up.

"Oh, then you will give it to me," Jim swayed, tried to shake his head, then—

Many years after, Jim explained it to me in strict confidence. It had been the only way he had seen him and curiously as to the pleasure he got from it. "It was like a once captive-soul released—" prompted the question.

"You see," he replied. "Harry was out cold for five minutes I had to cease him with water to bring him around."

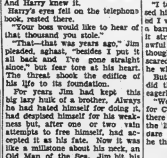
"You—you beast" I was incredulous.

Jim grinned. Gone was the deprecating look. Actually the little man seemed bigger.

"I'd broken a leg on him, but missed him by a mile. I was so scared I would have missed the side of a barn. He jerked his head back: it struck the bookcase. Got an awful crack that laid him flat. I thought he was dead. I was scared out of my wits and so was he when he came too "

But still I was puzzled. . . . "How did that mend matters?" I asked eagerly.

"Well, you see, Harry departed for California that very night"—



There was an air of triumph about the little man——"and he doesn't care much past, from to this day he thinks I hit him!"

These Mothers Speak from the Heart

When they tell of the strain—the anxiety—of having a sick, helpless child

MANY hundreds of sincere letters have come to us from mothers writing to tell—with thankful hearts—of how Baby's Own Tablets are making and keeping their children well. Read what some of them say:

Mrs. Robert Greenhorn, Philipsville, Ont., says: "I am the mother of seven children and when I see any one of them with a cold coming on I give it Baby's Own Tablets I flee to. Also, when I could not sleep at night with baby's cries from colic it was Baby's Own Tablets that cleared the little system of that offending substance and gave sweet sleep and rest."

Mrs. Archie Begbie, Cameron, Ont., says: "We have not lost a night's rest through teething as I always use my old standby, Baby's Own Tablets. They are worth their weight in gold."

Mrs. Frederick Morin, Lakefield, Ont., says: "When my baby was four months old he was very ill, and weighed just four pounds. We tried several kinds of food, but he still remained ill, and was terribly constipated. Our doctor advised me to try Baby's Own Tablets, and when I began giving them the constipation ceased, Baby could sleep better and the bowels were more regular. He is now a fine sturdy boy."

Mrs. Frank A. Tallen, Harrowsmith, Ont., says: "It was next to marvellous, after giving Baby's Own Tablets, how quickly the fever was diminished and the child was back to normal."

Mrs. Ben Slavenwhite, Arendale, N.S., says: "Any mother who has a baby, and I was nearly frantic until the woman next door gave me some Baby's Own Tablets. They made her quite well."

A minister's wife in Brantford, Ont., Mrs. (Rev.) M. E. Conron, says: "Our first baby was cross and feverish and would not take his food. We lost so much rest at night I was completely played out. But one day while my husband, who is a minister, was calling, a lady advised him to buy a box of Baby's Own Tablets. We certainly found they worked wonders. In 24 hours we had a different baby."

Baby's Own Tablets are effective for teething troubles, colds, simple fever, colic, upset stomach, indigestion, and whenever a child is cross, restless and fretful. Children like the tablets like candy. 25 cents package. More than 1,250,000 packages sold in 1931.

RECOVERY NOT BOOM

Those people who look for revival and when they think of revival mean boom are no doubt in for disappointment. All the signs of social eruption and discontent, all the discussions by experts and others as to causes of the present ways, will not go for nothing, the upset in the great wide world means something more than merely a world tired of prosperity and only desiring a rest; there is the undercurrent, many hope, of a new era when a more equitable arrangement will be possible to prevent disastrous booms and crashes, and some means of providing a smoother run of things and to bring a more clear demonstration of Christian principles in the every day social and business life of the people. Many of course do not think of these things but there are those who have such faith in human nature as to believe that the way of progress is upward, and on and that the race is moving steadily forward.

But few believe things can ever be just the same as they were. Recovery is believed in, but boom is no panacea, it would mean a worse crash.

Only a writer in the New York Times speaks on this very problem:

"It is not a contribution to the public good, whatever one perceives as right in the economic clouds, to hail it as the approach of a new "boom," as the herald of "unprecedented" prosperity. That is the path of freshest condition of the patient today that to start feeding him on booms and dazzling prosperities is the surest guarantee of inducing a violent attack of nausea.

"By all means let us speak of recovery and recuperation and convalescence. But to start nursing a person back to health by inducing cheerful thoughts as a supplement to light diet is the surest device for a fatal state of mind in the patient to remind him of the boom prosperity that made him what he is today. We will elicit the greatest help how long the new boom may be expected to last and whether any one will be left alive when that in turn collapses.

No one believes that human nature has reached the stage that legislation can prevent every mistake, every case of bad judgment of which the individual and the mass are now capable, but most people believe that the step must be upward and can see the hand climb step by step up through the ages which humanity has taken to reach the present condition, and that such steps usually follow such a crisis as this present. The cure is to be found in no panacea, but in the dark, in the unseen, but in evolution, working out the ape and the tiger in the present system of things and ushering in a new and better day. It often takes the severe illness and the bitter pill to make the most change. Some lessons cannot be learned and used profitably just as there would be no League of Nations now striving to end war if there had not been a terrible conflict in the years 1914 to 1918. Nature and human nature use mistake and experience as a child does its experience with a burn.

HELEN OF TROY

The late Edgar Wallace was likely right when he said that the highbrow was a person whose chief attraction in the world was something else than woman and beauty. Ninety-nine per cent of the world will be with him in this statement. This may also explain why the highbrow is not popular and why the story of Helen of Troy still lives. Helen was said to have been the matron who with her supreme beauty upset the ancient world, giving rise to the Trojan war which in turn has given rise to a world of poetry and romance. Helen still stands as the most enticing figure of woman the world has ever seen even if she did forget the nuptial vow and leave her husband Menelaus for the dashing young Paris son of the King of Troy.

Helen still lives in art. Women as well as men frequent in this twentieth century the theatres telling the story of this remarkable woman. It is the love story that counts—Edgar Wallace knew the source of appeal in novel and drama.

Some years ago the story of Helen of Troy was told in Belleville in movies, one of the most intelligent and inspiring plays ever witnessed. Now again the newest Irish star in the Irish stage is G. B. Cochrane's "Helen." Half a million dollars of tickets have been sold in advance for this special play, an appeal is not only in its hits at the world conditions of today but also in the story of this beauty of the old world.

The success of the play shatters the nonsense talked of—that costume and period plays are out of date. There is something in the plot, in the theme, the splendid spectacle which rivals anything the screen can exhibit.

Helen ver story has been modern of course by point lessons to the folk of today. But Helen is its backbone. The half million dollars paid for advance sold out for the worship of ... by the materialistic ... The highbrow does not ... Wallace was right.

FLAMES
By Aline Michaelis

Draw down the shades. Shut out the winter night,
Shut out the swirling snow, the clutching wind.
The stealthy darkness whence the moon in flight
Has passed, and left no shining shaft behind.
Insistent night without, but here the sun
And Summer wait, for this great log once stood
In emerald majesty long seasons gone,
The lofty monarch of a singing wood.

The dancing flames remember, leaping high
They can recall the leafy forest aisles,
The swaying boughs outlined against the sky,
The shafts of sunlight and the wind's sweet wiles.

Draw down the shades; forget the Winter night,
Here Summer waits in memories loved and bright.

FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS the Toronto Skating Club has kept Canada's great winter sport of skating well to the fore and made an art out of the exercise. Every season the club puts on a great ice spectacle in Toronto which is always voted the best entertainment of the year. Figure skating and all kinds of beautiful drills and stunts make up the program which is as unique as it is highly entertaining. Last March Belleville Rotary Club hopes to present their brilliant spectacle here for the benefit of the work being carried on by local Rotarians for the care and cure of crippled children. The entertainment was a great success, financially and every way, and the news that the skaters have kindly consented to put on another of their entertainments here this season will meet with general approval. Next week the annual ice spectacle will be put on in Toronto with a new program throughout, and the entire company will be seen at Belleville Arena on the evening of Friday, March 11.

A GREAT FISHING INDUSTRY in the far north is predicted by George W. Lee, Chairman of the T. and N. O. R'y. Commission, in connection with the extension of that railway to James Bay. All kinds of fish of great size and good quality can be taken in close proximity to the railway and there should be no difficulty in securing plenty of ice for the refrigerator cars, according to popular belief of the frigidity of the atmosphere around Hudson Bay for a large part of the year. Every new railway in Canada, or extension seems to open up new industry, for the great northland just teems with wealth in natural resources.

Patrolling his beat in Brooklyn, Patrolman Donnelly heard heart rending cries. "Mamma, Mamma," they said.

He traced the cries to a blazing building and gave the alarm.

About 2,500 dollies perished in the flames.

EMERGENCIES REQUIRE THAT THEY BE FACED

Fainting, Unconsciousness, Hysteria Are Not Uncommon

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., F.A.D. ... (Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

LOUIS E. BISCH

Sooner or later everybody meets with an emergency. And then, if we don't know how to meet the situation a n d know what to do we regret, and often bitterly, that we did not think and prepare for such eventualities.

Painting spells are among the emergencies most frequently encountered. Bearing in mind that the blood supply to the brain is insufficient, that this attack is caused really by a partial anemia of the brain, the remedy is simple enough. This consists in holding the head to a level lower than the body. If the patient is in a sitting position bending him downwards with the head near the feet for a few seconds will promptly, in most cases, relieve the faint. Inhalation of ammonia or smelling salts also helps. After the attack a stimulant like coffee may be given.

Fainting must be distinguished from unconsciousness, however. In the latter the pulse is often obliterated and the breathing loud and labored. The lips may even be blue out at each expiration.

When unconsciousness is present the patient does not respond to the emergency measures suggested for fainting. Here, the emergency must be considered as a possibility as well as epilepsy. If the attack is apoplectic one or more limbs are paralyzed as a rule, the face is markedly drawn over to one side. If the condition be epilepsy some sort of convulsion or a general rigidity of the body will be manifest.

In the latter case care must be taken lest the patient injure his tongue through grinding of the teeth. A piece of wood should therefore be inserted between the jaws, and all restricting clothing loosened. As to the rest the patient should be allowed to lie on one side and protected lest he injure himself during the convulsive stage. Sooner or later this stage of its own accord and the patient tends to fall asleep. Regarding apoplexy medical aid should be summoned at once. In the meantime the patient should be kept as quiet as possible, the head elevated slightly and supplied to the head and, if convenient, the feet placed in a hot mustard bath.

In hysterical attacks which may simulate any of the above conditions there is usually some dramatic exaggeration of movement with either loud cries or profound moans. In fact it is best not to bother too much with such patients and leave them alone. Under such circumstances they soon recover.

In cases of hemorrhage pressure should be exerted so as to compress the bleeding vessel and stop the blood flow. If the blood spurts and is red in tone an artery is affected. Compression should then be made between the wound and the heart. If the blood oozes continuously and is dark in color compression should be exerted between the wound and the ... blood is flowing toward the heart.

Artificial respiration may often be essential to save a person's life as in drowning or asphyxiation. Here the patient should be placed on the back with shoulders elevated, head extended, and the head held well back. Next the forearms should be firmly grasped below the elbows, pulled straight back over the patient's head and held there for two seconds. This expands the chest and allows air to rush into the lungs. Next, in order to compress the chest and force the air out again the arms should be brought down to the sides of the chest in a reverse movement. When alongside the chest pressure should be exerted against the ribs and this position held for another two seconds. This entire process should be repeated at a fairly timed rate or longer.

Keeping the baby's milk warm in a vacuum bottle for night feedings is not desirable. Long-maintained heated milk undergoes chemical changes which are bad for a child. Keeping a little cold in vacuum bottles while traveling is a different matter.

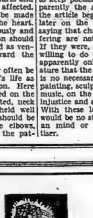
U. S. DEFLATION



The central feature of the Glass-Steigall Bill is the provision which empowers the Federal Reserve banks to issue currency against U. S. government bonds; that is, to issue government bonds as "eligible paper" for the 60 per cent. backing now required over and above the 40 per cent. gold.

Certainly this is a far-reaching proposal. It is estimated by its friends that it would release some $750,000,000 of "free gold", permit currency expansion of nearly $2,000,000,000, and similar effect in credit expansion of $15,000,000,000. This new law was not undertaken without a compelling urge. It is reliably estimated that France recently had a call upon $350,000,000 in New York. At the same time there were withdrawals of $200,000,000 of "free gold"—gold not required as backing for currency—from the United States. Had the French decided upon wholesale withdrawals, an immediate crisis would have resulted, and the United States might even have been forced off the gold standard.

How does this "reflation" in the United States relieve Canada? Economists are still too polite to call it inflation, and prefer the term of "counter-deflation". The resulting rise in the price level, it is stated, will cause such a lumber, paper and base metals would be a boon to Canadian industry. Gold would, of course, our currency kept parallel to the American. But, of course, too much reflation, counter-deflation, or plain inflation in United States funds harms our export trade if American exchange fell far below ours. —Montreal Star.

GENIUS AND MISERY

Mr. Albert Guerard, in the Nineteenth Century for January, begins an article with the saying that for literature such as we now enjoy there must be lethal elements. "Our art needs inequalities, contrasts, catastrophes, reactionary yearnings, millennial hopes, abysmal despairs, the dingy atmosphere, odor of decay and mystic premonitions of a far-off spring, a glorious spring that will redeem Europe's chaotic world. With peace, with the return of health, we should fall over the earth the pall of uniformity, contempt of tedium and horror of spiritual death." But by way of consolation to the writers, though not for the human race, he says that for untold generations there will be enough material and misery to keep poetical fires burning. Apparently the sentences with which the article begins are whimsical, as the latter on the subject, instead of saying that chaos, injustice and suffering are not essential to poetry, as they were, many of us would be willing to do without poetry. It is apparently only in regard to literature that the question arises. There is no necessary connection between painting, sculpture, architecture and music, on the one hand, and chaos, injustice and suffering on the other. With these left unimpaired, there would be no stagnation in the world, in mind or soul.—London Advertiser.

THE STORM

The yellow sea is waving o'er the blue,
The dark low clouds are blackening the deep,
The yellow floods are darkening to and fro
And bending to the shadow of the storm,
Swifter than the wet sea waves pursue
The dry and rustling waves of russet leap,
And dark grey waves of clouds across the down.
Pass silently preparing for the storm.

The waving winds that stroke with unseen hands
And with a motion swift the wold, are borne
In fury down the cliffs of crumbling white,
And last the rousing waves into a storm.
A thunderous voice is speaking from the sands,
And many golden dissted heads of That bend across the wold, in sudden fright,
Withdraw themselves and whisper in the storm.

Socialism Needs To Be Studied

Montreal, Que., Feb. 17 (CP) — Socialism needs to be studied in Canada more deeply before it is advocated for the good of humanity, according to Prof. F. C. Clarke of McMaster University, addressing the Y.M.C.A. Forum recently.

During the past few months many people have been hurt and many have become absent of the capitalistic system because it permitted them to be hurt, he told his hearers. But the system is not dead and had really changed their minds about organization of government, and suggested that if properly studied it might be the thing tomorrow all criticism of the capitalist system would melt away.

The speaker pointed out that there was a tendency today to value the individual as he never had got for his services. "So long as we believe that," he declared, "no mere moonshine to talk of Socialism at all."

HON. P. CASHIN MAKES CHARGE

Likely an Inquiry Will Be The Result of Charges Made

Fenelon Falls—(By Canadian Press)—In the Newfoundland Legislature this afternoon, Hon. Peter Cashin, former minister of Finance and Customs, repeated his charges that minutes of the Executive Council had been fabricated, that public money, had been misappropriated, and that a certain minister consistently had refused to file income tax returns.

"You're a liar" shouted Walter Stanes, liberal member for Saint Barbe, whom Mr. Cashin had charg with receiving in his own use the amount of a marine and fisheries department grant to his constituency.

P. C. Alderice, leader of the opposition, gave notice of motion for a parliamentary inquiry.

FILE CAUSES FOR THE BLAST

Failure to Record Proper Temperature May Be Direct Cause

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 17 (CP) — Failure of a thermometer to record the proper temperature may have been the cause of the explosion which injured three students and shattered apparatus in the mining building at the University of Toronto late Monday. There are five possible causes of the blast, according to General C. H. Mitchell, head of the Faculty of Applied Science, of which this is a unit.

Failure of the test tank to stand pressure well below that for which it was tested use of a large amount of benzine in proportion to the capacity of the tank, misreading of the thermometer by 100 degrees, or failure of the pressure gauge to record the correct temperature were given by General Mitchell as other possible explanations for the explosion.

More bull moose were taken this year before in the history of Nova Scotia than in the 1931 season, the big game hunting, a total of 1,567 being reported.

Mouth Logical Place To Note Signs

Montreal, Que., Feb. 17 (CP) — It is the dual responsibility of the physician and the dentist to recognize the early signs of cancer declared Dr. C. K. P. Henry, head of the dental surgical department of the Montreal General Hospital, when addressing the Mount Royal Dental Society recently. Particularly did he advise dentists to pay more attention to the examination of their patients, for in the mouth, on the lips, tongue or palate are the logical places for lesions to occur. Accompanying slides of types especially, and ragged edges of teeth were irritants predisposing to cancer, Dr. Henry pointed out. Statistics, he said, showed that 86 per cent of a number of clinically examined patients with this ailment were smokers.

ANUFACTURE ENOUGH ICE

rtificial Plant Able to Take Care of Ice Situation

People who talk of a possible famine" on account of the exceptionally mild weather of winter do not take into account the fact that artificial ice is necessary for any such thing to open up any city of size.

George K. Graham, owner of the ham Cold Storage and Artificial e Plant, as well as the Montrose ery, interviewed on the local ice ation, said that there is no ne- for any so-called ice famine. users would only anticipate ir needs and place their orders for artificial ice.

Forty Tons Daily

Belleville uses about forty tons ice daily, and it is a fact that can manufacture with our plant ten neighborhood of 100 to 150 s of ice per week. If we were so assured of that much business at the present time we could nufacture and store several thou- tons before the ice season commences, and this surplus of ice together with what we can manufacture each day during the season would easily see the city through summer. However, to do this would have to have notice from consumers that they would use the ice if we made it. In other ds they can protect themselves the simple act of buying ice during notice."

How are you fixed at the present time for ice?" was asked.

Not fixed Ahead

"Fine," said Mr. Graham. "We have anticipated any possible immediate shortage by manufacturing already three complete rooms full of ice in the cold storage and can fill numerous other rooms if we know the ice was likely to be needed, and by storing it in the cold storage plant there would be no shrinkage. In this way the ice would represent nearly twice as much as the same tonnage of natural ice, as it is a known fact that artificial ice, which is absolutely solid, and the same consistency all the way through, keeps longer than ice cut in the open. We have already assured our milk customers that if it is their desire we will protect all of them with ice to keep our milk cool next summer."

"Then you don't think that there should be any ice scarcity next summer?" Mr. Graham was asked.

"Certainly not if the ice consumers take time by the forelock, and make the necessary arrangements now, we have the machinery and are prepared to do our part. Our artificial ice is made from the finest and purest spring water and can be used in any way without the slightest fear of contamination or germ infection. So you can see that if anyone suffers from lack of ice it cannot be said in Belleville it will not be our fault, it will be because they lacked foresight to put in their order ahead and have the ice waiting for them when they wanted it. We are willing to make it now, store it and deliver it when required, which is effect means supplying our customers with a storage ice house as well as the ice, at our own expense."

"Has the prospect of ice scarcity caused increased demand for artificial ice?" was asked.

"Indeed it has," said Mr. Graham, "orders are coming in daily from new customers, at present and future delivery, and some very large orders have been received which we will have no difficulty in filling as plenty of time is given for delivery. The mild weather has certainly focused public attention again on the desirability of artificial ice, both from a purity and durability standpoint, and from the fact that artificial ice making is not affected by the weather."

So that accents to dispose of the "ice famine" bogey.

HIGHWAY MEN ENJOY CAMP

W. J. Hamer Writes of Incidents in Road Camp

Once more Mr. Hamer, employed with the Belleville contingent of highway workers in Northern Ontario, sends a word of greeting from the camps operated by the province also an account of a close shave by one or two of them while at work:

Feb. 14th, 1932.
Campbell Const. Camp.
Camp No. 4, Kaladar, P.O.

Today is Sunday and the sun is shining brightly but it is very cold this morning today, but a number of the boys are going to the nearest town cleaning up. It is quite a nice change to get out in our own clothing outside; a tub set on some stone and a fire underneath to heat it is not very long before the scrubboard is working. The blankets are out getting aired and freshened up. We have been told that we have the cleanest camp in the bunch. We good; every man does his best to be as clean as possible. Yesterday we had a rather narrow escape, the same thing happened as in our camp before. Three sticks of dynamite were fired and one failed to explode, going in the dirt and struck one stick, luckily it did not explode and was put out with no damage.

We found a woodchuck yesterday all nice and cozy in his bed. We did not kill him but got him out and away and he is now in the bush. As soon as he heard a blast go he did not lose any time. The Belleville paper goes through a good many hands here and Mrs. Tyrell Tyrell and Frankford like to read it and I pass them on as they too, get some news from their home town.

Well, as this is all at present, so long Belleville.

Yours truly,
W. J. HAMER.

Campbell Const. Co.

Camp. No. 4, Kaladar P.O.

I am writing once again thanking you very much for putting my last letter in the paper, the boys were quite pleased to read it, and the best of all the cook likes to read the paper also, and we run the letter out and mailed it home. We did not work yesterday as it rained very hard the night before and all last night, today the boys are making up for the lost time as far as work was observed, the day is beautiful and the boys sure did a good day's work.

We had quite a surprise tonight to hear that our walking boss, Mr. MacKay, left us. He all had a good word for him, he did all in his power to make us feel at home when he came on the job. He never had a word to say to any man; every man in camp gave him a cheer and we are sorry to see him go.

I have nothing more to say this time, but "Happy days are here again."

Yours truly,
W. J. HAMER

FLYERS' BUY TWO PLAYERS

American League Difficulties Settled

St. Louis, Mo., Feb 17—Purchase by the St. Louis "flyers" of Bobbie Burns left winger and Leo Carbol defenceman from Chicago Shamrocks was announced last night by the management of the St. Louis Club of the American Hockey League. The deal was an outright purchase.

Status of Eddie Bouchard, whose ownership has been disputed by flyers and Duluth Hornets, was definitely settled yesterday when an American League meeting was held and it was ruled Bouchard would remain with Duluth.

Where They Train

Yesterday saw the opening of the training season of the major league baseball teams, when the members of the Chicago Cubs gathered at their training quarters on the Catalina Island. Other "big league" teams will start their annual trek southward in the near future. The Boston Americans are the last team to report, when they meet at Savannah, Ga., on March 1st, 1932. There has been no date set for the spring training of, the New York "Yankees" as yet, but it is expected that they will be called upon to set out for the southland in the very near future, which reminds all the baseball fans of the fact that Babe Ruth has not signed his 1932 contract as yet.

The spring training sees many queer and funny antics, when the veterans and the rookies back up in their annual "squabble" in which the veterans naturally come out best after they get used to the warm climate and the blazing sun.

The two big league club's training camps will be located at the following cities:

Current Sport

By The Observer

Plenty of action can be witnessed in the sporting activities in Belleville tonight when a hockey double-header at the local arena, and a basketball twin bill at the Y. M. C. A. will be staged.

This collegiate hockey gave the fans plenty of entertainment last winter and it looks as though this district is to be another banner season of schoolleague hockey. Tonight, when the O.S.S. juniors battle the Napanee Collegiate and the B.C.I. boys take on Tweed in the second game, the fans will see two high class teams in action watching this new O.S.D. squad in action. Ed Kelly and Jack Hilsde have both stated that they will be in the play-offs and tonight's games look as though they will be a "wow".

Over at the Campbell street gymnasium the basketball leagues will be play-off title, one to be boys and the other to be girls. Both games should bring out many surprises as most anything can happen in a basketball game. The proceeds tonight will be given to the girls' team for the purchase of a permanent trophy for the league.

At last the winter sports of the Olympic games are over for another four years. The games, recently played in Lake Placid were anything but satisfactory in more ways than one. The initial act of the series was the prize "bloomer" of the year. It is customary in the International Anthem of the winning competitor and they were to see that the Americans were about to win, that he had previously made arrangements for the Star Spangled Banner to be played. After the Canadians had lined up as winners they were greeted with the usual boos from the band in attendance. The Winnipeg Grads were disordered at first but they did not kick. As a matter of fact they gave the whole affair the so-called "horse laugh".

But then the members of the Canadian Olympic hockey team had their fun late that night. They took for somewhat to understand, all the competitive flags that they could get their hands on. It was reported that Lake Placid that the Canucks even helped themselves to the official Gympic flag of the meet. Oh well, there's no use half daring a thing, and we understand that the Canadians had their half the fun, which they set out to undertake, namely, to help themselves to souvenirs, and so as to last them until the next Olympic games are held. Bring again "on boys must have our fun."

A number of local skaters participated at the arena in connection with the annual ice carnival held on Monday evening. As the local Rivanis Club do not intend having their annual ice carnival this season the local speed skaters will be out of luck for the annual city championships. Fi might be a brilliant idea for the Rivanis Company put on an evening of ice races and other attractions. It might be to their advantage, we would suggest.

There could be school races, open races and fancy and trick speed. These meets go over in a big way in the dairy centres, why not Belleville?

We wish to thank Mr. George Stokes, superintendent of the C. N. R., in putting on the ice on the lines of Georgie Bradford. We have very authentic information to the fact that Bradford did play baseball in Belleville some years ago, however.

In referring to Belleville's hockey team of 1900, the centre player, that year was Ernie Lang, but a boy by the name of Llang. Ernie was playing with London that season, we are informed.

Now we again hear from Kingston when the boys of that town comes to the front with the statement that Belleville sport fans are poor losers. We have nothing further to say along these lines, as there is no sporting town in Canada equal to Kingston when it comes to poor sportsmanship. This fact was established long years ago and the Limestone City sports have never seen fit to live up to their heritage down. They seem to be proud of the fact that their home team must win at any cost.

We might add that we never hollered about the lack of material in connection with the Queen's hockey team. We merely stated that it was a good thing for the city of Kingston that Queen's University was located there. Why? Well if it (Queen's) was not there the Frankenex would still be playing their games in that famous old rink of theirs.

SOMETHING ABOUT NICK

Meet Nicholas Wasnie, fire-eating forward of Les Canadiens, world champions. Nick is of Polish descent, born in Manitoba. He learned about hockey playing around with the "gang" and at a tender age we find him playing in Alberta. Then, if my memory isn't failing me, he jumped to the Winnipeg Maroons, thence to Chicago, finally to Montreal. Nick has always been pretty highly thought of by supporters of the Flying French-Canadians. Last season he was a couple of years ago in the world championship series with New York. Nick's work in the first game at Montreal was pretty awful. He admits it himself with a grin. And how the fans panned him. But at New York he was the big hero of the piece, scoring one goal and paving the way for the other. The lears turned to cheers, Nick was 27 the other day. And it's of interest that Nick Wasnie and roommate, Marty Burke, was 27 the same day. I'll tell you about Marty to-morrow.

Rotary—Hall, a slight edge over the R.C.A.F. sextet taking their first match 15 to 10 and the second one by the score of 15 to 8. The "Flyers", however, showed a marked improvement and put up a lot of beating once they get used to the game.

Monkey-Face Ha's a Quiet Chuckle

By Thornton W. Burgess

A ready wit known what to say.
But wisdom when the time to stay.

—Monkey-face.

Monkey-face the Barn Owl was beginning to be worried. The nesting season was approaching. Mother Owls, as you know, nest very early in the year. Mrs. Monkey-face had firmly announced that she would go back to the church belfry where they had nested before, although it was several days' flight from where they were now living in Farmer Brown's barn. Monkey-face knew that if she did go back he would go, too, and he didn't want to go back. He was perfectly satisfied with where they now were. The barn was comfortable, very comfortable, and the hunting was good. The only thing wrong had been the difficulty in finding a satisfactory place in the barn for raising a family. He had had to admit that Mrs. Monkey-face was right in her objections to such places as they had found.

Then Farmer Brown's Boy had taken a hand. Very up on the topmost rafters, just under the roof, he had built a little room. It really was a sort of big box with one side left open. His had built it right on the favorite perching place of those Owls and this together with the noise of the hammering and sawing, had quite upset them, especially Mrs. Monkey-face. When at last he finished the job Mrs. Monkey-face was the she was filled with suspicion. It was then that she decided that she would go back to the belfry just as soon as nesting time arrived.

It was Monkey-face who first found out that one side of that little room was open and that it really was very cozy and nice up there. There was even a perch on which to sit and meditate in peace and comfort. The very first time he went in and looked it over he knew that here was the best place he ever had seen in which to start a family. He hastened to call Mrs. Monkey-face. She refused to come. She wouldn't even peek inside. She knew, she just knew, that that thing was dangerous. No good would come of having anything to do with it. She would have nothing to do with it. She would not even know it.

Monkey-face just humped his shoulders and said nothing. He knew that the more he might say the more set against it she would become, but from that time on he spent much of his hunting and the hours of daylight sitting on that perch in that little room, leaving Mrs. Monkey-face to perch alone on one of the rafters, where she fussed and scolded, but could not get to hear her. Every day she said something about going back to her old home. It kept Monkey-face filled with amusement.

One night he remained out hunting a little longer than she did. When he entered the room through the gable window he flew straight to that perch in the little room built by Farmer Brown's Boy. There in the darkness he chuckled.

"I have been thinking," said she, "that it is high time for us to make up our minds where we will raise a family this year."

"I quite agree with you, my dear," replied Monkey-face. "I will be ready to start whenever you say the word."

"Start for where?" demanded Mrs. Monkey-face.

"Why, for our old home in the church belfry," replied Monkey-face.

"Who has said anything about going way back there?" demanded Mrs. Monkey-face. "You must be crazy to think of such a thing when right here we have the best place we could have had or ever will have. This place couldn't be better suited to our needs if it had been made especially for us. Just get it out of that foolish head of yours that we ever are going back to that church belfry."

"Very well," replied Monkey-face meekly. Then he flew over to a rafter in the darkest corner to be by himself. He just had to chuckle and it wouldn't do to let Mrs. Monkey-face see him doing it.

"It is a wise Owl who knows when to hold his tongue," he muttered. Then he chuckled again. But it was a very quiet chuckle.

QUIET—TO THINK

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

When your child does a naughty thing, or evinces unsocial conduct toward others, punishment is nothing quite so efficacious as making him go somewhere by himself and think things over.

It isn't a punishment and shouldn't be considered or regarded as such. There are times when that place is very much desired apparently if we could but for a few minutes hide away and get hold of ourselves through a short period of rational, unhurried, unannoyed thought.

It is always a wrench for a child to be isolated from his playmates. This, if you must have some idea of making him suffer for his misdemeanor, is the nearest to that. The quiet period should not be presented to him as a punishment, but as a help toward getting himself in hand and figuring out the right thing to do when he again takes his place with other people.

We of the west are apt to smile at tales of eastern people going into "their own room" but I think a set period has a most important place in the life of each one of us during the day. And if the child is led gently to that room or to a quiet spot where he can think things out for a certain period, he will come back with more self-control and poise. For after all, temper outbursts or irritability often have their origin in physical upsets, just as on the other hand much of the temper or violent quarrel will have its consequence in a temporarily upset physical condition. Nerves, minds and bodies are so inter-dependent that one cannot be called to account for the other.

And your child knows that you are leading him away to "rest" and to quiet for a few minutes, for truly, for very often is only rest that he needs. Let him rejoin his games and playmates when he feels that he can behave according to social standards, for to keep him isolated longer than the time when he feels that that decision, is to have the quiet period defeat its own purpose. And that often defeats your purpose.

Add to egg yolk mixture and cook slightly. Add flavorings and fastly fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

Toasted Jam Rolls.

Cut very thin slices from loaf of fresh bread. Trim off crusts. Spread with butter, then with jam. Roll tightly. Place in broiler and toast on all sides.

College Women Score Varsity Governor's Rule

TORONTO—The Canadian Federation of University Women had forwarded to Premier Hon. Robert Fallconer, president of the University of Toronto, a protest against a resolution of the Board of Governors that married women not economically dependent on their husbands be disbarred from employment by the university.

The letter, signed by Mrs. Douglas Young, Regina, Sask., president of the federation, voiced regret that "such reactionary measures should have been taken by the governors of a great university centre." It demanded the resolution be rescinded at once.

"We do not wish to do more than point out the absurdity of such a system which questions the right of a married woman to pursue her profession, while acknowledging the right of an unmarried woman or of any man," it said.

The federation in the letter scored the board of governors for demanding that graduate women research workers should remain celibate.

"In all our awards for travelling scholarships and fellowships study or mention has been made of conditions of marriage, the ability and zeal of the candidate to do the work required. It would be a breach of faith with us if we had accomplished the work demanded by our board and well at the larger group who by it have been stimulated to graduate study and research, if they should now be added a demand for celibacy," the letter added.

Dr. J. C. Robertson, secretary of the Board of Governors, last night said nothing had been decided as yet. "Every case will be examined thoroughly before any decision."

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

When a Bob is B etwix and Between

Growing hair, cutting it, letting it grow again seems to be one of the beauty problems of the early months of 1932. A prophecy is being fulfilled. Five years ago, in Paris, I interviewed M. Simon who was then the head of the French organization of hairdressers. "For the next twenty years," he predicted, "women will grow their hair as it was in very short or a bit longer. It will give them something to do. We talk about, to be interested in. Not for twenty years anyway—if then—will really long hair come back."

It takes courage to let a short bob grow. When those back fringers take on an extra inch they stick out like sore thumbs unless they are disciplined. Too short to curl. They have a riotous time.

"If you have your hair trimmed, never get any place," says a girl who is boastful over the fact that she grows hair every writer and cuts it every spring. "I go to a barber a crack at our head and he doesn't know when to stop shearing. He gives you more than your money's worth which isn't what you want."

During the critical betwixt-and-between period, for which we must take on all lengths, there is no one right way. Each one hair doesn't grow as fast as the next one. Maybe some are slow, others are thick, others tired out. At any rate, something has to be done.

There is need of special trimming to conform with the manner of the hair dress. Some of these one-sided effects produce a thatch that is queer and scrambled when catchers soft and silky.

The Beauty Box

No sense in the beauty preacher telling the congregation of beauty seekers to play up their good points. Every girl with dimples can be sure that pretty dimples are there under her frock. Darlings with dimples in their eyes, darlings, keep the dimples showing. The babies who have been told they have beautiful profiles are just as much to blame, giving the beautiful head sidewise, so that the full face, one of the noble faces and the pretty lips. Have you arms seldom worn sleeves? Sleeves make them nervous they say, get a set of arm bands and cut out of that.

Do you know that the muscles of the human back are arranged in a half-way and all within you stretch yourself tall, as you should be, the small laughter, "if you do not see each other."

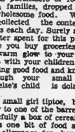
SHE WORE A SINGLE FLOWER

In her hat and so emphasized its prettiness. After having shown hats with masses of flowers Agnes is now concentrating on models trimmed with but one bloom. She shows such a model in a moonlight Tyrolean hat with a peaked crown. The hat is of black cellophane and is trimmed with a large single flower to accent the drape of the crown.

Two in one marks the new scheme of the newest frocks. A good afternoon frock is done in navy blue sheer crepe with white crepe yoke that marks the shoulders and the bishop sleeves in a turtle-neck collar and the white inset is marked by all-over pin-tucking.



It is impossible these days to find a frock without a jacket or coat without its own brief little jacket or bolero. A new model in rough tweed crepe has a sleeveless jacket and a skirt with pleated insets has a bolero that ends in front and ties in alternating broad stripes composed of both a red and blue.

A puff for puffs is indicated in the description of the new spring frocks many of which have puffed sleeves. A smart model of black velvet has the puffed treatment marked by double puffs. Other notes of interest are the bows on the shoulders. The neckline is bordered with thin lines of silver thread.

Horado Strong on Standard Board on Wednesday

Toronto, Ont., February 17.—Strength in Eldorado and International Nickel added a little tone to a forenoon session on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today, both issues display- ing a rise of fractions at mid-day. Bal- ance of the list irregular, with showing an easier tendency.

Eldorado, when taken at noon, showed a gain of 13 at $1.38, re- flecting demand being attributed to certain statements made re- garding the possibilities of the Great Lake Field. Officials of Eldo- rado were confined to a few words, declared that price of farm products must either rise to a point to share their commensurate with those of other commodities, or the whole social structure must drop to the same basis to that occupied by farm products in the present time.

"Agriculture is in a serious way," Dr. Jolliffe told the meeting, "and is more serious in some other Prov- inces, and worse in some other coun- tries, but the plight of the Canadian farmer is a serious one. He is re- ceiving for his products all that he produces and his income is not sufficient to meet his expenses.

"The people demand three meals a day," he continued, "and while the Government may reduce activity in all other lines, the farmer must carry on. Agriculture must be ahead for the people must be fed. Yet it seems impossible to induce the farmer to carry on, but he must, even if he receives support from outside sources."

CROWDED COURT

Bryant Case Laid Over For Week For Hearing

Before a crowded courtroom, Dr. H. H. Alger, of Stirling, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Carrie Bryant, also of Stirling, on or about December 22nd will on Saturday be committed for trial by Magistrate Mikel according to a statement made in the Police Magistrate's Office by Arnold Bryant, K.C., defence counsel, had moved for committal, on the ground that no prima facie case had been established, but after considerable argument with attempting to procure an abortion in the same way in each case, Mr. Bryant, for the K.C., was remanded on request of defence for one week. Mr. Bryant, for Ponton stating he was not ready to proceed with the case. That adjournment was renewed by the same boundsman. The second Mrs. Bryant, sister to the wife of Mr. Charles Payne, at the hearing.

In the Alger case, Charles Payne stated that the accused had committed on a prima facie case had not been established. He submitted that all the evidence be transcribed and that His Worship read carefully the statement made by the various witnesses especially Drs. Cronk and Gibson upon whom the case hinged.

His Worship stated that he was of the firm opinion that there was sufficient evidence for committal but if at adjournment was wanted until Saturday he would be quite willing to accede to the request but at the present his mind was made up to commit the accused. Mr. Donnan replied that he could till when he stated "that he had as much sympathy for the accused as anyone in the district but that he had a definite action to follow".

Medical Evidence

Dr. George S. Cronk described his being called to attend the deceased woman and her condition at the time. He stated she was seriously ill but he was not able to determine the exact cause but after her removal to the hospital he made an examination and found her to be suffering from acute peritonitis.

"What was the cause of the peritonitis?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"The result of an abortion," said the witness.

"Was she girl conscious?"

"Was the girl conscious or delirious in the evening of Monday, December 21st."

"When did she die?"

"Early Tuesday morning."

Post-Mortem

Following death did you conduct and were you present at a post-mortem at the hospital."

"Yes."

"Did you make a report?"

"Yes, Dr. Gibson and myself made a report after a post-mortem. The report was placed by the to the court as an exhibit.

"What did you find?"

"Peritonitis was general about the whole body. Also had an irritance."

"What caused condition?"

He replied that he believed that an abortion had taken place.

"Were you able to determine the manner in which the condition was brought about?"

"No."

Charles A. Payne cross examined the witness at no great length, his questions being mainly as follows: "Are abortions in some instances spontaneous?" and Dr. Cronk agreed that this was so.

"Does infection accompany same?"

"Yes."

"Could you say she had been interfered with?"

"No."

Dr. Gibson's View

Dr. R. S. Gibson was called next and gave evidence as to the cause of the former witness but did not go quite as far in his explanation of the cause of the girl's death owing to the peritonitis. Mrs. Newton Wilbur was next called but had known the girl in direct bearing on the case, she giving evidence that she was acquainted with the girl and that her general condition of health was good up until her serious sickness. Mrs. Wilbur on Saturday, she was being removed to the hospital on Monday.

Court's Protection

Arnold Bryant was then called to the stand and immediately his counsel, R. D. Ponton, K.C., asked for the protection of the court which was agreed to. The witness stated that he had known the girl deceased for four years and that her reputation for health was good up to her illness. He stated that on December third, he with Milton Dafoe, the deceased went to Stirling about ten-thirty in the evening and visited the office of Dr. Alger and a consultation was held in the office. Explaining that the girl was in a delicate condition, the doctor took the deceased into an inner office and returned about ten minutes later. "He charged us $5 and at the same time gave the girl some pills and advised her that she was not better to return in ten days," said the witness.

"Did you return in the ten days?" asked the Crown.

"Yes, on December 11th, Davison, myself and the deceased went to the office of Dr. Alger at about seven-thirty in the evening and the doctor was not at home. We finally arrived and Miss Parks and the witness were there.

"Did you have any conversation?"

Not Any Better

"Yes I said the girl was not any better and he let us into the inner office and called the girl in and she was cleaned with the doctor for over half an hour. The doctor returned and asked how much I could pay. He said the treatment ran as high as $1,000, but I was going to charge you $25.00 or $35.00 on time."

"Did you pay?"

"Yes, I paid $25.00 in cash."

"Did you have any other conversation with the doctor at the time?"

Reference to Girl

"Yes, he told me 'in case the girl gets sick take her to another doctor.'"

Cross-examined by Mr. Payne, the witness stated that all the pills given by the doctor at the first visit had been taken before she became seriously ill.

Books Seized

George Milton Davidson corroborated the evidence given by the last mentioned witness, although he could give no evidence as to the treatment that took place nor the nature of the visit.

John Kelly, Provincial Constable, told of searching the office of Dr. Alger on January 6th last, and confiscating the day-book and upon examination by the Crown, certain extracts were found in which Bryant's name appeared on December 3rd and 17th.

Miss Leslie Ferriss, accountant, and assistant to Dr. Alger, was called and identified certain entries in the day-book as being written by Dr. Alger. This concluded the evidence and court was soon adjourned.

Precautions Are Taken at Queen's

Kingston, Feb. 17.—Dean A. L. Clark of the Faculty of Science at Queen's University, when interviewed regarding the explosion at the University of Toronto, stated that at Queen's every possible precaution was taken with the material which is working on experiments in which there was an element of danger.

"There is always the chance where experiments are being conducted that such an accident as occurred will occur as took place at the University of Toronto," said Dr. L. F. Goodwin, professor on industrial chemistry and chemical engineering. We will have pieces of apparatus set up and ready to operate, in operation here shortly. The method employed at Queen's to prevent accidents is the same with any dangerous piece of apparatus. The apparatus is placed behind a screen of steel plate, which is fastened to angle irons imbedded in the concrete of the floor of the laboratory. If any explosion occurs the steel plate will absorb the majority of the shock. When students are working with apparatus they are constantly protected as far as possible by the steel plate."

According to advice received from the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce, agricultural exports of Cairo, Canadian apples are scoring high on the Egyptian market.

Strongest Protest Note Ever Framed by Council Cites Covenant Article

Japan is Urged to Halt Hostilities as 'Noble Gesture For Peace'

CALL ASSEMBLY

Tokio's Answer Will Decide Whether Special Session Summoned

Tokio, Feb. 17.—The League of Nations Council note urging Japan to cease hostilities in China was believed today to have increased the possibility of Japanese withdrawal from the League. Official comment on the note was withheld pending study of the document but it was considered certain that it would intensify the strain on Japanese relations with the League.

Ambassador Debuchi, in Washington, today called Foreign Minister Yoshizawa at Tokio that Secretary of State Stimson was sending a diplomatic note that America would hold Japan responsible if Japanese military operations in Shanghai endangered American lives there.

Geneva, Feb. 17.—The League of Nations Council formally urged the Japanese government last night to cease hostilities in Shanghai as "a noble gesture" in behalf of international peace.

A note, described as the most strongly worded communication ever framed by the League, was despatched to Tokio setting forth the attitude of the council as formulated at a long session from which both the Japanese and Chinese delegates were barred.

The note included:

1—A reminder that the United States has protested against any action to gain territory in China by violence, saying that such gains can not be recognized.

2—A reminder to Japan concerning her possibilities under article 10 of the League covenant.

3—A declaration that the council cannot accept the situation in China as an accomplished fact.

4—A reminder to Japan of her position as one of the great powers of the world and that, as a result, and as a noble gesture, she should meet the sensitivities of the world."

It was significant that the note was sent to the Japanese government, but not to the Chinese government. Presumably it was an attempt by the League council to avoid acting on China's demands that a special session of the general assembly of the League be summoned to consider the Chinese warfare.

Persuading Chinese Delegate.

Japan had opposed such action, and China refused to take the initiative in calling the assembly. The council leaders were understood to have used pressure on the friendly Chinese delegate, W. W. Yen, that the League was making every effort to end the warfare. It also was considered possible that Japan would resign from the League if strong action was taken against her.

The long session of the council, which met shortly after noon, continued the advisability of sending a similar note to China, but finally decided to appeal to Japan alone. The note probably will be published tomorrow.

As a result of the despatch of the note to Japan, the council will be forced within a few days to face the most important decision it has ever made in a serious international affair.

Hopes For Japan's Collaboration.

It is generally believed that the response of the Tokio government to the note will decide whether the council calls a special session of the assembly. The League leaders feel that if Japan indicates willingness to collaborate in pacific solution of the China warfare, the calling of the assembly will not be necessary.

Otherwise the council will be under strong pressure to call the assembly without further delay.

Heavy Bombardment at Shanghai Prepares Way For Big Push

WOOSUNG REPULSE

New Batteries Set Up By Chinese in Preparation For Action

SHANGHAI, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Two meant the "second warning" to the naval landing party guarding the British docks on the Whangpoo River, were injured to-day when a number of shells from the artillery duel between Chinese and Japanese forces fell on the wharves. The injuries of one of the blue jackets were reported serious.

Two Chinese were killed and eight wounded by the exploding shells. The British steamer Suwie was struck by the fallen missiles and crossed to the opposite shore to avoid the shells.

By Morris J. Harris

Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press

SHANGHAI, Feb. 17.—After an artillery duel lasting all night the entire Shanghai battlefront and the line reaching from Chapei to Hungjawan, half-way to the Woosung forts burst into action today.

The bombardment started at 6.55 p.m. yesterday and kept Shanghai awake all night long. The Japanese put into action a heavy battery first placed in Hongkew Park—and they also utilized large-calibre field pieces that had been silent for several days. Before dawn the continuous firing of the big guns threw a red glare over Shanghai and the northern border of the city was lighted up by fires started by bursting shells. A strong north wind fanned the flames and the city was filled with smoke over the international settlement.

Exactly what the renewal of hostilities on a big scale portended was not clear. At first it was believed it about four miles, there was an unchinese—a warning the Japanese military authorities said they would cower with guns. But shortly after, daybreak the heavy bombardment ceased, apparently indicating that the Japanese had determined to wait a little longer before launching their major offensive.

Preparing for Big Push

Immediately after the cessation of the bombardment information came from Japanese military circles indicating that the artillery firing had been carried on by newly-arrived reinforcements who had unlimbered their guns in the vicinity of Chapei and were then actively engaged in prepare the ground for the big push.

It also was reported that during the night the Japanese moved their position great numbers of heavy howitzers, considered the most formidable array of armament ever seen about Shanghai.

Chinese sources said the firing from their line had come for the most part from the Chinese forces who maintained their positions and apparently suffered no great inconvenience from the Japanese bombardment.

A flurry of hostilities occurred at Woosung during the night, the Japanese detachments attempted to cross the creek there, reports from the front said, but the Chinese repulsed them with a machine gun fusillade.

United States consular authorities reported that there was a new attack by a roving band of Japanese plainclothesmen on a United States mission school in Quinlin Road in the Hongkew section.

The Japanese smashed furniture and windows and scattered about the premises, after informing them were seeking anti-Japanese propaganda. Nothing was left behind by students who fled when the conflict started.

Chinese Batteries Installed

The Chinese Tuesday were out in force more than ever in Chapei. They had set up new artillery batteries in preparation for action on the Kiangwan Road, and between Chenju and Chapei. A distance of about four miles, there was an unbroken line of trenches and barricades bristling with machine guns.

Struck Large Tree In Forced Landing

St. Catharines, Ont., Feb. 17 (CP) —Two pursuit aviators escaped unhurt last night when their machines crashed just outside the city. The machine, piloted by George Jaffe, 20, St. Catharines, with Jack Morrison as passenger, struck a tree in an attempted landing. Engine trouble was given as the cause of the accident. The undercarriage, wings and propeller of the plane were damaged.

Quebec May Ask King to Exempt Province from Ban

Wish to Have People Remembered For Good Deeds

RESOLUTION TABLED

Quebec, Feb. 17.—The Province of Quebec wishes to "divorce itself" from the resolutions adopted by the House of Commons in which His Majesty the King was requested to refrain from granting titles upon Canadians, according to a resolution laid by Hon. D. Chouquette, in the Legislative Council Tuesday.

The resolution sets forth that the House of Commons resolution in question "are not in the interest of the British subjects in the British Empire," and that they "in no way justify the proposed abolition of distinctions awarded Canadians by foreign countries." "Therefore," the resolution continues, "it is resolved that an address be presented His Most Excellent Majesty the King, praying His Majesty not to consider the Province of Quebec as being bound by the above mentioned resolutions, that representations be made to the Federal authorities protesting against the expression of opinion which they have formulated, to the effect that neither France nor other foreign countries should, owing to the said resolutions respecting the abolition of titles, grant decorations to Canadians."

The House of Commons' resolutions referred to were adopted in May 21, 1918 and May 22, 1919, and in addition to requesting the King to cease conferring titles upon Canadians, desired "Enaction of such legislation as necessary to abolish existing hereditary titles already conferred, upon the death of the person at present enjoying such titles."

TREATMENT OF HOUSE LEADER IS UNPOPULAR

Caucus of Liberals Held And Whole Matter Discussed

"INSIDE STORY"

Hepburn, Nixon Alleged to Have Stolen March on Sinclair

Toronto, Feb. 17—Liberals in the Ontario Legislature are now torn between two—instead of two—allegiances, although in the light of a Liberal caucus yesterday their leaning is once more toward W. E. N. Sinclair, their House leader.

Regard for Sinclair has wavered in Mr. Sinclair's camp brought on the caucus, but as it broke, with the explanations given by Mr. Sinclair for the course taken by the Legislature in repudiating the Hepburn-Nixon call upon Mr. Justice Middleton, there was manifest a decided feeling that Mr. Sinclair has been slighted.

Mr. Hepburn, it is said, has developed an extraordinary reliance upon Harry C. Nixon, Progressive leader, for the guidance of the Liberal caucus—so much so that it is reported at the conference to Mr. Hepburn's having arbitrarily made Mr. Nixon the House leader, in effect, instead of Mr. Sinclair.

What is said to have disgusted in regard to the call upon Mr. Justice Middleton is regarded as extraordinary, in view of the peace-meeting at the King Edward Hotel at which Mr. Nixon induced the Messrs Hepburn and Sinclair had sunk their differences, buried the hatchet, smoked the pipe of peace, refused to be "interviewed" further but had agreed to work in harmony.

Stole March on Sinclair

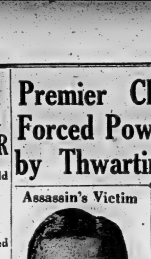
According to high Liberal authorities, what happened was that Mr. Hepburn, in town last Friday, met Dr. George H. Macdonald, Toronto, who, who in the course of conversation told Mr. Hepburn of Mr. McQuibban) and Mr. Sinclair planned a call upon Mr. Justice Middleton, with a view to discussing the appointment of counsel to represent the Government against the Hydro.

Mr. Hepburn, according to this information, thought it a good idea —so good, in fact, that in the absence of Dr. McQuibban and Mr. Sinclair, he secured a car and, as his own, and called upon Mr. Nixon to accompany him in carrying it out. The fact that the originators of the plan, the Liberal House leader and the Liberal Attorney-General of McQuibban, were not merely ignored, but, as one impolite member put it, "double-crossed," has not proved very popular with those left in the lurch, Mr. Sinclair in the Legislature.

BOWMANVILLE HOUSE LOOTED

Family Trussed and Desperadoes Are Sought

Bowmanville, Feb. 17 — Walking into the home of Albert Sinclair, Albert Stacey, about two miles west of Bowmanville shortly after six o'clock last night, three desperadoes bound Mr. and Mrs. Stacey and their two-year-old child, then proceeded to ransacked the house before the family were able to free themselves from the bonds. The loot obtained by the robbers was unable to give the man anything. Stacey was at that time in Bowmanville's post office, where he had gone to get a set down to his supper when a knock at the door was heard and on opening it he was confronted by a man who pointed a revolver his way in and told him to "stick 'em up."



No guns were produced, but one man held his hand in his pocket as if holding a gun. The other two other men tore up towels and tore the clothes line and bound Mr. and Mrs. Stacey up to the bedroom, tied them up. They also tied up the child, but on the request of Mrs Stacey one of the men got a blanket and covered the child up to keep him warm.

While Mr. and Mrs. Stacey struggled with their bonds the three men ransacked the house, throwing the contents of drawers about and tearing up clothing. Just as they left the house Mrs. Stacey was able to get free.

Chief Constable Sidney Venton and Provincial Constable W. E. Smith drove out to the scene but were unable to get any clues.

Henry Calls Hydro Probe Now to Start a "Fishing Expedition"

Toronto, Feb. 17—Dramatic scenes of debate, sharp answer, heated cross-firing, powerful statement challenge and counter-challenge followed each other and rolled thunder after thunder of applause yesterday afternoon in the Legislature when the Hon. George S. Henry, speaking in answer to the two Opposition leaders in the throne speech debate, laid his followers into confident battle with a rousing, fighting speech on Hydro.

During this first major Hydro battle of the session, Mr. Henry threw out a hint of an early settlement of Ontario's position and rights in the power developments to arise out of the St. Lawrence waterway. Suggesting a tie from Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Henry declared that Ontario's power purchases from Quebec was forced upon Ontario Hydro as a result of the "dirty work" which thwarted Ontario's rights in the St. Lawrence development.

"And," he added, "I hope before the House rises this session I shall be able to submit to you something to show that we have made real progress recently, and that we are getting somewhere with the government now in power at Ottawa." Resounding cheers greeted the statement.

Mr. Henry also warned his opponents that there would be no more than ample opportunity to hear discussed, and the answer given to any statement they had been making "not only here but on the business lines"—and indicated in no unmeasured terms that he would show affiliation or association between critics of Hydro and deliberate opposition to the development which, as there had been all through the life of Hydro as an effort to "get" Adam Beck, so there was now an effort to "get" the commission, he said, accompanying his statement with a message that "they will get through this address I will show you more clearly whom the Opposition are identified with."

Three-Hour Debate

For more than three hours the triangular, forensic duel raged, ending long after the normal hour of adjournment, and being suspended only when the Prime Minister rose, indicating that his speech was but a foretaste of stronger utterances to come, himself moved the adjournment of the debate—which many had hoped to see finished—probably will be delivered on Thursday afternoon, after Attorney-General Price has taken self-possession and unmistakable control of the House and Executive, the Prime Minister certainly intimated that another one opponent or another across the floor Never once did he disdain the gauntlet battle, or challenge to a accepted and answered with a perfect mastery which set his followers time after time in ecstasies of joyful applause which echoed around throughout the building.

ARCTIC BAD MAN HIKES FOR U. S.

Chances of Evading R. C. M. P. Posse 100 to 1 Against

Aklavik, N. W. T., Feb. 17.—The arch bad-man of the Arctic, Albert Johnson, having carried a spectacular one-handed battle with the mounted police into two northland territories, last night was hiking for United States soil. His chances of reaching Alaska on foot before pursuing mounties and trappers catch him, however, are placed at about 100 to one against.

The straight-shooting Rat River hermit was making good progress westward yesterday, his trail from his old stamping ground south of Fort Good Hope over the mountainous divide into the Yukon, about thirty miles south of Pierre House, the trading post. But police, making faster time than Johnson as they are using dog sleds, were gaining on the fugitive.

Cpl. R. (Wop) May, former Canadian war ace, aiding in the search with a band of Indians, has still 175 miles of snowland to travel on foot before Alaska will give him shelter from the Canadian police. They have food and food supplies to Pierre House yesterday for the search party.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 37.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

Tarzan now decided he could better continue his search by travelling alone. Leaving the beasts and Mugambi to await his return, the ape-man came several days later upon a savage in the act of hurling spear at a wounded white man. Instantly Tarzan recognized the intended victim, and his face went white with rage. The man was his prey—the black should not have him!

Surely this man had been aboard the Kincaid. Yet he had not been among those who had accompanied Rokoff at the village where Tarzan had been a prisoner! There could be but one explanation, he thought. This fellow it was who had fled ahead of the Russian with the woman and the child—and the woman also had been aboard the Kincaid. Quick as a flash Tarzan leaped upon the warrior, striking down his spear.

The black, whipping out a knife, turned to do battle with this new enemy, while the Swede cook, lying in the matted grass, witnessed a duel like to that which he had never dreamed to see. First with crude weapons, then with hands and teeth like primordial brutes, the two men fought. Now it seemed upon the rounded Swede that he had seen the white giant betore and his eyes went wide in surprise.

This growling, rending, hair-naked white man was the same English nobleman who had been a prisoner of the Russian! . . . The fight was over. Tarzan had been compelled to kill his antagonist who would not surrender. He leaped to his feet beside his fallen foe, placed one foot upon the prostrate body, and lifted his voice in the hideous challenge of the victorious bull-ape. The Swede shuddered.

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

HOST, MONTGOMERY IN CHARMING LEATHER STORY

Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans play the kind of romance every boy and girl dream of in "Lovers Courageous," which opens its six-day engagement at the Belle today, matinee daily.

Penned by the distinguished British author, Frederick Lonsdale, the story exudes the sweetness of love in the springtime of life. It makes you cry, strangely enough, to see this delightful pair of lovers so exquisitely happy and contented.

Montgomery Well Cast

Never has Montgomery so expertly played a characterization, endowing his role with a tenderness that robs it of none of its humor. The Lonsdale dialogue is smart and glitteringly wholesome. It lacks the ultra sophistication of his "Last of Mrs. Cheyney," for example, but counts a sentimentality we never before associated with the work of this famed writer.

It has been told that the story is partly based upon Lonsdale's own youth. Of that, of course, we have no confirmation. Very likely he, himself would offer a denial. But if the lovely tale is purely fiction, it is far stranger than truth itself. When you behold it on the screen you will want to feel that it is real, for the time being anyway.

Story Has Freshness

Of course, the hero is a struggling British playwright, just as Mr. Lonsdale undoubtedly was in his youth. But whether or not he won away an admirer's daughter from a titled barrister is something else again. At any rate it is an ideal story for the screen and brings a freshness delightful in these days of blatant sex and complexities.

The supporting cast is particularly impressive, offering such favorite players as Roland Young, Beryl Mercer, Frederick Kerr and Reginald Owen.

The short offerings, or spice of the program includes, "Wide Open Spaces," a very funny Masquer Club comedy, with a cast of forty famous stars, "Polar Pals," a novel and different cartoon, and the popular Metrotone Newsreel.

SCARED OUT OF STAGE FRIGHT

Lew Ayres is no longer self-conscious when he is working before the camera. Early in his career, he "took the cure" in a big way.

"In my first picture," Lew recently, "I was so terribly self-conscious that I seemed to be all hands and feet. The picture was 'The Sophomore' and though I had a very small part, most of which found its resting place on the cutting room floor, as the saying is, I shook like a clog dancer every time I stepped in front of the camera. I realized that if I kept this up, I would soon wriggle off the screen altogether—and I had already made up my mind definitely that I wanted to stay in motion pictures.

"My second engagement, several months later, was with Greta Garbo in 'The Kiss,' and before the picture even started, I became decidedly numb every time I thought of the coming scene. And then came the first day of filming. To add to my confusion, I learned that my first scene was to be a tender love passage with the great Garbo herself.

"Over in a corner of the stage, I considered this with a sort of terror for a few minutes, and then all self-consciousness suddenly left me. It had literally been scared out of me. I lost it because I simply had to lose it. I kept a tight rein on myself for every second of the day, trying to keep entirely out of my mind any thought of embarrassment, realizing that it was a case of 'now or never.'

"Well, it worked—and I have never since been self-conscious in front of a motion picture camera."

Ayres arrives today at the Capitol Theatre as the star of his latest Universal picture, "Heaven on Earth," a colorful Mississippi River drama in which Lew plays the role of a "shanty-boater" of the South—"white trash," directed by Russell Mack.

MONGOOSE KILLS SNAKE

One of the best novelties the screen has offered in years is on view at the Capitol today, entitled "Killing the Killer," we see that fearless slayer of reptiles, the mongoose, in a terrific combat with a cobra snake.

Two comedies complete the bill of fare.

A process has been perfected for making bituminous bricks equal in heating value to anthracite.

Price cutting has enabled the Soviet Government to get a foothold in the Abyssinian market for oil and sugar.

"I'm afraid my dancing isn't much he said. "Well, it's too much for me," she replied.

"There is a lot of money to be made by writing." Yes, and some young men make it by writing home.

Before you invest in a going concern make sure you know which way it is going.

BANK ENGLAND LOWERS RATE TO 5 PER CENT

British Pound Having Been Steadied, Higher Rate No Longer Needed

First Change Since September 21st When British Left Standard

HELPING HAND

Lausanne Parley Preliminaries Appear Favorable

London, Feb. 18 (CP) — The Bank of England reduced the banking rate from 6 to 5 per cent., the first movement downward since England went off the gold standard.

It is very unusual for the authorities to lower the rate a minimum by one per cent., but with trade slowly recovering and with the abnormal period from the depreciated pound sterling they decided to give commerce and trade a further fillip and they expected the reduction would assist export industries.

Deposit Rate

There will be a corresponding lowering of bank deposit rates which were expected to release money for industrial purposes which heretofore had been deposited in order to get the high interest rate.

Coming at a time when the fastern situation was considered delicate, events in the market and they considered the reduction more interesting than usual and that the measure indicated the advisers of the bank, who have special facilities for testing world affairs, have confidence in the immediate future.

Surprise to Exchange

The stock exchange had been hoping for a reduction for weeks, but the drop of a full one per cent came as a surprise and a shock of gilt-edge —offerings were marked up immediately.

Other sections followed with a hardening tendency and it was expected that with bank deposits being withdrawn for investment because of the lower interest rate business should show an increase.

The move toward cheaper money also will slow the treasury to borrow at a low rate and will help in also being cleared for a war loan conversion plan which authorities have had under consideration for some time.

Helping Hand

London, Feb. 18 (AP) — The Bank of England extended a helping hand to the commercial community and a financial gesture of confidence in the world today by reducing the bank rate from six to five per cent.

The six percent rate was imposed on September 21, 1931, when British temporarily suspended the gold standard.

The improvement in the international outlook, and the result of preliminary conversations regarding the Lausanne conference were taken to be one of the guiding factors in the bank rate reduction, but the chief reason is cheaper money means that market discounts have fallen to such a low level as to make a six percent rate ineffective.

Retaining the higher rate it was decided, is no longer required as a steadying influence on the pound sterling and large gold shipments from India in recent weeks were also given as a helping factor.

PAUL PAINLEVE FORMS CABINET

This Government Will Succeed That of Laval's Which Resigned

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Feb. 18. — President Paul Doumer today invited Paul Painleve to form a cabinet to succeed that of Pierre Laval, after the President had had an early morning consultation with Andre Tardieu, Minister of War in the Laval administration.

M. Painleve immediately accepted the office and began negotiations. By tonight, possibly, he will be able to report whether he has succeeded or failed.

His task is a difficult one, but M. Painleve has faced difficult tasks before. The son of a Paris baker, Painleve won an international reputation as a mathematician before he was elected Minister of Public Instruction of War, and afterwards Premier, during the dark days of 1917.

ELIMINATE ALL TRAINING BY MILITIA UNITS

Appropriations For All Arms Have Been Cut to Bone

WE'RE DISARMED

Even 4½ Days Alloted Last Year Will Be Discontinued

Ottawa, Feb. 18 (CP) — Militia training this year will be practically eliminated, according to officials of the Department of National Defence here today.

Last year units were given 4½ days; but that will be abandoned for the next twelve months. Drastic reductions in training of the permanent force will also be necessary, since appropriations for all arms have been cut to the bone.

"We didn't have much to disarm in the first place," remarked one high officer here today, "but, now, we're completely disarmed."

ABOLITION OF CONSCRIPTION

German Peace Proposals Include Drastic Measures

Geneva, Feb. 18 (AP)—A set of drastic proposals, calling for disarmament by other nations on the same scale as Germany has had to disarm under the Versailles Treaty was proposed by the World Government Conference today by Count Nadolf Wadeleg, German spokesman.

"Germany is already disarmed," Ambassador Nadolny said, "and German disarmament must be considered indicative of the direction the disarmament of all other members of the League must follow.

The plan he presented provides for, among other things:

1.—Abolishment of gigantic conscription and, where that is impossible, adequate allowance for trained reserves. Fixing the percentage of army officers at the low-est possible level and limitation of the utilization of police forces, gendarmes or similar organizations for military purposes.

2.—Prohibition of the use of big guns, artillery and like fortresses and limitation of the calibre of big guns in fortresses, prohibition of tanks and a ban on the erection of fortresses with the exception of those prohibitive of all forts and fortifications constituting natural barriers.

3.—Prohibition of all air armaments with the destruction of all air forces material in existence or in reserve; cessation of participation by members of military forces in civil aviation; cessation of construction of armored aircraft or aircraft supplies with devices for warlike purposes, and prohibition of all bombing planes and bombing installations and civil aviation.

4.—Prohibition of the poison gases and bacteriological warfare, as well as prevention of its use through prohibition of export and import of warlike armaments, munitions and all other war materials, with exceptions for countries having an armament industry; state regulation of private manufacture of war materials.

5.—Substantial reduction of armaments to be reached and its place taken by funds and by a system of change of information on armament expenditures.

7.—Insurance of the execution of disarmament obligations by a system of supervision applicable equally to all countries.

Painted Armour From Waist Up Guard Japanese Sentries in Exposed Positions in Embattled City of Shanghai—Use Not General

Shanghai, Feb. 18 (AP) — Like shades of King Arthur, a squad of Japanese soldiers appeared in Shanghai streets today clad in suits of light armour.

The armour was painted and completely covered their bodies from the waist up. It was topped by modern trench helmets, however, instead of the ancient top-pieces of the days of Charles V.

Inquiry at Japanese headquarters brought the information that the armour was only for the use of soldiers at exposed sentry posts and that it would not come into general use.

QUAKE CAUSE MAY BE FOUND

Depth of Caribbean Sea is Located Near Centre of Quake

Washington, D.C., Feb. 18 (AP) —A new great depth in the Caribbean Sea, 24,000 feet, has been discovered, giving scientists a possible new clue to origin of earthquakes such as recently rocked Santiago, Cuba.

The new depth, 4,000 fathoms or nearly five miles, greatest ever measured in that region, has been located almost on the spot where the Santiago earthquake centered. The United States navy department announced today the discovery by the submarine S-48, which is cruising in the Caribbean with a corps of scientists studying the cause of quakes and other earth changes.

Bartlett Deep

The new deep sounding was made in the "Bartlett Deep," huge ocean trough to the south of Cuba. The greatest previous sounding there was 3,770 fathoms, or 22,620 feet.

Some scientists believe the Bartlett Deep is a surface indication of a line of fracture, caused by the earth's crust, perhaps caused by shrinking of the crust as the interior cools.

Earthquakes around the Caribbean originate along such a line of "buckling" according to the theory of Dr. F. A. Vening Meinesz, Dutch scientists, who is cruising on board the S-48. He has found similar regions of buckling in the East Indies and the Pacific.

United States Wish Early Completion of Waterway

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 18.—(AP)—President Hoover and Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, were requested today to conclude negotiations for a treaty with Canada that will permit early completion of the St. Lawrence waterway.

The request was made in a resolution introduced by representative Pearsy (Republican, Wis.) and referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives.

In the measure, Pearsy said it appeared that of all Legislative and other proposals which have been submitted to Congress, only those of Agriculture in the Middle and Northwestern States, the development of a waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean would be the most practical and economically sound.

CANNON ROAR DROWNS OUT PEACE TALK

Private Peace Negotiations End Without Agreement

JAPAN "ADVISES"

Not One Japanese Soldier to Be Moved Until Chinese Withdraw

By MORRIS J. HARRIS
Copyright, 1932, By Associated Press

Shanghai, China, Feb. 18 (AP)—The roar of cannon over the shambles of Chapei tonight drowned out talk of peace for Shanghai.

The desperate efforts of neutral observers and the Chinese and the Japanese themselves during the past few days apparently had met with failure this afternoon when the military commands ended private peace negotiations without agreement.

The Chinese said the demands made upon them were impossible and they expected a terrific bombardment naturally calling for their withdrawal. The Japanese were silent.

Only Advice

Tokyo dispatches this afternoon said an ultimatum had not yet been given, but the Chinese had merely been "advised" to withdraw from a 13 1-2 mile zone around Shanghai. These advices made the Japanese suggestion was made verbally by Major General Kenkichi Tadaichi to General Tsai Ting-Kai, the Chinese commander. A formal ultimatum depended upon the Chinese response.

Prominent Chinese civilians said the Japanese Peace Negotiators had demanded withdrawal of Chinese troops to be observed by Japanese aviators "to make sure it was carried out in accordance with Japanese demands". They said the Chinese commander had promised to withdraw, but until then "not one Japanese soldier would be moved."

Chinese Expects Word

The Chinese also said they had not received a formal ultimatum but expected one in the immediate future as a result of to-day's broken negotiations.

The Chinese version of today's Japanese "demands" was they not only withdraw 13 miles but must agree that this neutral zone be permanent. A second provision was that all Chinese fortifications be destroyed in the Woosung area and in the Lion Forest Forts and the Woosung must be permanently demolished. The third provision and last was for permanent Japanese occupation of the Hongkew district of Shanghai which, although outside the international settlement, is now occupied by many Japanese, and is now occupied by the Japanese military forces.

Meanwhile the British British minister to China remained here conferring with the consuls and bring both sides together amicably. Army on the Move

But, while the conferences were going on and the diplomats doing their best, the big Japanese army continued swiftly to move out of its quarters and take up position along the front. The soldiers relieved the blue-jackets who had been guarding the area between Chapei and Woosung since the hostilities began.

Only 47 Seats Out of 145 Reported This Afternoon

FIANNA FAIL LEAD

Much Too Early Yet to State What Ultimate Result Will Be

Dublin, Feb. 18 (Canadian and Associated Press Cable) — Eamonn De Valera's Republican party and his Labor party allies were slightly ahead of President Cosgrave's government supporters as 47 seats out of 145 were reported in the Irish general elections this afternoon.

The standing in mid afternoon was: Fianna Fail (Republican) 23; Labor (Opposition) 2; Cuman Na Gaedhael (Government) 17; Independents (Government) 5.

Republican Lead

Polling was on Tuesday, but the counting of votes did not start until yesterday, and, slowed by the first voting was on the proportional representation basis, will probably not be completed until Saturday.

Early this morning 34 returns out of the 145 had been compiled with the following result:

Fianna Fail (Republican) . . 18
Cuman Na Gaedhal (Govt.) 12
Independents 4
Labor (Opposition) 2

It was much too early, however, to indicate that Republicans would enjoy their first victory under the New Irish Constitution. The results were undoubtedly cheering to the Republicans, who so far have polled 27,000 votes more than their opponents. Four of the Government members, however, were returned without opposition.

President William Cosgrave, in power for nine years although without a clear majority in the Dail, was re-elected in Cork with his majority increased by a thousand votes. General Mulcahy, minister of local government; Ernest Blythe, minister of finance; and Desmond Fitzgerald, minister of defence, were among the ministers elected in the early results.

De Valera Defeated

Although De Valera was running ahead near the one-third stage De Valera was the only leader registered the heavy votes his followers had predicted. Republicans and some commentators thought that even if he should win it would be by so small a margin as to create a Stalemate in the Dail, possibly necessitating a new election.

The Fianna Fail was strong along the border but because of the slow count it appeared that all the returns might not be in by the end of the week, and then the issue may be left to the postponed voting in Donegal.

DUBLIN, Feb. 18. — (Canadian and Associated Press Cable) — Returns from 58 out of 145 seats in the Irish Sweepstakes at 6 p.m., gave the Republicans with Labor a lead of six over the Government forces.

The standing was:

Republican	29
Labor (Opposition)	3
Government	18
Independent (Government)	8

Motorist Searches in Vain For Required Information

Upper Bridge last evening at six o'clock.

A large sedan with Quebec markers pulled to the curb. A near-white dove rolled down, a derby hat protruded—

"Hey—where's Charles Street?".

A pedestrian pained in his stride. "Charles Street?, Search me—I'm a stranger here."

The derby hat swung in a slow semicircle from North to South—inquired into how more in vain. "I'd like to find Charles Street."

"Charles Street?"

"Charles Street!"

"Charles Street. Let me see . . . I think it's over the bridge, that way." He swept to the west with circling arm.

"Just a minute—I'll ask this man the way. He knows—I know where Charles Street is." That man shrugged a nigger shrug. "Charles Street? Charles Street should be up on the West Hill some place. I think it's up near Dundas Street."

"Do you follow live here in this town? Where's a policeman? Where's the nearest hotel?" He asked five guys since I came into this town; where Charles Street is. No one knows. Say, I'll make a phone . . . I'll call 'information.' I wonder if she'll know . . ."

The matter will be discussed at a later date.

Hotel Service Pipe Springs Leak

Under cover of an early morning dawn, the light artillery of the waterworks department deployed in open formation this morning along Front Street, and after a sharp and desultory engagement captured an insidious fire pontifex near the Belvidere Hotel.

Immediately in front of that hotel a gentle murmur of running water came to the ears of the engineers the other day. More than that, however, turned on did not respond with the usual flow of H2O and the cry of fire was on. All of the basement became damp. Somewhere something was amiss.

An emergency call was sent in to the general commanding. With his little squadron, he hied, checked, double-checked and counter-checked the territory surrounding the location of the alleged trouble. Something was wrong; a conference was held and field orders were drawn up. A call to arms was sounded and the men responded nobly.

A hole was drilled in the pavement. Out of that hole gushed and bubbled a geyser, and meandered in devious fashion to a nearby sewer. Action followed on events moved rapidly and satisfactorily, and an attack on the earth works immediately followed.

Before the day was done good progress had been made with the excavation, and the men were rapidly digging closer to the location of the water main to shut the supply valve off to the hotel service. It had sprung a leak.

The genial Emmamanding officer stated this morning that he expected to have the boys out of the trenches soon.

LEPROSY IS TYPE OF SIN

Rev. Mr. Gelatt of Oshawa Speaks to Regular Baptist Body

The services at the Regular Baptist Church are being well attended. Rev. Mr. Gelatt, of Oshawa, Ont., from Oshawa, who is preaching every night in the evenings on the subject last night, "Naaman the Leper." In the Bible Leprosy is a type of sin, said Mr. Gelatt, being loathsome, foul, blight. Naaman's life was vividly compared with the average, natural man's life of today, who is born and raised, under love, in every human heart is the germ of sin in the flesh. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

The audience was not left in doubt as to how ever-cure of the blood of Jesus Christ, as man's only remedy for this natural-born disease of the entire human race. The gospel of Jesus Christ was recommended to the sinner and sinned-sick and poor alike, in the text Mr. Gelatt quoted from Isaiah 1:18 "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life thru Jesus Christ our Lord."

The audience was deeply touched by the gospel in its purest form message.

During the service Mr. Gelatt sang a solo. He will also sing again tonight.

More people are attending the services every night and they are looking forward to the services tonight with the subject of "A Blind Man Healed." Mr. Gelatt will also tomorrow night when a male quartette from St. Gelatt's Church in Oshawa will sing.

OLD BRIDGE HAS TO PASS

Waterloo Bridge Will Be Replaced By New Structure

London, Feb. 17—Old Waterloo Bridge, still one of the finest structures of its kind in Europe, is doomed to demolition.

The London County Council has voted to demolish the bridge and erect a new one nearby. The decision marked the end of seven years of controversy, complicated by the fact that expert opinion was divided even on the feasibility of all proposals.

For more than a century Waterloo Bridge has gracefully spanned the Thames. But it is apparent even to casual observers that it is very slowly sinking. It is the oldest bridge now standing within London, and is the work of John Rennie, the famous stone structure of nine arches, carrying a level roadway 42 feet wide. It was completed in 1817, and its capital cost was £938 pounds, more than that of any other important London bridge.

Sir Gilbert Scott, architect of the great Roman cathedral in Liverpool, has been asked to design a new bridge to carry six lines of vehicular traffic, and a cost of £1,000 pounds. The ministry of transport will pay the county council to the extent of contributing 60 per cent of the cost.

"A Jagged Heart for Jimmy"

By Marth Eshel White

Mary Lou read the verse on the Valentine over again. She still felt a little breathless. It was a daring thing to do; to send such a red heart of a Valentine to a boy like Jimmy who had been very busy adoring Marie, her old sister, that he'd scarcely noticed her existence to Mary Lou. But Jimmy wouldn't know and well, that heart was just made for Jimmy! She slipped it into the large red envelope and then, on an impulse, tore the heart's jagged fashion. Half of a heart for Valentine would keep Jimmy guessing, maybe.

Marie came in just as Mary Lou slipped her half inside the slit pocket of her brown wool dress.

"Don't tell me," Marie was scornful, "that you're still childish enough to play with paper Valentines."

Mary Lou blushed, a childish habit of hers she hated. Marie always managed, somehow, to make Mary Lou feel as if she were fifteen instead of eighteen. "I think old-fashioned Valentines are pretty," she said.

"Well, I'm here to tell you you don't. You darn near insult me that way since I wore my hair in plaits. When they speak in terms of they're telling me the things I want to hear."

Mary Lou thought briefly over last Valentine's Day. She remembered the flowers and candy Jimmy had brushed carelessly aside; the compacts and bracelets which had displeased. There had even been a thin wrist watch with blue sapphires from Jimmy that had raved quite a lot to Jimmy and he had said he was glad he found something which pleased her.

"Wonder what Jimmy'll bring tomorrow?" Marie broke the head of a long stemmed rose. "I was careful enough to show him the dinner ring on display at the jewelers. If he used his head—and he most likely didn't—he went back and got it."

Mary Lou winced. She hated Marie when she talked that way about Jimmy. And Marie did often than not. Jimmy's money pleased her; the expensive gifts belonged to Jimmy's father pleased her; the Colonial home Jimmy's mother pleased her—but Jimmy! It didn't seem to Mary Lou that Jimmy did certain things that pleased Marie; that is, unless he was bringing them to presents.

It wasn't rings and wrist watches that Mary Lou wanted from Jimmy. The way his eyes lit up when he laughed; the slow smile which finally broke into a little boy's grin after he'd been quite serious; the smooth and which she thought it must be heaven to touch; those were the things about Jimmy that made all of the rest of the boys seem dull and stupid.

Mary Lou woke next morning with a funny ache in her heart. She pushed back the pink silk spread and remembered that it was Valentine's Day. Perhaps the Postman would be leaving her half heart for Jimmy; the half heart which told Jimmy she loved him, even-if he never guessed who she was.

She flipped into a straight blue jersey dress with an accompanying design of red, brushed her black hair behind her ears in a way that made her look even younger than her eighteen years, and flecked a bit of powder on her nose. She didn't want to see the package Marie would unfold. Marie would be wearing her pink satin pajamas and her pale gold robe would have an uncombed look about them. She'd make a big crack about last night and ask Mary Lou where were the returns on the red paper heart. She wouldn't be any returns; there weren't any boys to send her Valentines. There had never been any boys for Mary Lou except Jimmy, and Jimmy ever since he'd moved to town, had belonged to Marie.

Marie's breezy voice floated in an angry line and she scarcely answered Mary Lou's good morning. There were a heap of half opened boxes of candy on the table, some roses and carnations bunched together carelessly in a large vase and a few smaller packages.

"What's the matter? Hasn't Jimmy Valentine been good to you?"

"Don't try to be funny; it's not becoming," Marie snapped, "That lighthead Jimmy didn't send a thing."

Mary Lou's heart gave a ridiculously glad little leap.

Perhaps Jimmy..wasn't "roped in" after all, but she only said: "Maybe it'll come later."

"Later," Marie scoffed "It's 10.30 now and among Jimmy's various, her voice became increasingly sarcastic, "is his flair for exaggeration. Oh, well, if I can get a ring out of him one way, I can another."

The telephone rang. It was Jimmy, asking to come over, telling Marie that he had something for her, something important.

"Well, perhaps he isn't such a dumbell after all. Stick around, Baby, and I'll show you something about technique."

Mary Lou didn't want to stick around and yet she couldn't tear herself away. She couldn't bear to have Marie hurt Jimmy; tighten his mouth with pain, and bring those funny little worried crinkles to his eyes. And if Jimmy didn't have that dinner ring; well—no telling what Marie would do!

Marie came down the hall herself, a practically unheard of thing, and opened Jimmy into the living room. Mary Lou pretended to be reading—anything to tell the tremble in her heart.

"Hello, Mary Lou."

"Hello, yourself," she answered and started out. She couldn't stand seeing the light in his eyes when Marie thanked him for the ring.

"Don't go," Marie said quietly. "Jimmy has something for me."

A flush crept under the even tan of Jimmy's cheeks and Mary Lou could feel hers blushing furiously.

"Well" he began.

"Don't mind Lou," Marie hurried him.

Jimmy reached into his pocket and found a jagged heart. Carefully he fitted the other half—the half—to the one Mary Lou had slipped into the large red envelope.

"I didn't know," he murmured tenderly, "that you were like that, Marie; that—that Valentines counted." He handed his half to her. "For you," he said.

Marie took the heart, tore it into bits. "Jimmy! Her eyes blazed and her mouth had become an angry line, "are you crazy? You're mighty right I'm not like this. That's not for your going sentimental on me." Her hands clinched and she laughed a hard, bitter laugh. "You said it was important, she flung at him. "Why, it's the silly kind of thing that you would do.

Mary Lou's eyes filled with tears. Jimmy looked so helpless standing there, staring at her, his face white with pain.

"Did you, Mary Lou, did you send it?"

She nodded her head "I'm sorry," she murmured, "I never dreamed you'd think—"

"Sorry!" Jimmy's voice sounded glad. "Sorry," he repeated incredulously. He reached into his pocket and found the ring.

Marie was still standing a trifle bewildered, by the table. "Perhaps Jimmy said to her, "you think this is important. It's the one you asked for."

Marie smothered a little exclamation of joy, but Jimmy was still looking at Mary Lou. And turning to Marie, he politely requested: "Would you mind leaving us alone for a bit? I think," Jimmy said slowly, "I've discovered something important, too."

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding protruding piles are caused by rectal irritation. Stop blood in the affected parts. The parts become weak, flabby, allow piles to develop. An internal remedy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, HEM-ROID succeeds because it removes congestion, restores circulation, heals and strengthens the diseased parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of quickly relieving even piles of long standing that J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.

Umbrella Sales Mounting Mild Winter is to Blame

If Young Folk Don't Want Umbrellas, They Must Buy Goloshes

CECIL HART

Here is the man who knows hockey and how to produce teams of championship calibre. Cecil Hart coach of the Canadiens, has trained his stars so well that his team has been hovering round the top rung of the league ladder for the past six seasons.

It may possibly pass unnoticed, mingled here with the rest of the news despatches of events all over the world; of the great war in China, of floods, earthquakes, murders and bank holidays, this little story, but even while those things are occurring in nearby and far away countries, something else of local interest has been happening right here in this city for the past few weeks. Pants at last have been forgotten and now lie exposed to the public gaze.

Umbrellas. More umbrellas have been sold this winter than have been sold any other season on record. If you have held your breath with interest this long, take another drink and continue:.....and they expect to sell still more before the winter is over.

"Now, about these umbrellas" a merchant was asked. "Just what do you told me that you've sold a lot of them, but who for? Women, I suppose readers, you know....they expect all these facts.

"Well, I know what you are getting around to. I know you are wondering if the sales are due to them in a great number as they used to in the days of the "gay nineties" when they don't. The umbrella in those days was a fad. It was the invention of mechanism. It was guaranteed to shed water, a few odd snow fall barrages and also the occasional brick bat. Birds sit in trees too, you know," and the merchant knowingly.

"In those days they were always the same color—black. If you or I had ever happened to walk down Front street fifteen years ago with one of those kind of umbrellas over our heads, business would, likely suspend. Clerks and others in the stores on the street would rush out and line up in rows ready to cheer as we walk and wait for the man to yell: "Pick up your horse! Here comes!" and then be disappointed when the rest of the circus didn't show up. It was a bit of a bit disdainfully, I looked at a stack of umbrellas in the display. silk-covered fairy wands that were nothing—anything to tell the difference.....," They were all colors. A Pharaoh's tomb, artist's nightmare, all the colors in the spectrum, and a few more off the painter's palette, mixed into a conglomeration of color and daubed on cloth. Even the cloth was made into a covering for a skinny-ribbed, fragile and delicate fairy wand.

As an old fashioned 'numbershoot' they ranked about as high as a pump does to the Prince Albert Arctic III, or a lumber wagon to a kids' soapbox car. What a gust of wind would do to one of those bebtes, we thought, as we looked contemplatively at them with hands shading the eyes against the dazzle.

And then the umbrella. Pure sculpture that would have delighted the heart of a Michael Angelo. Radiator caps on motor cars are considered as mechanisms, we will admit. They, heretofore could have stood pretty well up in the line when it came to a competition of Art. Beauty, modernistic design and sculptural lines are the cause of delight and rapture to enthrall heart of any who see that kind of thing, but like your new electric percolator, their beauty lies only in its gleaming—a masterpiece of creativ, art. A delight to the eye, a thrill and joy to the owner. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever" was probably the motto of the unknown artist. And you had your choice of any natural, mural, or abstract scene you wished. They ran all the way from a lion, rampant of the African veldt, rocks, to just a large round ball with zig zag flashes of lightning streaming across it.

Here was a delicately poised heron or a flamingo perhaps it was—with wings ready to sweep it off and fly away with its long graceful legs together, its bill blended perfectly, in a stream line with the shaft of the umbrella—its feet you held gracefully in the hand that wasn't carrying the parcels, to form a perfect handle.

Here again was a modernistic expression of a serpent in the Garden of Eden—circled around a tree,—and is that Eve? Upon our world-that's how you would look at the apple, which she is about- to nibble —and consequently gum up the whole of creation. The whole scene is there before your eyes, carved as clean as a cameo. You also hold Eve by the two feet for the handle. If it is natural very large and decent is going to get very wet because he or she is stretched out in the whole length almost, along the shaft too. Then here on another one we find a horse. Yes, horse indeed. You almost expect him to prance off away out of your hand as you reach for it when a sudden shower starts up while you are at the office. Well, just imagine you have it along. He stands there with both fore legs poised, with a wild looking mane falling down over wilder looking eyes with a wild expression all about him.

Then beside him sits another umbrella with a little bird perching down from a carved limb. Here you get a break. All up and down the zoological specimens have been held by the hind legs, but the little bird invites you to grasp it by the bill for a handle.

"What are all those handles made out of anyhow?" we asked, and peered closer.

"Well, after you boil all the nitro cellulose, napthalene and other assorted chemical stuff down, the name fellow, by the way, had been better than a one pound paper hanger for twenty seconds, flat. But we digress.

"Do you mean to say that people carry those bomb shells around with them—and smoke at the same time?—Why.....

"Not as bad as all that. They will burn—if you stick them in the fire, but they have a non-inflammable composition sprayed over them for just that protection. Of course the little tips are there on the ends of the ribs are the pure stuff—but them, umbrellas are designed to ward off rain, and are not to protect people from the sparks of a forest fire."

"Yes, but I know a young man once who jumped off the top of a barn when he was a boy, and rolled on the umbrella he stole to act as a parachute." He broke his leg, by the way. So sometimes you never know where an umbrella will end up."

"What's right," agreed the man who was selling them. "I know a bootlegger once who carried a good many quarts to his customers in a folded umbrella under his arm. However that was in the good old days when a man walked into a cafe, planked a half dollar down and asked in plain language for a drink—not a cocktail."

"Those fellows could be depended on to give a good mixture of seven ten years, at the least, behind the bar—gray mare, plowing along through the snow drifts, and facing a forty mile gale snowstorm, and the old driver has hold up in front of you. Remember?"

"Yes, yes."

"But now", he went on, "they are getting female and kind flimsy and gaudier all the time. They're effeminate—softer, I mean."

"Do you know we came to one or two umbrellas this year than last. You did? Now there's another question we almost forgot: Do you sell them to the young folks, mostly, or the older ones?"

"No, married women and elderly men are our best customers. The young fellows go around barebeaded even in the rain. The young girls wear slickers with wide cracks written all over the backs of them and don't care a hoot if they do getting effeminate—softer, I mean."

"I can tell you something else we've got a lot of them right now. Goloshes. Umbrellas and goloshes go together, but while the young folks will not carry umbrellas they do wear goloshes—

"Can you get them either way?"

"Yes. If they don't buy one, they'll buy the other."

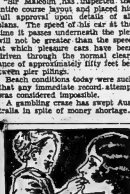
CRITICISM OF PRESS NOT FAIR

Sir Malcolm Campbell Quite Satisfied With Course Laid Out

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 17 —A "misunderstanding" in Natural by Automobile Association officials for British press criticism of ocean course over which Sir Malcolm Campbell is to make his attempt to break automobile speed records here shortly.

British publications said lengthening of the speedway past a pier so Campbell could start under it was a hazard.

That statement, issued by L. Warren Baker, and T. E. (Pop) Meyers, officials in charge of the trials, said the pier could contribute no hazard with Sir Malcolm attempted to better his own mark of 345 miles an hour.



"The additional danger to the driver of the car, caused really by the increased course mileage, is in itself negligible, the margin of safety being necessarily great for the simple fact that an increased beach is paramount in breaking the present record," the statement said.

"The course has been lengthened from nine to eleven miles to give the famous Britton a chance for a better flying start in his runs.

"Sir Malcolm has inspected the entire course layout and placed his full approval upon details of all plans. The speed of this car at the time it passes underneath the pier will not be greater than the speed at which pleasure cars have been driven through the normal acceptance of approximately fifty feet between pier pilings.

"Beach conditions today were such that any immediate record attempt was considered impossible.

A gambling craze has swept Australia in spite of money shortage.

And Now He's His Mother's Pride and Joy

"SHETLL never raise him!" whispered the gossips behind their hands—and indeed it looked like it for Baby Jim was a day-nin and didn't thrive on his bottle.

Then his Mother cried Eagle Brand, and to everyone's astonishment Baby Jim ceased fretting and began to gain weight fast. Grandfather now lays claim to his wonderful constitution—but his mother smiles quietly and remembers Eagle Brand.

Eagle Brand has reared countless thousands of infants to maturity over a period of 70 years. Experience has proved that it is reliable, safe and an entirely satisfactory food where the mother is unable to nurse her own baby. We live for Baby Welfare and Record Book.

HUMAN SYMPATHY

While a mother was hearing the heaviest loss which can befall her, the death of a son, the victim of drowning, anywhere from three to five hundred men who joined in the search at one time and many times to recover the body from the waters of the swollen Cold Creek, during that period the mobility of humanity, showing that one tie binds all men and women together in a spirit of brotherhood. From Friday noon until Tuesday noon men and many gave up every thought of other things and bent all their energy to the search for the body. The longer the time which passed, the greater the likelihood that the body would ultimately reach the Trent River and thence the Bay of Quinte. The loneliness of the suspense which was weighing upon the mother from this fear, Christian charity impelled the men to the unselfish task of finding the body before it was swept out into the river. Had the search not been successful plans were to have been made to block the mouth of the stream in such a way as to prevent the body passing. As it was the waters of the Cold Creek had been diverted for a number of times to aid in the search. On the last night of the search scores of men continued the search. Three boats were fastened together and hearing lights passed up and down the stream in the concerted plan to find the body.

This dire event which has visited off a young member of Stockdale family which lost the father a few years ago demonstrates in the most forceful manner that under normal conditions this heartfelt sympathy is generally not revealed but it is lying latent, until such time as the tragedy of the neighborliness of people and of the fact that in the last analysis of values, interest in another's sorrows is the only human motive. It is safe to say that in as much as make life bearable at times and through her great sorrow the mother knows that hundreds of men and women are thinking of as human sympathy can go. They know that in as far as is possible they succeeded their effort and contributed in the saving to the mother and so in a measure removed the suspense which had been added to the bereavement.

Human sympathy which found expression in action is the silver lining of a very dark cloud, but the cloud would have been infinitely more dark and oppressive had the brotherhood of the people not been manifest. The women of the neighborhood while their menfolk were in the water of the creek, did everything to help the distressed head of the home.

Those who know Mrs. Anderson intimately can appreciate how deep is her gratitude to those hundreds of searchers who day and night gave of their time, their unselfishness and their part will help her to bear the bitterness of the event.

DR. KENNEY'S SLIDES

Slides have been prepared for use in school class rooms of Canada for illustration of Canadian history by the Department of Public Archives. Dr. James F. Kenney, director of Historical Research, has prepared these slides of many documents, museum objects and pictures now in the Archives Building at Ottawa. The slides constitute a very well-balanced survey of the history of Canada. They are divided into five sections: (1) Early discovery and exploration to 1600 A.D.; (2) Eastern Canada, 1601 to 1760; (3) Canada, 1760 to 1867; (4) The North and West, 1601 to 1867; (5) The Dominion of Canada since 1867. The sets of slides may be borrowed for short periods of time by responsible teachers and lecturers in any part of the country.

Dr. Kenney is a Belleville boy, a graduate of the Belleville High School, who entered Toronto University in 1903 with a scholarship and studied in the Department of History with classical option. He graduated from University in 1907 with high honors and has for years been associated with the Department of Archives for which his training in history prepared him. Dr. Kenney visits Belleville frequently, one of his recent visits being in connection with the marking of Carrying Place as a historical spot.

A GREAT ACTRESS

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, one of the most outstanding figures on the stage, with over sixty years of service in what many call the greatest of the arts, the woman who created one of her finest creations in the plays of Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian playwright, is dead. She was practically born to the stage and to her was an infant prodigy in the drama, her father and mother being players.

Her career was the triumph of art and intelligence and like Sir Henry Irving she was great in spite of and perhaps because of her limitations. One critic says her voice was not what would have been expected in a star, but adds that she knew the way to tears and to terror—that is, she was supremely the mistress of the arts of appeal from the footlights.

Her place is among the really great artists of the stage of all time.

WHEN YOU CAME IN

By Aline Michaelis

When you came in my life's dim room
It brightened like a place of gloom
When many candles leap to flame.
All else unchanged, yet naught the same!

Each corner once so dull, so dark,
Reflected then the living spark;
I saw the glean, the glow of gold
Like daisy fields when buds unfold.

My life's dim room where shade had been Throbbed with joy raised with bloom, when you came in!

RAIN AND MORE RAIN, snow, sleet and more rain—1932 has thus far made a record for dampness. Not so long ago the land was thirsty for rain, wells were empty and crops withering, giving agriculturists cause for apprehension besides much extra work, for water is very essential on the farm for many purposes. The F.W.I. artist has caught the spirit of the times in the drawing given above of the predominating weather in the early days of 1932. The year is young yet, only a baby in fact, but a very wet baby, and everybody will be happier when the weather really settles down to a more staple and seasonable variety. Perhaps by the time this sees print there may be a start made on a real staple brand of weather which will suit most everybody. Here's hoping.

"YOUR NEIGHBOR BAPTISTE," was the subject of an interesting address given before Belleville Rotary Club on Monday by Charles Holmes, B.A., of Toronto, who has lived many years in Quebec and made a close study of the French Canadian. Many misconceptions of the French Canadian character and mentality were cleared up by the speaker's facts and figures, and his address was a most interesting and instructive one. One of the most popular misconceptions about French Canada according to Mr. Holmes, is the supposition that the French language as spoken in Quebec is inferior to what is called Parisian French. The language as spoken in Quebec is the language of the time of Louis XIV, and while it has evolved considerably since then, the so-called Parisian French has evolved more and deteriorated. It is also an interesting fact that forty-one per cent of the French Canadian population of Quebec speak English, while comparatively few of the English speaking residents of Canada speak French. There is no doubt of the loyalty of the French Canadians to British institutions, they showed that plainly in resisting the blandishments of the Americans to become a part of that country and fought shoulder to shoulder with Canadians to prevent absorption with the United States.

GROUCHINESS IS SURE SIGN OF ILLNESS

A grouchy person is never a welcome one. For health and happiness. If you're a shut-in, it is wrong, either in the body or the mind, dissatisfaction, uneasiness, and irritability are the rule.

In these isolated instances, however, it's some mental relief that usually is to blame, worry and its accompanying confusion often being the basis of the story.

It is a well-known fact that individuals who suffer with gout, rheumatism, and like diseases are always more or less grouchy. The acid poisoning of the system undeniably affects the disposition and being. Such persons see everything in somber colors. They are full of forebodings. They experience a sense of impending danger. Their attitude is one of rebellion toward their own state of feeling.

From the purely psychological point of view, however, chronic grouchiness is a regression, similar to signifies protest, not so much against what the grouchy person suffers but rather against what is going on inside their minds, in the deepest emotional and mental and emotional processes.

Therefore you find yourself developing a grouchy habit seek for its cause and correct it.

Back in the days when they had more time for such foolishness every apprentice at almost any trade that can be mentioned offhand could think up in a year of Sundays, Printing shops of any newspaper, job or publishing concern, were no exception.

In machine shops we will admit that there were numerous opportunities for a little mischief for the neophyte could be taught all the mysteries of gears and cutting tool's, lathe arrons and beds, and the thousand and one things that go to make up a machine shop, there were many fool's errands to run from one end of the shop to the other, searching for left-hand monkey wrenches, white lamp black and other articles that never existed. But the one occupation of newspapers is where the apprentice received a thorough going over by all who had worked there before him. If he survived the cub reporter stage the tricks were played on him to the extent almost of doing him bodily injury, but if he survived even a bit of either he was ripe for anything, except between jobs of carting "mats" around, cleaning the linotypes and hauling copy paper to the melting pot.

One of these cute little tricks was that of looking for "type lice." In the beginning he was always sent, and at every opportunity, thereafter. Perhaps the more classes of type were generally to be found infested with a certain type of lice that lived only on the metal in the type and nowhere else. The apprentice was supposed to so like that only a most minute examination of the type would reveal it to the searching eye. Sometimes the cub reporter, ever anxious to do his duty, would closely down into the cracks of the loose type which lay on the tray in the type columns. Nervous to this a second sponge of water had been wrung out of the type, and when the victim bent closer to observe the alleged creature he was moving on the run and the sponge would squirt the black, inky water high into the air or against the face of the man leaning over it. This was always good for a laugh and the whole composing room would be demoralized for periods of time hanging up to half an hour while all hands doubled up in uncontrolled merriment. If the victim did not take it all right he was treated to the same anyhow.

However he would have his chance later when the victim of the second stein be completed by the addition of some one else new in the shop.

Unemployment Insurance May Be Adopted in Canada

B. K. Sandwell Addresses Women's Club on Economics

INSURANCE VALUE

While no system of unemployment insurance could have possibly done much to relieve the distress now all out of the present acute situation, Mr. B. K. Sandwell, B.A., economist and publicist, in his address on "Unemployment Insurance", delivered at the Women's Canadian Club meeting in John St. Church last night, said that the time was coming when, after conditions became a little better, Canada would see the value of insurance against unemployment and would develop a system for its administration.

Mr. Sandwell was introduced by Mrs. Murphy, the president of the club, who said that this was the third time in which the club had been honored by having Mr. Sandwell as lecturer.

Unemployment Insurance.

In a clear, concise and interesting manner, Mr. Sandwell explained the system of unemployment insurance as it was now in operation before it became so confused with the dole, and he was careful to explain and separate the two ideas. This system was based on three things. In the case of unemployment insurance the working man insures himself against the risk he undergoes of finding himself out of a job and being unable to find another. From a fund to which he himself has contributed while working he will receive a living allowance until he finds another employment.

Objections.

"It is said, in objecting to unemployment insurance," said Mr. Sandwell, "that in thus alleviating or eliminating certain evils, the national life would be weakened. My feeling is this. If we have reached the point where industry alone can no longer contemplate with equanimity, the starving to death, being kept alive on charity, then it is surely admitted that the time for fear of the loss of employment, and our moral urge is to do something to relieve such suffering, then I don't think we have to worry about the future break-down of the Anglo Saxon race."

The risk of unemployment is a development of the nineteenth century, and it has come to the head in the twentieth century. Before that local handicrafts and agricultural ventures kept all employed. With modern industrialism organizations came the risk of unemployment. It is a new risk. Provision for it is new.

In England.

Unemployment insurance in England "almost stands as an actuarily sound principle of collecting enough money from industry to provide to pay the risk. Its income was from three sources, the employer, the fund contributed each by the employer, the worker and the government. The worker must have worked two thousand must have worked twenty weeks before he could claim, and then he could receive benefits, he would get one pound a week for fifteen weeks he had worked and contributed, and ten pounds were limited to twenty-six in one year.

In extreme cases the minister of labor could extend the benefits for six months. In 1925, transitional benefits were granted, transitional benefits became more widespread than had been provided for, and bonus there was placed through transitional benefits a greater burden on the fund without any attempt to raise additional money for it. Now, the worker could receive transitional benefits if he had worked, not twenty-four weeks in two years, but eight weeks and the twenty-six weeks limit was abolished, with the provision only that the applicant must be genuinely attempting work and unable to obtain it.

Frost on Antibiotics.

This provision could be easily abused since the onus of proving a man had not been seeking work fell on the authorities. The penalty incurred was that the worker would be debarred from receiving benefits for six weeks. Finally the phrase, "genuinely seeking work" was added in 1930, and this was one of the factors that helped to bring it to an end the otherwise admirable administration of Ramsay MacDonald.

German System.

In contrasting the system which he was about to be a scientific undertaking but through the segregation of collected money in one bank, with the German system, Mr. Sandwell showed many points where the latter has shown itself to be far better. In Germany the dole and the unemployment insurance funds are kept strictly separate. Then, the scale of premiums recognizes the superiority of certain types of work and workers but the benefits are so adjusted that the poor do not have to bear too heavily a burden.

The limit of time for receiving benefits is fairly adjusted to it. Willingness to work is essential and severe penalties for refusing are imposed. Those who are physically unable to work receive a health insurance scheme. Provision is made for seasonal trades, and the contributions to the fund is borne equally by the worker and his employer. The state does not bear the cost of administration. These essential differences with the German and English systems should be thoroughly studied by Canada, if she is to establish a system with unemployment insurance when the economic situation has adjusted itself. Its administration should be through the federal government.

Insurance Benefits.

In receiving the benefits of unemployment insurance, Mr. Sandwell concluded, "the worker should feel no disinclination to do so himself. He has helped to collect the fund, it is his right to receive it if the need arises to him. No one has the right to look on legislative acts of a beneficial nature nor his way of spending his money. The dole is quite a separate thing, and in the administration of its charities certain supervision may be exercised. If we in Canada can keep these two things entirely separate from each other, the one and the claim of the other, then we may in two or three years have some social legislation which I think will improve the attitude of mind and the economic life of the Canadian worker."

The appreciation of the club was voiced by Mrs. Logie and after his address there was a short question period during which Mr. Sandwell when his hearers had the opportunity of meeting and chatting with the lecturer.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop went down to his office Saturday morning and me and the boys ate eating breakfast, me saying like me, do you know tomorrow is Valentine Day? Why don you get pop a big fancy valentine and put it next to his plate? I said. Pop he says I'll be a mans hart is through his stummick and I feer pop he'd rather it received exception to that particuler rule, ma said. I started out to be a author and nations would effect him much more deeply, she said.

Well G, ma, why dont you have it for him, thats a swell idear, I said, and she said, Well, why not, it would relieve me from the grate mens problem for one day anyway. I'll telefone the butcher.

And when I came home from school I looked in the ice box and there was 2 pieces of liver in there, and I took a kitchin nife and cut each one in the shape of a hart and threw away the cut off hunks, and then I had another idear and I looked pop up at his office, saying, Hay pop, tomorrow is Valentine Day, you know, and pop he gets home a big box of candy?

Thats a very good suggestion, even though it may not be intirely exactly true, he said.

Meening me and candy, and when he came home he had a big box of candy, double the size of a kitchin hart, ma saying, O William how kind of thort of you, now thats what I call reel sweet, and Ive remembered to get a extra big roast for what we have for supper.

I smil li e wide, and both my mothers and p r emotions are deeply touched, p r said. And we started to eat our supper, and I put liver in the liver and when ma saw the liver she said, O my, and the others she started to say something and then stopped. Well sa I, and each piece is a perfect little hart. This calls for a extra big helpful.

And ha stood up and started to make it, saying, Ladies and gentlemen I am glad to be effected by the delicate sentiment spred before me, and I am glad to say that the sweet whiff is laden with sweet romance and tender memories of I the dinner.

And he gave me a kiss and took more helpings of liver and onions and then went any let, and after supper he took me fo the theater.

CHANCES SLIM IN CAGE LOOP

R. M. C. Score Unexpected; ed Win Over Local Quintette

Royal Military College moved out the local basketball quintet by a 32-23 score at R.M.C. gym. The game was featured by close checking and fiercely contested. Queens handed out many penalties, and had the biggest share taken advantage of their free-throw chances, by converting seven of the same. With the loss of this game, practically all hope of winning or tieing the league is gone, as Queens must beat R.M.C. on the latter's floor next week while the local team must take the Kingston Y team in's camp next week to tie up the league. If this happens, two games will be played between R.M.C. and the Y's Men with points to count.

Kime for the R.M.C. opened the scoring with a beautiful long shot, but the locals came right back, and nice basketa by Davison and Weir put Belleville in the lead, 9-1. The Cadets opened up with a long-shooting attack, which netted them several field-goals and put them in the lead. Just before the end of the first period, Faulkner and Jeffries sank baskets, which cut into the R.M.C. lead, leaving the score 18-16 at the half-way mark.

Fine checking by White and Snell on the Belleville defence in the first few minutes of the final period held the Cadets scoreless, and Faulkner and Weir went on a scoring rampage and put the locals, which had R.M.C. obtained one free throw, leaving the score 26-20, after seven minutes of play. Belleville looked much the better team at this time, and it appeared that they would run away with the game, but following a time-out period, R.M.C. came back strong, and Sterne and Oaks sank long shots to even the score.

Loose Checking

Loose checking by the Y's Men gave the Kingston team several openings, which they were not slow to take, and they finished the game of eight points after fourteen minutes of play, and three looker very good, as the R.M.C. team tried hard into their famous five-man defensive formation, and found it impossible to advance the ball into their territory. In the final whistle blow, the Y's Men were tying desperately in every way.

For Belleville, Vern Weir played a good game, while Faulkner played brilliantly at times. Davison played a steady game, and the defensive work of Snell and White helped greatly in keeping the score down. For the Cadets, Kime forward, Oaks at centre, and Ward on the guard positions played effective, and their back-checking hindered close-in work greatly.

Lineups:

Belleville — centre, Faulkner, 8; forwards, Weir, 6, Davison, 2; guards, Snell; White, 1; subs, Cashner, Ridley, Reid, 2, Wickerson.

R.M.C. — centre, Oaks, 8; forwards, Sterne, 6; Kime, 6; guards, Ward, 9; Robertson, 2; subs, Sissmon, Bullard, Phillip, Burke, and Sherreff.

Referee—Frank Caldwell, Queens.

'TWAS EVER THUS

Yesterday in giving you the low down on Nick Wannie I promised to tell you something about his Canadian teammate, Martin Burke, the Irish boy who has been going such great guns on the rearguard of the Detroit Red Wings. Martin and Nick room together and are pretty inseparable. What is more they were born on the same day of the same year, Jan. 27, 1905. That makes them Aquarians, doesn't it? Anyhow Burke who hails from Toronto, never showed to his best advantage before lining up with Canadiens. He was peddled about, as a matter of fact, by several big league cities and I think the Canadien officials will confess that when he joined them there was no great excitement and the Windsor Montreal headquarters of the world champions. But right now he is one of the prime stalwarts of the club and I don't suppose you could pry him away for love or money.

BULLDOGS DRIFT SEVEN BY GRANT

Syracuse Stars Slip After Coming Up in Race

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP)—The heavy grind of four games in six days had telling effect on Syracuse Stars of the International Hockey League last night, when they met their second standout on successive nights at the hands of Toronto Senior Bulldogs.

Downed 1-0 in Detroit Tuesday by the upclimbing Olympics, the Stars dropped into the riser yesterday to meet the Bulldogs but never had a chance with the speedy Toronto team in the running. The score margin in the play in each period. It was the second shutout for Bert Gardiner, Windsor goalie, since he joined the club two weeks ago.

Although seven goals drifted by Henry Lesieur in the Syracuse cage, the former Owen Sound youth was brilliant during the greater part of the game as he had no chance on any of the shots that beat him.

Canadiens Reach Summit of N.H.L.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs' long stay at the top of the standings in the world of National Hockey League was at last brought to an end by world championship Montreal Canadiens gaining a 2-1 decision over Toronto Maple Hawks in Chicago and marched to the top of the league with a record of 22 game in the van of the Leafs.

Led by Howie Morenz, veteran centre-forward, who scored two goals in the first period on passes from Pete Lepine, the Flying Frenchmen had little difficulty in stopping the Chicago team, making the Chicagoans in the middle period, "Battleship" Lester put the Canadiens there goals in front of Hainsworth, the latter scoring the only goal he was beaten for under way when he snared a long pass from Aurele Gagnon and gave Gardiner no chance to save.

In the ladies' afternoon league, the Hunter Rose team took three points from the Good Sports. For the Hinkey Dinks were the only ones to high with 178-271-181 total of 631 and for the Good Sports Mrs. Reppart was high with 171-177-141 total of 425.

SEMI-FINALISTS STILL IN MUDDLE

Marlies and Sea Fleas Battle to 3-3 Draw

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP)—The four semi-finalists in the O.H.A. are as far from the title as ever with the opening games of the second last round both ending in deadlocks. Port Colborne and Niagara Falls played a one-all tie when they met in the Cataract City Tuesday night while Marlboros and Nationals finished in a 3-3 tangle at the Maple Leaf Gardens last night. The Ports and Falls meet again on Friday, while the Dukes and Sea Fleas renew hostilities Saturday night at the Gardens.

Marlboros had the game and almost the round locked away last night but tossed it away by careless play in the closing period when the National put on a frantic finish to even the score. For two periods the Dukes were superior and seemed on the road to certain victory, with the Nationals crippled by injuries, but the forwards led up checking, became overconfident in the play and the Middies made the most of their chances to even the count.

BASKETBALL

Two interesting basket ball games were staged in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night in the Intermediate League, the deciding game, of the girls' division, the Bridge Street girls defeating the girls behind to win the second half of the schedule, when they staged a rally in the last few minutes of play. Michael's lassies by the score of 19 to 17.

As the Bridge Street girls won the first half of the schedule they are now ultimate winners of the championship of girls' basketball in this league.

For the winners Esther Moncrief starred, while Ruth Wilson was best for the losers. With Palma Melchoir, was the star of the game, while Ruth Wilson was also a very active track and field meeting, Cobourg and Port are going to Toronto. Jack was always on the job, and deserves a lot of credit to any community.

The local basketball team lost a tough game to the R.M.C. team on the latter's floor by the score of 36 to 31. This loss kind of upsets the dope, as the locals had a real quintet, as they canned 26 shots from the floor during the game, they which to get into the league play-offs. The locals were minus on the part of the locals spelled defeat to the Cadets, as previous to this game will be at home and they expect to pull up even with the league-leading Cadets team then.

Although the R.C.I. basketeers were much too fast for their Napanee rivals last night they had to take a back seat in class and speed. The Collegiate lads are now in front in front of the race by virtue of their wins and no defeats. On Friday evening the R.C.I. boys will be entertained for a scheduled game while Napanee will try and battle it out at the local "iceplace."

Class will tell—the world's champion Canadiens are today perched alone in first place of the Canadian division of the National Hockey League, as Howie Morenz, Mastery Cecil Hart has been "spelling a fast one" all season.

World a city league make ends meet in Belleville now? Two contests are being staged every fresh on the streets at the present time. has been suggested that a four-team league, playing two games each night could give the fans plenty of action for the remainder of the month. We are not so sure that a terrible lot of money could be made, but we think that if the best players, locally, could be persuaded to come and play in such a league it might be a success. The post-season leagues are not as successful as in pre-season league but then they are better than no hockey at all.

Of course there is the Intersscholastic league in which the fans took a lot of interest last year, to be considered. They operations until the O.H.A. season is very nearly over with the result that they supply some excellent hockey for the fans. At present Belleville fans have two teams to be proud of in the clubs of the O.S.D. and C.I. Both of these teams are a credit to their school and to the community which they represent.

If the management of the Belleville juniors wish to look over some material for next year, they would be well advised to visit the Collegiate arena the next time that the four teams of the O.S.D. play at the Ki-Y League are in action. Some of these kids are real assets to hockey and next will be the future O.H.A. stars for next year. Many have been taken in hand before they have a chance to show their natural faults, which are so prevalent among young players. Given the time to teach these young boys the fine points of hockey but which they may never be able to break in the senior ranks, an eventual's ruin their hockey ability of Belleville and Belleville can develop young hockey players of the lads are given any encouragement at all. They need to years ago.

Now that baseball players are on their way south talk once again is being centered on "Pepper" Martin. Some of the experts are of the opinion that Martin can only hit the "slow" ones." Well, the National league pitchers will be in the games this summer in which to find out if Martin can hit the "fast" the slow balls or the curve balls or not. Time will tell now is, who is "on the spot" Martin or the opposition pitchers? Figure that out for yourself.

Despatches from New Haven, Conn., stated that the Yale baseball team had started their spring training this week. Fifteen candidates reported for positions on the "Eli" squad. Of this number the local boy will be interested in, as he with interest, the progress made by Angus Buchanan, Belleville born lad, who hurls the odd few games for the Yale team, on the O.S.D. league. Angus has been under Ollie Tomlinson, better "Smoky" Joe Wood for the past two years and has made good. Details of big league coaching last summer, especially his hibiting ability, will be of great value to Buchanan, who will get a try-out in the Yale team this season. Buchanan pitches say that Yale has the best baseball team in the east and that they have had a sore before the war.

Dr. Jack Marshall has returned to Belleville to assist his father in his business. Jack was a big asset to the O.S.D. track and field team while attending that school and will be just as big an asset to the Belleville Y.M.C.A. a very active track and field meeting, Cobourg and Port are going to Toronto. Jack was always on the job, and deserves a lot of credit to any community.

The local basketball team lost a tough game to the R.M.C. team on the latter's floor by the score of 36 to 31. SCHOOL LOOP DOUBLEHEADER PLEASES FANS

Tweed Defeats O. S. D. 4 to 0, Public Deserving Win

B. C. I. ON TOP

Local Knowledge Hunters Plaster Napanee 9-0 in Nightcap

Double-headers, especially in the hockey line, are something of a novelty in Belleville. Two games, for one admission, were witnessed by the fans at the Arena last night, when Tweed High School defeated Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. "puckisers" by a score of 4 to 0 in the first game and the B.C.I. squad won from the Napanee team by the score of 9 to 0 in the night-cap affair. Although both games were of the shut-out nature there was plenty contested throughout and all four teams battled to the last clinch.

Tweed Too Smart

In the opening game the Tweed team had played together for more months than the boys from the School for the Deaf and they have had more practice. Consequences as a number of the Tweed H.S. team are members of the Tweed team in the Hastings County League and they have had much more practice and conditioning, than the smaller boys from the "Deaf Town Road." The first game was rather clean only four penalties being imposed, although at times they were for minor offences. It might be said that the O.S.D. team were no recipient of any luck in the "bone game" which shows that the Institute lads like to play clean hockey, although at times one can say quarter, while on the ice. Thompson for the O.S.D. and Hall for Tweed were the referees hors de combat and forced to retire from the game, but both returned to the game and no serious damage was suffered from either camp after the tilt.

Ice Surface Strange

At the opening of the first game both teams seemed to be lost on the ice surface, as it was so narrow that they were bunching considerably until they got used to the difference, Thompson and Meeckin on the referee duties playing excellent hockey for the Institute lads, while Bell in the net turned in one of the best exhibitions of goal tending seen locally in some time. Frank Cunningham's boys were getting a counter in this frame, but they seemed to be unable to have the Tweed goalie rise to the occasion. Hall and Terry and Arber all turned in creditable accounts of themselves, but the second frame proved to be the down-fall of the Deaf lads, when Tweed opened up with the opened Terry beat Bell on a well shot from centre ice, thereby making the score 1 to 0 for Tweed. A few minutes later Hall scored on the entire O.S.D. squad and beat Bell with a shot that he did at his mercy. With the score standing 2 to 0 against them, the O.S.D. lads opened up with a rush in the final period McGuire soloed from centre ice, but Bell was there Rashotte to make the final score for Tweed. The Deaf boys tried hard and the fans left feeling that they had at least seen some action.

Lineups:

Tweed — goal, Shorey, defence, Thompson and Mccetick, centre, Rashotte, wings, McGuire and Terry; subs, Dixon, Meyette, subs, Bontnart, Dixon, Hall and McRae.

Summary

First Period—
No score and no penalties.
Second Period—
Tweed—Terry (Rashotte) 5.40
Tweed—Hall (Rashotte) 6.50
Penalties, Terry, LaPointaine and Arber.
Third Period—
Tweed—McGuire 2.45
Tweed—Rashotte (Rashotte) 4.55
Penalties, Arber.

Second Cup Affair

In the second game the B.C.I. aggregation from the Quinte city their Napanee opponents and only for the excellent work of Hearns in the net the score would have been at least twice as large, Hinton in the net for the Napanee team playing his first league game and turning in an excellent exhibition, Hearns have been a credit to any veteran goalie in the Belleville Intermediate and "Shud" Ethier were on the defence for the locals but were not called upon to perform much. The front line of High, Barrage and McGuire, Richardson, Gowey and their combination plays were a credit to any team, their scoring ability was far below par as they should have had at least a dozen goals for the number of open shots, that they had on the net. They literally bombarded the Napanee goalie, at times, only to miss the net, or have their shots go wide and no defence. On Friday evening the B.C.I. boys will be entertained for a scheduled game while Napanee will try and battle it out at the local "ice-palace."

Ice Period

During the opening frame the locals had more opportunities to score than the average team get in a season but they could not rise to the occasion until Jimmie Pollwell scored the only goal of the period on a nice solo effort after ten minutes of play had been completed. The locals kept on pressing but could not get behind terrible, when they were in scoring position, the second period, however, turned out to be a scoring melee, when the locals ran amuck and banged the puck past Carl Morgan from 4 goals, Pollwell pass from Gowey.

Only one penalty was handed out in this game and it went to "Shud" Ethier in this frame. The period ended with the score standing B.C.I. 7, N.C.I. 0.

The final period was a repitition of the opening frame, when the locals did most everything but put the puck in the back of the net. Only two counters were chalked up this frame and Bellecille Gowey each of them scrambles in front of the Napanee net. Hearns scored on a pass-out from Pollwell and High bagged one on a pass from Jimmie Pollwell. The game ended with the final score being 9 to 0 for the locals.

To lineups were:

Napanee — goal Hearns, defence, Richardson and Van Luven, centre, Brewer, wings, Murphy and Davis, subs, Shortis, Embury and Grover.

B.C.I. — goal, Hinton, defence, Ethier and J. Pollwell, centre High, wings, Barrage and McGuire, subs, Morgan, Graves, Goyer and Ted Pollwell.

Referee—Bill Green.

Summary

1st Period—
Belleville C.I.—Pollwell 9.50
Penalties, none.
2nd. Period—
B.C.I.—Barrage (High) 2.00
B.C.I.—Barrage 2.50
B.C.I.—McGuire 5.00
B.C.I.—Morgan (Goyer) ..... .30
B.C.I.—McGuire (Barrage) 8.00
B.C.I.—Pollwell (McGuire) 2.50
Penalties, Ethier,
3rd. Period—
B.C.I.—Barrage (Pollwell) 5.00
B.C.I.—Bellecille (Gowey) 6.00
Penalties, none.

Summary: B.C.I. 9; N.C.I. 0.

Tomorrow evening the B.C.I. boys will be hosts to O.S.D. and Napanee battle for second place in the local arena.

LEADING POSSE OFFICER HERSEY IS WOUNDED

Madman Trapper Puts Two Bullets Into Closest Pursuer

SHOT-RIDDLED

Main Party's Rifles Quickly Settle All Accounts with Johnson

Aklavik, N.W.T., Feb. 18 (CP)—Albert Johnson came to the end of his bizarrely trail yesterday. The wild man of the Arctic went down fighting but Canada's redcoated Royal Canadian Mounted police won out.

In the grey dusk of the Arctic circle day the Rat River fugitive was shot dead by a posse of Mounties and trappers who had trailed him 200 miles over the snow-clad hills of the Yukon-Northwest Territories boundary area. Before he died, Johnson added a wounded Mountie to his toll of one dead, one wounded.

Two months ago, Johnson shot down Constable A. W. King of the Mounted as the policeman sought to arrest him for pilfering trapline traps. Two weeks later he killed Constable E. Millen as the Mounties posse closed in on him after he had escaped from the Aklavik detachment guardroom. Yesterday, cornered after a 200-mile chase into the Yukon, he wounded Staff Sergeant R. F. Hersey in his fight to the death.

Battered by hunger, blizzards and overwhelming odds, the eccentric trapper defied the police for three long weeks, now running through the bleak hills of the Arctic, now standing at bay and shooting down his pursuers if they came within range of his deadly rifle.

When his fate overtook him, Johnson was perpetrating one of the few, trail-maddening tricks with which he has managed to keep out of range of the police and trapper pursuers. He was doubling back on his trail. This time, however, his movements were too clear.

He was seen by Staff Sergeant Hersey and a trapper named Norman Verville, plugging along in advance of the main posse. Hunter and hunted were prepared for a set battle. Hersey and Verville jerked their rifles from their toboggan. Johnson's rifle spat once, then twice. As Hersey knelt to take aim a bullet from Johnson's rifle sent him down in the knee, glanced up through his thigh and another entered his chest. Verville continued firing.

Main Party Comes Up

Only a few shots had been exchanged when the main posse party bearing its firing, ran up. The opened fire at once and the desperado wer i down under a hail of lead from half a dozen rifles.

While the battle raged on the errand Pilot W. R. "Wop" May circled overhead in his plane. He had boarded it at the trap on the trapper but could not use them as the posse was too close.

As soon as Johnson was killed and landed, piloted up the wounded Hersey and flew back to Aklavik. Hersey is receiving medical attention here and is reported seriously wounded. Pilot May is standing by ready to rush him off on the 1,800 mile flight to Edmonton in case Dr. J. A. Urquhart, police doctor here, thinks further treatment is necessary.

In all the long years of police work in Canada's Arctic no other man has proved as tough a customer as Johnson. The police casualty list now stands at one dead, two wounded. Every policeman in the force, members of the Royal Canadian Signals Corps, who operate the radio station here, trappers and Indians were pressed into service in the chase. The net result was deadly, knowing the country was safe for no man while Johnson was at large.

The straight-shooting hermit carries with him to his death the secret of his strange behavior. Since he first appeared in the Mackenzie River country not far from where the mighty Mackenzie River empties its waters into the frozen main of the Arctic Ocean he has shunned all human contact.

ASH IN PRE BOOM DAYS

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—In cutting expenditures to the bone, and slashing $43,500,000 from the appropriations for the next fiscal year, the government is simply retreating to the level of pre-depression days. The reduction of estimates by $43,000,000 is characterized as unprecedented, but the fact remains that expenditures this year will still be higher than they were in the five years from 1923 to 1927, inclusive. What is more, the government, with all its economies, will still be spending more than twice as much as it spent in the years before the war.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Minor Blemishe s of the Skin

Every age has its own complexion ills. Acne seizes members of the adolescent. Sebaceous glands are active then, youth is on the jump. Young folk don't care a rap about Lady Hygiene, the face, isn't washed properly and stays about shiniest. Then there's a possibility of finding the skin infected with impetigo, pores laden with mucus and dirt. After the age of twenty-five the functions of the glands aren't so active. The complexion disappears, the epidermis is cleared of its epithelial fruit designs.

In middle age there are troubles. Fine capillaries burst with purple. The pigment is subject to discolorations known as moth patches or liver spots, both of which names are senseless. Moth patches mean what? And the liver has nothing to do with them. They are akin to freckles, which, in fact, they resemble except to strong sunlight may create them.

They have queer ways. They can appear out almost every night and disappear as quickly. They can spread and become bimbles the size of a silver quarter. In some cases the tissues look slightly thick around the spots resemble moles.

Any blemish must be taken on faith. It may or may not whiten the skin. A simple formula is: four ounces of bay rum and sixty grains of salicylic acid. Apply with cotton every night.

Milia is a disfiguring affliction. The pore of the skin closes and as there is no outlet for the luburicant sent off by the sebaceous gland, the substance piles up into a white bead-like mass. Any sterilizer will clear the skin by laving with alcohol, hold a needle in a flame to be sure it is clean, slit the white bead, pick out the little bead with the needle point. The incision must be considerable and the mass will not give way to pressure, as is the case with a pimple. Touch the wound with alcohol or a boric acid solution.

Moles were once considered beauty spots. In the old fashioned novel the hero kisses the little mole on the lovely lady's neck. We don't care for beauty spots these days, especially if they are tenemented by fuzzy hairs, blemishes that make one think of witches and their broom sticks.

There are various methods of removing moles—the electric needle, the X-ray and the freezing process are the most popular, used the oftenest. Moles are blemishes and that's rule. But since there is one chance in a million that a mole belongs to the malignant class of growths, it is wisdom to seek the services of a physician who stands high in the medical profession, when you are thinking of clearing yourself from your little pet.

Broken capillaries are another eye sore to those who have them. Cheats walk bare headed and their faults have spread into surrounding tissues. The electric needle will delete them. So cocaine and adrenalin will have any effect, since they are located beneath the lowest layer of the skin. They afflict hearty eaters, bibbers and bibbers with complexions that are naturally ruddy, quick to flush.

Lectures on Art of Masefield

Describing at length a number of the narrative and dramatic poems of John Masefield, Professor Clark, head of the English Department at Queen's University, gave his third lecture last evening, at a small group of the Reading Club, which met in the Collegiate Library. Characters in Dauber, The Widow in Rye Street and other of the poet's works were realistically brought before the eyes of his hearers in Professor Clark's characteristic analysis and readings from the poems.

The speaker touched on the novels of Masefield which he characterized as "yarns in prose" his plays, particularly his religious dramas, the "Trial of Jesus" and "Esther," when the characters in the Old and New Testament appealed to the writer across the deeps of time, and which he invested with a warm human sympathy. Reynard, the Fox, transfers the interest of the reader from the life of an animal hero, as the hunted creature faces the difficulties of elemental mania escape.

In "Dauber" Professor Clark thought that Masefield reached the heights in his narrative works. His theme was in three parts, the first, the gathering storm, the second, the storm, and the third the aftermath. He traced the action of the poem which centered in the autobiographical biography of Dauber, tensely told. This poem had been subjected to close revision by Masefield which Professor Clark felt would have also improved a number of his other works.

"The Widow in Rye Street" is the story of a worthy woman made to suffer through no apparent reason. The silent depths of reserves of the character of the widow in her fight against life gives her the nobility of mild sainthood.

Professor Clark's splendid lecture was thoroughly enjoyed and it is to be regretted that a larger representation of the Reading Club was not present last evening.

Foods Crack Their Jokes Prices Get Upon Banister

Potatoes and Prunes Have Laugh on Other Foods

MANY CHANGES

A manager of one of the largest stores in the city, which caters to the public demand for foodstuffs and intentionally coined a pun yesterday when he got up and declared: "We've can bid a lasting farewell to this so-called depression some people are still like to harp on, by 'good buys'." Then he waxed warmer and enthusiastic, instantly, voted both hands down for that guy who got off in a corner all by himself one day and everyday with that popular song: "Potatoes are cheaper—tomatoes are cheaper ....." and said that that fellow knew his business or his onions when it came to the discussion of business now in hand.

Potatoes are cheaper. And so are tomatoes—and all the rest of the things you eat. Not a single article, as far as we could find out, had advanced in price, while a lot of them had mounted on the toboggan slide and slid down from that steep and icy slide to new low and better prices, except for the farmer. If you are a woman and have charge of the housekeeping for your family you have probably noticed the extra dime or so you get back each time you call up to the little girl who taps the register when you make a purchase. Or the smile she bestows upon you. Or the banter on the counter before her. And if you're a man maybe you could even have had that extra cigar all along from the start.

It seems that canned goods of all kinds took the slide first, then cereals, trying to keep up with the pace decided they'd become more valuable, and then after that the canned goods. Now they're neck and neck, but the cereals boosted the jam jar yet. He makes the third trip down the hill this year we ever saw, and compared with this speed the others had all slid. He said that he might just possibly have something to announce about the line later.

Further down the long lines of shelves sit all the things that are necessary in the food line, and the things that you don't care much about getting too familiar with. He's infinitely more contempt, you know and if you only knew with what contempt he held some of them . . . but we are transgressing. As we said, there are all those things sitting down there waiting for an invitation—things like Prunes for example, who look out of their box with a leer in their eyes and their vermicelled looking little faces—no matter how young a prune may be they're always full of wrinkles—and there are also dried apples to be consulted before any stewing and smoked haddie which once used to play and swim in the ocean without a thought or a care of tomorrow until they were crbally jerked up, out of their element on the end of a line on which hung a tin minnow that their mother had never told them about . . . and there were other things in great many other things all to be reviewed and priced, but always the same answer to our query as to whether they were coming down in price or not. Finally we stopped in front of one particularly fine and robust specimen of young spinach. "Tell us," we asked, "tell us and end the suspense—let us know at once if it is true that this noble food is to be reduced in price . . . or can it be—dare we hope it?—is on the decline in price this season as the rest of those good healthful foods . . . and if more, tell us that you ate more of it there would be less sickness and misery in the world, and things would not now be quite as they are . . . "

There was more to this talk he gave us on the subject, but we have forgotten more he had been saving up for us, but we already had enough to go on, with faltering step and bent and weary head. Our family had been living on spinach steaks had lost their color—and old friends were passed by just like that. We had found out one thing, but the latter thing we had also learned had finished us. Food prices have been on the decline, but Spinach is numbered with the rest.

PEACE

Peace is no pallid thing of weakness
But from the mouth of war she has her birth.
Sprung from red carnage and the wrongs of earth,

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

A Happy Surprise

By Thornton W. Burgess

It was an egg! Yes, sir, it was an egg!

Who says that dreams will ne'er come true?
Mistaken is; they sometimes do.
—Monkey-face.

Monkey-face the Barn Owl did a lot of thinking these days when he was by himself. He knew it wouldn' do to let Mrs. Monkey-face hear him chuckling, for she would want to know what it was all about and he couldn't tell her. At least he didn't want to tell her. You see, he was chuckling because Mrs. Monkey-face was doing exactly what he wanted her to do, and all the time she thought she was doing what she wanted to do and that he had nothing to do about it. So Monkey-face would get off by himself and chuckle.

"Sometimes more can be gained by saying nothing than by all the talk in the world," he said to himself. "He has a wise head who knows when to keep his tongue still. I knew that there wasn't a better place in all the Green Forest for me to have a home than right here in this barn. If I had tried to talk her into it she would have gone straight back to our old home and I might have been the end of it. Now she has forgotten all about it and thinks this place was her own idea.

So Monkey-face chuckled and was happy and Mrs. Monkey-face was equally happy. She had discovered what a truly wonderful place for a home was the little room, which was nothing more than a box with Farmer Brown's Boy had built for them on the rafters way up under the roof of the barn, and the more she saw of it the better she liked it. Every night she went out hunting with Monkey-face, but just as soon as the first faint gray of dawn came she hurried back to the barn and into that little room and remained there until her excellent appetite sent her out hunting again.

She spent a lot of time fussing about in one corner, especially when Monkey-face wasn't around. She gradually collected there some bits of rubbish. No real nest builder would have dreamed of calling it a nest, but that is what it was intended for. Sometimes Monkey-face would discover her sitting on it in great contentment. He didn't think much about it. It was enough for him that she was contented. Then came a morning when he was late in getting back to the barn. It was almost broad daylight. He found Mrs. Monkey-face sitting there as meek as a mouse. Being fat he had been out all night, he settled himself on the perch and promptly went to sleep. It was late in the afternoon when he awoke. Mrs. Monkey-face was sitting beside him. For a few minutes he sat blinking rather stupidly at her. Then he began to look down in that same corner and instantly he was wide awake. On that little bit of rotten wood was something white. He jumped down and went over to it for a closer view. It was an egg! Yes, sir, it was an egg! There was no doubt about it.

Monkey-face slowly turned his head and looked at Mrs. Monkey-face. There was a pleased look on his funny face and there was an equally pleased look on hers. "Is it ours?" he asked somewhat foolishly.

"If it isn't I don't know whose it is," she replied tartly.

"But—but—I didn't think it was time yet," he stammered.

"That is because you don't think of anything but your stomach," retorted Mrs. Monkey-face. "What did you think I have made that nest for? Is it so warm and comfortable here that we can raise a family earlier than we ever could before. Aren't you pleased?"

"Of course I am pleased. I never was more pleased in my life," replied Monkey-face, leaning forward and touching the egg gently. "I am just surprised, and it is a most happy surprise. It is indeed, my dear."

"I'm glad to hear you say it," retorted Mrs. Monkey-face dryly, "for from now on you will have something to think about besides your own stomach. If we are to raise a family you will have to do your share. Don't forget that."

"Have I ever failed to do that?" asked Monkey-face reproachfully.

"No," she replied. "I can't say that you have. I'm just warning you that there are busy times ahead, very busy times. Now we'll go out for our dinner."

All that night as he hunted Monkey-face chuckled.

RATHER FIRM BUT EASES OFF

Losses in Principal Shares Run From One to Three Points

NEW YORK, New York, February 17.—The Stock Market had an interval of firmness in the morning, but eased off after mid-day. Payment of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 by American Telephone had been fairly widely anticipated, and brought out more profit taking than fresh buying.

Losses in principal shares in the afternoon ranged from one to three points, with American Telephone registering one of the maximum declines. Selling, however, was in moderate volume. There were temporary advances in the late afternoon during the morning.

A distinct undertone of bullishness was apparent in brokerage quarters, but Wall Street generally seemed to feel, that over enthusiastic bidding up of the market at this stage would be unwise.

The demand for stocks in the loan crowd, broken off still indicated a fair-sized short interest in the general market, but some felt a rally sufficient to cover this position would be necessary to restore the market to a strong technical position.

Hubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Saylor, their children and grandchildren and a host of young married folks. Mr. and Mrs. Ostrander gave all a hearty welcome. We, the members of Eggleton W. M. S. are again reminded of a change in our neighborhood, and this time it is causing us real sorrow and regret, as in our W. M. But this time the loss to our society and Mission Band seems a loss we cannot fill. We are also reminded that here we are only pilgrims journeying to our Heavenly Home. "We meet, We greet, We part, Nothing eternal."

We hope as you make new friends and neighbors, you and your family will enjoy many years of health and happiness and will always stand for what is pure and true as you have done since coming to live here and we ask you to accept this gift from our W. WINTER WOODS

How close we are to God that man can feel
Divine advances where the woods reveal
These curves of snow; should find outstretchings here
That touch his soul and, in mere interplay
Of light and frozen moisture, the appeal
Of more than human calmness in the day—
A strength and leisure reaching to the stars
And the whirls of sow the morning breeze
Send dancing in the sunlight — there man sees
A radiant and unexpected birth
Of silver laughter—gusts of rippling songs
Amid the hush and grandeur of the trees.
This, too, is God's—to him alone belongs
The freedom and the courage of such mirth!

GEORGE COLE GIVES REPORT

Proceedings of Trustee Meeting in Toronto Told to Club

George Cole, district trustee to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, gave an interesting account of the trustee meeting, recently held in Toronto, at the club luncheon held on Tuesday. The report of the meet contained extensive and George was thanked most sincerely for his effort and attention paid at the meeting.

Dr. H. Riggs, genial pianist for the club, who was successful in winning the tire given by "Bouncer" Hall, his boost a week ago resulted in the club that riding on Dunlop tires was all right and to show his appreciation, Leo had the tire passed for the members and there were more than appreciated. Russell Wotten and Leo Riggs favored a fine musical program and a members sang with gusto the numbers called for. A majority of the members were out to the luncheon presided over by A. A. Collins, club president. "It would be impossible to give a detailed statement of the meeting in Toronto, but the gist of the proceedings is summed up in the following text:

All Districts Represented.

On Friday, January 22nd, 1932, District Trustees Conference convened at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, beginning at 9 a.m. Representation from each of our forty-six Ontario - Quebec - Maritime district were present. Past and present International representatives, past and present O. Q. M. Governors and Lieut.-Governors were also present. Many questions of importance were discussed and several interesting addresses given. The proceeding day, Thursday, January 21, all district council met.

Friday evening, January 22nd fittingly climaxed the important meeting of that day. With delegated representatives present from every section of our district, the three Toronto clubs as hosts extended an invitation to all Kiwanians present at the big evening dinner party at the Royal York, at which the honorable guest and speaker was our International President, William O. Harris, of Los Angeles, California. Governor Chas. A. Taylor presided throughout the evening. The program was of high order and the occasion a very exceptional one, as seldom does the opportunity occur of having representatives from every O. Q. M. club present, with the First Citizen of Kiwanis and the head branch of same.

Good Governor's Address.

Past Governor McNabb's remarks had to do with the objectives and administrative policies of the district and Kiwanis International. He referred to the fundamental ideals or objects which were incorporated into the constitution of Kiwanis at the Atlanta Convention, and finally approved at the Denver convention in 1924. These objects, he stated, will always remain the same, and constitute a specific definition of the ideals upon which Kiwanis International is founded.

The objectives which are to be particularly emphasized during the year are chosen by the International Board at its first after the new administration is elected. They always constitute a plan of action for the fundamental ideals of Kiwanis.

The objectives that will present international administration are as follows:

1 Personal service to underprivileged children.

2 Constructive, aggressive and serviceable citizenship.

3 Mutual understanding between the farmer and the city man.

4 Vocational guidance.

5 Boys' and girls' work.

In additional to objectives the administration also decided upon certain administrative policies. These have to do with the manner in which the efficiency of our organization can be increased, so as to more successfully put into effect our objectives. The administrative policies of the present international board are as follows:

1 To provide adequate leadership training.

2 To encourage personal and active participation by every member in Kiwanis objectives.

3 To formulate and promote a comprehensive, three year plan to enlist the devotion, efforts and support of all members of Kiwanis.

The district objectives therefore will include the above International objectives and administrative policies.

Three Year Plan.

1. To increase the number of clubs by 170, as follows: First year, 40; second year, 60; third year, 70.

2. To increase the net membership by 10,000 as follows: First year, 1,000; second year, 3,000; third year, 7,000.

3. To provide a plan of membership for younger men after a study of the entire matter by a committee of the board.

4. To extend the field of Kiwanis through special attention to: Active participation in unemployment relief; education of citizenship; stimulation of employment and unemployment; cooperation with others as social or economic conditions may suggest.

5. To provide for the adequate financing of Kiwanis International.

6. To provide adequate field service for all clubs.

7. To develop a greater sense of responsibility among all present and past club, district and international officers to the end that a more effective service may be rendered the clubs.

8. To provide as soon as financially possible the necessary trained men to assist the clubs in the practical application of Kiwanis objectives, such as work for underprivileged children, vocational guidance and boys' and girls' work activities.

The above three year plan as announced by Thomas L. Johns, International Trustee.

EARLY DAYS OF SALVATION ARMY CORPS IN BELLEVILLE

Hallelujah Wedding and Supper Recorded By Press

SOME INCIDENTS

The Belleville Corps of the Salvation Army recently celebrated with special ceremonies the forty-first anniversary of the founding of the Army in Belleville, and a survey of newspaper files of that time reveals many news items, which tell of the very discouraging conditions under which the Army commenced work here.

The methods used by the Army were a novelty to the people; singing and preaching on the street and marching to the beat of a drum, the sounding of tambourine and the tinkling of a tri-angle caused many dignified citizens to gape with amazement and from some of these citizens the Army experienced criticism and derision.

Early Days

By small boys and also by some men the Salvation Soldiers were ridiculed and annoyed. Disturbances were created at the meetings on the street and in the hall by a boisterous element and the police were at times called to deal with them. Several instances of window smashing are mentioned in the press.

The outdoor meetings were conducted in the Metropolitan Hall, now used by Johnston's Dancing Academy and at the close of the street meetings a crowd of curious followers would follow the Army to the two flights of stairs to the hall.

Armed as Parade

One night in January 1884 the gas lights were turned off by some mischievous boy and there was almost a panic; many persons were seen sliding at the rear of the hall rushed for the stairway and some of them jumped over the guard rail of the stairs to the floor below. The scare, however, soon subsided and the meeting went on. A few nights later some boys raised a row in the hall, but no arrests were made. The Daily Intelligencer, editorially of establishment of employment and unemployment bureaus; also others as social or economic conditions may suggest.

5. To provide for the adequate financing of Kiwanis International.

6. To provide adequate field service for all clubs.

7. To develop a greater sense of responsibility among all present and past club, district and international officers to the end that a more effective service may be rendered the clubs.

8. To provide as soon as financially possible the necessary trained men to assist the clubs in the practical application of Kiwanis objectives, such as work for underprivileged children, vocational guidance and boys' and girls' work activities.

The above three year plan as announced by Thomas L. Johns, International Trustee.

All Night Service

A newspaper report of the event says: "So spontaneous and varied were the exercises that the hours of the night passed so rapidly that few were aware of the guilty flight. About eleven o'clock the large number of representatives of all Protestant churches of the city was augmented by a large detachment of the Salvation Army. All those who were present look for great results from this meeting."

The Hallelujah wedding, which took place in Bridge Street Church on January 28, 1884 was a big event with the members of the Army and it also aroused real interest and excitement among all classes of citizens.

Captain Nellie's Wedding

The press of that time refers to the approach of a wedding as follows: "The Hallelujah wedding will take place tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock in the Bridge Street Church. The friends of the Army in the city have been very generous as they have contributed cakes and money. It is probable that the attendance at the festival tomorrow afternoon and evening will be large. We have been requested to state that any person found chewing tobacco and spitting on the floor at the meeting in the Bridge Street Church tomorrow will be punished."

The day of the wedding the press said: "The Army was the all absorbing topic on the streets this morning. The counters and tables in the butter market were laden with rich viands for the wedding feast, enough to appease the appetite of a brigade. Citizens have responded liberally in sending food. Many prominent Army officers from a distance are here for the wedding. There is a big crowd around Bridge Street Church."

The contracting parties to the marriage were Captain Nellie Syerson and Captain Ludgate. Captain Nellie, as she was called by every one, was a very popular officer in command of the Belleville corps and Captain Ludgate was a prominent officer from out of town.

Columns of Press

The press on the day following the wedding devoted two columns and a half in telling of the interesting event. There were fully twelve hundred persons present in the church and out side the building a very large crowd of people had assembled. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Stacy, pastor of the Congregational Church, which occupied the church building now called Emmanuel Church on Victoria Avenue.

Captain Nellie, who was stirred in the republican uniform of the Salvation Army, entered the Church on the arms of Mr. Richardson, who was Manager of the Bank of Montreal at that time. Captain Moore, a prominent Army officer from out of town gave one bride away; Mrs. Blacy, wife of the officiating minister was matron of honor and Mr. Richardson supported the groom.

1,500 People Present

After the ceremony the bridal couple entered a sleigh to be driven to the city hall and they were cheered. It is reported, by fully three thousand people. The drive to the city hall was made in rapid time as the road was filled with pitch holes and the new married couple were thrown out. The marriage of life many "ups and downs".

At the city hall over five hundred persons enjoyed a most sumptuous supper and there was great rejoicing.

Captain Nellie and her husband, Captain Ludgate remained in Belleville for a day and then left to enter the Army's service at Syracuse, N. Y.

Captain Nellie, who is now residing near Chicago will be remembered by many of the older residents of Belleville. She would have come to the recent anniversary celebration if she had been in good health.

At that time there were one hundred and fifty corps of the Salvation Army in the continent. Today there are thousands of corps besides many hostels, hospitals and homes.

Remarkable Progress

The Army in Belleville has made great progress; it has fine buildings and a large band which is composed of first class musicians. The work done by the members of the Army is appreciated by the citizens of Belleville generally.

The methods of the Army have changed with the years—they are more staid and conservative now in the conducting of their meetings and interference with them is a thing of the past.

Commemorating the principles on which A & P was founded

An advertisement published in Harper's Weekly in 1867 by the founder of A & P says, "The Proprietors became convinced that the consumers of Tea and Coffee were paying one profit and no large profits on these articles, and therefore organized this Company to do away, as far as possible, with these enormous drains upon the consumer, and to supply them with these necessaries at the smallest possible cost.... We propose to do away with all these various profits.... with the exception of a small profit to ourselves — which, on our large sales will amply pay us."

The founder's method of direct buying and small profits to ourselves applies today, not only to tea, but to every one of the 1,200 items we sell. Our policy "save," and always will be, the elimination of unnecessary profits taken on food between the garden and the grocery shelf.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

On her way to the door she stopped by the chair where Ellen sat staring into space.

"What are you going to do about your date, Ellen?"

Ellen gave a deep sigh and drew her thoughts away from the memory of Larry's laughing face. Her eyes were bright with tears, her mouth was drooping. To her sister she looked childish, pathetic, young in her flimsy voile dress. But even as the elder girl watched, the square boyish chin came up.

"What am I going to do? I'm not going—that's all!"

CHAPTER X

Ellen knocked at the door of Steven Barclay's office at five minutes past one. Under her arm, carefully wrapped in tissue paper, was the ivory taffeta dress. There had been time enough, after all, for her to pick up the borrowed dress before going on to the store.

That morning in the basement had been no worse than any summer morning. But it had seemed that the morning would never end, had seemed to her that before the slow hands of the clock dragged to 1 o'clock she would be dead of suffocation. The morning had ended; she was not dead, even though she felt that there was no particular reason for continuing to live. Life was tiresome and stupid and unfair.

She tried to convince herself that Larry had been only a casual infatuation but she could not forget how different the morning would have been if only she had not read a newspaper clipping. If only the day could have gone as she had dreamed it would. Even the fact that she was calling on the "big boss," that he had sent her flowers, things which only the day before would have left her trembling with excitement, seemed dull and unimportant and completely colorless.

She knocked again. Barclay's secretary, Ruth Tevis, a plain girl whose plainness was heightened by heavy eye-glasses, opened the door.

"Mr. Barclay had to go out for a minute," she said, peering over the tortoise shell frames of her spectacles. "He told me to ask you to wait if you will."

When Ellen was seated in the room, cool office with the dress over her lap, the secretary began fussing unnecessarily and a trifle officiously with the flowers on the rose wood desk, rearranging them, plucking a leaf here and there and sliding the slender crystal vases an inch nearer the center. She moved a pile of typed letters, awaiting Barclay's signature, to the left of the desk, then back to the right again.

"You were here yesterday, weren't you?" she asked casually.

"Yes," Ellen replied.

She wished the other girl would not stare so. The steady, near-sighted regard of those pale eyes was making her uneasy and hazy as ous, unsure of herself. Ruth Tevis cleared her throat and opened her mouth—to ask another question, Ellen was sure—just as Steven entered.

He said impersonally to Ellen, "I'm sorry I kept you waiting, Miss Rossiter."

And to the secretary, "I'll call you if I need you, Miss Tevis."

His words were a dismissal. With a classified glance at Ellen, Miss Tevis turned and went into her own office. As if by accident she managed to leave the adjoining door a trifle ajar but Barclay rose and closed it.

"Miss Tevis, I'm afraid," he remarked with a twinkle in his eye and an entire change of manner, "is beginning to be curious."

Ellen went directly to the point. She was, to do her credit, not greatly disturbed. The secretary's attitude had in a subtle way served to confirm her mother's pleased insistence, her own conviction that Barclay's interest was genuine. It was possible that more than possible that Barclay's interest in her was more than friendly. It certainly there had been a note of intimacy in his voice, in the way he had closed, a light intimation that both of them were in league to defeat the secretary's curiosity.

She intended to avoid complications of that sort.

"I've brought back the dress," she began, as she laid it forward and laid the box on his desk. "I can't tell you how much I appreciated using it. And the flowers were lovely. You made our appointment into a florial shop. I've never seen them before."

"Did you like them?" Barclay exclaimed, deeply pleased and missing entirely her subtle, gracious air of withdrawal. "I hope they didn't wake you when they arrived this morning. But I was determined you should have them before you left for the theater."

He was like a young boy, acting, by, wistfully anxious for praise in his cleverness. Ellen did not stint her praise. Her gratitude was genuine enough, even as she thanked him, that she could give a man like Steven Barclay such pleasure.

He was looking down at the dress. "I'm sorry you've returned it so soon," he remarked with a shade of disappointment. "I thought you'd keep it a long time."

"I thought maybe on one yesterday afternoon," Ellen said casually. "Nothing like a small party to put but more suitable for Dreamland."

He didn't catch at that," he admitted. "But I do hope everything went all right."

Ellen felt an inextricable net closing around her. Yesterday she had in that unfortunate burst of confidence, told him so much that today it seemed unfriendly to become reserve and impersonal. It was impossible; for she painted Dreamland for him with very light strokes. She made it a place almost pleasant, determined above all that he should not be sorry for her. She did not tell him of her first unpleasant encounter nor did she, of course, mention Larry Harrowgate. She told an amusing, if understatement of Jacob Salomon, of Tony, of the other hostesses. But Barclay, she knew, had a lack of spontaneity.

"I'm sorry you have to work so hard," he said slowly when last was published. "Glad it won't be for long. Now of course," he said looking straight into her candid youthful eyes, "now that everything's going so well you won't need to see me any more, will you?"

"Certainly, I will," Ellen said quickly, "if you want to see me."

She could not have him believing he was like that.

"Then come to lunch with me," he suggested, unable to conceal his pleased relief at her answer.

"I'm awfully sorry but I have some errands for Mother."

She really did have, too.

"But you will some other time?" "Of course."

It was impossible for a Rossiter to be tepid. Ellen saw with dismay that he had misinterpreted her insincere graciousness. Worse than that, she was hurried by fear that he might think she was coquetting with him, refusing a first invitation so that he would more thoroughly appreciate her acceptance of a second. And she must accept the second one. She had promised. As she rose, feeling helpless and uncertain, he spoke again.

"I've thought a lot about that young brother, Mike. How is he?"

"Just as usual." Ellen smiled. "He made me this morning by drooping his kitten on my face."

"I'm to meet him sometime—and your mother."

"You must—sometime."

She left his office in a disturbed trance of mind. She was no calmer when she observed that Ruth Tevis opened the door of the adjoining office and glared after her as she hurried to the elevator. If only Steven Barclay were Jos kind. If only he were a different sort of man from the generous and natural person he was, how easily she could solve that particular problem. How could she snub a man from whom she had accepted favors. a man whom she was determined not to hurt unless hurting him was the only way out?

Ellen went to a movie that afternoon.

She sat through two presentations of the same silly, sentimental picture but afterward she remembered nothing of the film except that the hero turned his head sometimes in a way reminding her of Larry Harrowgate. There was, unfortunately for her peace of mind, an illuminated clock visible to the audience. She watched the clock instead of the picture.

As the hands came closer and closer to 4, the hour she was to have met Larry for tea, she found that it took all her resolution to keep from walking out of the theater and hastening to the hotel where she had promised to meet him.

Four-fifteen. Larry would be wondering where she was, why she didn't come. Perhaps if she went, if she were very cold, it would be all right. Surely just to sit chatting with him for a short while would be all right. Perhaps he meant to tell that the engagement was broken.

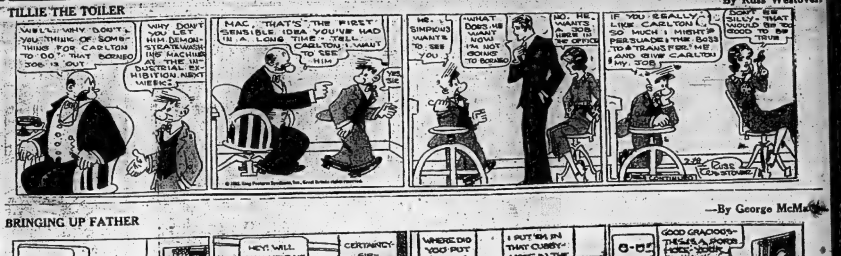
Someone tapped her on the shoulder.

"Listen," hissed a voice in the darkness. "Don't wiggle so, lady. I can't see the picture for your head."

Ellen sat rigid. Four twenty-five—and Larry would be waiting. Should she slunter through the lobby to see?

The picture moved on toward a tragic denouement. Sniffles rose from a few rows in front of her and coughed explosively. Pale blurs of handkerchiefs appeared in the dark darkness. Ellen was dry-eyed, fraught with restlessness. Indecision. At 10 minutes to 5 she surrendered. At 10 minutes to 5 a small, dejected figure in the massive audience was treated to the spectacle of a young girl who jumped hastily from her seat and ran up the long shadowy aisle to the street.

Ellen entered the lobby of the Hotel Vandervent as if to prolong, by walking slowly, the thrill which quickly; her cheeks were crimson banners. She looked around but Larry was not in the lobby. Perhaps he had come and gone. But no, he was not in the lobby. But her pride was gone and she knew it. She was going to wait. By the time she had made on hurried passage through the brilliant, mirrored interior she was conscious of theft. She assured herself of something as negative as that. She was glad, glad! Glad that she had fate had taken the decision out of her hands.



She had lived through the longest hour of suspense and disappointment she still lived. She was still young. And she had her pride and dignity. Larry would, perhaps, be substantially indirect. Larry would never know that she had come to meet him.

Ellen, who had eaten a solitary dinner she felt considerably better. At 8 o'clock she had to maintain a mood of black depression. But when she reached Dreamland for the beginning of the second evening there she felt the black mood returning. How could she bear to dance again in the arms of another man? Where she had danced and laughed with Larry?

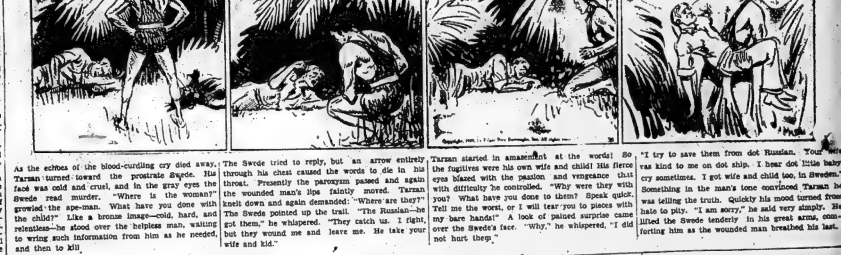
TILLIE THE TOILER

BRINGING UP FATHER



ME-AND-MRS. JOE HAS A FEW DRINKS

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 38.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

As the echoes of the blood-curdling cry died away, Tarzan turned toward the prostrate Swede. His face was cold and cruel, and in the gray eyes the Swede read murder. "Where is the woman?" growled the ape-man. What have you done with the child?" Like a bronze image—cold, hard, and relentless—he stood over the helpless man, waiting to write such information from him as he needed, and then to kill.

The Swede tried to reply, but an arrow entirely through his chest caused him words to die in his throat. Presently the paroxysm passed and again the wounded man's lips faintly moved. Tarzan knelt down and again demanded: "Where are they?" The Swede pointed up the trail. "The Russian—he got them," he whispered. "They catch us. I fight, but they wound me and leave me. He take your wife and kid."

Tarzan started in amazement at the words! So, "I try to save them from dot Russian. Your was kind to me on dot ship. I hear dot little baby cry sometimes. I got wife and child too, in Sweden.'

Something in the man's tone convinced Tarzan he was telling the truth. Quickly his mood turned from hate to pity. "I am sorry," he said very simply. He lifted the Swede tenderly in his great arms, comforting him as the wounded man breathed his last.

Chinese Amazons Who Fought Japanese

Following the example of the famous "Battalion of Death" in which Russian women fought during the World War, three Chinese women have attached themselves to the Japanese invasion. A body of women similar to those shown was recently reported as having made a brave stand against the Japanese attack. Armed with old-fashioned rifles and long bayonets, a fighting unit of the modern Amazons held an outpost on a road leading to Shanghai and successfully repulsed several attacks by a Japanese landing party. Many of the brave women were reported killed in the engagement when they stood up against the fire of Japanese machine guns.

At The Belle

TWO-FEATURE PROGRAM
NEXT AT BELLE THEATRE

"Skippy" and "Sooky", those wishful pals of Scatchyern, who jumped from the cartoon pen of Percy Crosby to create one of the biggest of all table hits, are reunited in the persons of towheaded Jackie Cooper and whimsical brunette Robert Coogan in a Paramount sequel titled "Sooky," to be presented on the Two-Feature program that opens at the Belle, tomorrow for two days, matinee daily.

To describe a picture of this type, with all the heartache of realism and all the sublime happiness of childhood hope, courage and optimism, is not something to be done adequately with an intentional leading like a typewriter.

If you like Skippy, you can't be disappointed in "Sooky," the same lovable youngsters directed re-associate Crosby with Norman Taurog, to present scarcely equaled tes of entertainment in the fullest sense of the word.

You are young Cooper and Coogan the only members of the original cast to project their characterizations in new experiences. Willard Robertson, Enid Bennett, Helen Jerome Eddy, Guy Oliver and that ebullient lad, Jackie Searl renew the parts they created in "Skippy" as "Sooky."

Dogs, trinkets, mothers and fathers are treated with typical boyhood earnestness in the new story. Pathos and humor are discovered mixed, building up to a strong and sympathetic climax.

Kay Maynard, with "Tarzan" the Wonder Horse, and beautiful Doris Hill appear in the second feature offering titled, "Sons of the Saddle", which is considered one of the best pictures of his career. Crowded with thrills, bristling with action, and interspersed with humor and songs, the picture is an epic in the long and brilliant career of Maynard as a portrayer of western characters.

"Lovers Courageous" Scores

"Lovers Courageous", which closes a successful engagement at the Belle Tonight, is the most delightful story ever to flow from the pen of Frederick Lonsdale.

In this story Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans vehicle which features Rosland Young and Mary Forbes, Lonsdale looks at life with a certain charm that makes his story and characters poignantly appealing. His tale is one of youth and romance, is tender and touching narrative, not lacking in typical Lonsdale humor, that makes the picture a pleasure to behold in these trying days.

At The Capitol

IS NEW LILLIAN GISH

"A lily in the mud."

This is the description that is being applied to Anita Louise in her big role in "Dream on Earth," the Universal drama in which she is appearing opposite Lew Ayres at the Capitol Theatre.

A frail blonde beauty almost ethereal in her loveliness, the youthful Anita's seen throughout the picture as a "white trash" child of the South, living among the shiftless, "shanty-boaters" of the Mississippi River, and clad in a tattered dress of calico fashioned from gunny sacking. Her greatest treasure is a necklace formed of several safety pins looped together.

Just the same, this slip of a girl who is playing her first "grown up" role is the screen's successor to Lillian Gish. She has been on the screen in kid parts for ten years.

Ayres' supporting cast in "Dream on Earth" in addition to Miss Louise, includes Henry Batesford, Mitchell Patterson, Chief Grasping Win, Lew Kelly, Al. J. Baron, Harlan Knight, Robert Burns and many others. Russell Mack directed.

On the same programme is a screen novelty par excellence. In this we see a menagerie, a real-life annual stage a fight with a cobra snake, and stills it.

A clever ventriloquist's act and a very spooky concert complete a thrill packed programme the which every member of the family will enjoy. Tonight is Silverware Cliff Night for the ladies.

Coming Broad Scene:

The famous Pauline prize drama by Elmer Rice arrives at the Capitol on Saturday. More particulars of this four star production will be forthcoming tomorrow in this column.

MILK POOL MAY BE SOLUTION

Secretary Makes Plea For Unity Among Producers

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP)—A deficit of $2,500 was shown in the fiscalistal statement submitted to the 26th Annual Convention of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association here Wednesday. The secretary said government grants and other contributions would reduce the deficit to $296. Total receipts from all sources amounted to $21,234 and cash on hand $282. Publication of the "Milk Producer" brought $10,486.

"Those produced in the dairy industry have perhaps suffered less than any other branch of agriculture during the past year," Rufus Beam, president, said in his address. "Accusations have been made that the distributors are trying to force the price of milk down to the producer, but I am not going to discuss the truth of that," Mr. Beam said.

Better Price Than Factory

"Producers bring milk in to the distributor and get better prices for more uniform price," he added.

"A milk pool may be the solution of our present problems," Secretary O. P. Griffin suggested. He referred to the difference between milk for human consumption and for manufacturing purposes and made a plea for unity among producers. A pool of that type, he stated, would give each producer the same price for his product, no matter in what way the product was sold.

Is than at the cheese, condensed or powdered milk factories and cereries, he said. Distributors are business men, he asserted, and you cannot blame them for buying.

Referring to the difference in milk prices for dairies and for milk product factories, Mr. Beam remarked that with this apparent difference in prices there could be no point in trying to hold the price up. "The time is coming when it is inevitable that the value of milk for all purposes will have to come to a

Predictions that the capitalistic system is on the verge of collapse are often, no doubt, a case of the wish being father to the thought; but that all is not perfect in present day society will be admitted. COMMUNIST PARTY IS UNLAWFUL IN CANADA

Ontario Supreme Court Rules Eight Men Must Serve Full Prison Terms

Ample Proof of Membership Body Parent of Canadian Organization

NO CONSPIRACY

Party Statutes "Bristled With Declarations of Force"

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 19 — (Canadian Press)—The Communist party of Canada is an unlawful association. This was the ruling of the Supreme Court of Ontario today in dismissing the appeal of eight members of the party from their conviction and sentence on a charge of being and acting as members of an unlawful association. Another count, that of seditious conspiracy—was found "bad" by the court.

There will be no interference with sentences of the eight men in action now. For each of them they sentenced to five years on the first two counts and two years' imprisonment, while the eighth was sentenced to two and one years. Since the terms were concurrent, they will have to serve the full time in prison, it depended upon Term.

The men are: Tim Buck, Sam Scott, John Boychuk, Jack Kent Hill, Malcolm, L. E., Samuel Cohen, Sidney Popovich and Thomas Bell.

All except Cacic were sentenced in the fall of 1931, when he was given a two and one year term of imprisonment. All except Cacic, a native of Canada, will be deported at the expiration of their term.

Following their conviction by Justice W. H. Wright last November, the men appealed to the Supreme Court and were heard by Chief Justice William Mulock, Chief Justice; with Justices W. E. Middleton, D. C. Grant, J. F. Orde and Wm. Renton.

The court reserved its judgment until today, when Mr. Justice presented its findings to a crowded courtroom.

Part of Moscow Body.

The men were charged with the seditious conspiracy and with being and acting as members of an unlawful association, the Communist party, after cancellation, and would not have been included in the indictment.

Much evidence had been scanned with regard to the relationship between the Communist Party of Canada and the Communist International of Russia, and there was ample proof that the Canadian organization was a part of the Moscow body.

In 1920, a meeting of the Communist International was held at Moscow, when theses and statutes of the organization had been adopted. The following year, a meeting was held in Toronto at which the Canadian party adopted these theses and statutes. It had been proven, continued, the Communist International and decided the policies of the Canadian body.

Statutes Advocates Changes

So that the court might determine whether the purposes, aims, teachings and acts of the Canadian party were unlawful, reference had been made to the theses and statutes of the International. They had been studied with infinite care. There was much evidence that the party statutes advocated changes in government by force and violence.

"They bristled with declarations to that effect," declared the chief justice.

"Thus it follows that, the Canadian party having adopted the Communist methods decided upon by the Communist International, Russia. These men are members of an illegal organization, a Communist party which advocates the overthrow of government by force and violence, unlawful in Canada, and the communist international, against the overthrow of State and Government by force and violence and the creation of a dictatorship of the proletariat."

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP)—Theodore Heibner today was sentenced to one year definite and one year indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory. He was convicted of criminal negligence in connection with the death last month of Charles Moody, killed by Heibner's car as it mounted the sidewalk. Heibner had lost control.

SILENCE FALLS UPON BATTLE

Eye Witness Tells Story of Mad Trapper's Last Minutes

Aklavik, N.W.T., Feb. 19 (CP)—Albert Johnson's last stand, a gallant struggle against fearful hopeless, brief gun fight with Royal Mounted Police forces on the Rat River valley, was the scene of the battling trail trapper's two months' menace to Little Chief city's crimson-jacketed guardians.

Capt. W. H. "Wop" May, once war pilot and now the greatest flyer in Canada's far north, participated in the sighted at last by his police pursuers Wednesday afternoon, when he circled above overhead, saw him shot to death after wildly shooting it out with his foes with the lay huddled in the snow.

Retracking Trail

The Rat River killer was drawn into the sensation of his battling trail by Staff Sergeant Earle F. Hornby, leader of the police posse, met him. Johnson was back-tracking, unaware the police were so close, the story has been told.

When Johnson attempted to, Hornby and Constable Millen, another in scrub timber, Hersey and Corporal Verville, a trapper with him, opened fire. This ended Johnson's flight, he turned, dropped to the snow and started to fight. His first shot wounded Hersey.

Millen, coming forward a short distance and met the rest of the police party, was also subjected to the ground, almost burying himself in the snow, and opened shots at the mountie. None took effect.

Riddled With Bullets

Shots spattered around him, several struck him. He rolled over in pain. Then he continued firing back. Presently he was still and a few minutes later police closed in and found him dead. His body riddled with bullets.

Hersey was rushed to Aklavik by Pilot May; Johnson's body lay in the snow until Wednesday when May brought it in.

WILL OPPOSE CONSCRIPTION

Canadian View Generally Known at Arms Conference

Geneva, Feb. 19 (CP)—The Canadian delegates to the World Conference for the reduction of armaments, oppose universal compulsory military service, it is understood.

Canada's attitude towards this question, as stated by Hon. Dr. Dominion feels so long as great numbers of youths are called to the colors each year, automatically passing into the reserve after a period of training, there cannot be real disarmament.

The delegation is undoubtedly come up for discussion within a few days, and will be considered with consideration of article two of the Canadian disarmament proposals, dealing with limitation of effectives, or the starting debate on supplementary proposals submitted to the conference and advocating among other things the abolition of conscription.

Chinese Laugh Louder and Louder at Jap Ultimatum

Shanghai, Feb. 19.—The only effect the Japanese ultimatum seemed to have had upon the Chinese soldiers was to increase their hilarity and good nature and to speed up the programme of strengthening defenses and increasing the number of sentries along the road. For miles behind the Chinese lines the countryside bristled with defenses. The troops continued to "stay put" in the line all the way from Chapei to Woosung. Machine guns were being placed in position at frequent intervals.

WINTER HOPES AGAIN DASHED BY SNOW FAILING

About-Face of Elements Gives Shovels a Rest

EARLY FLURRY

Sleigh Bells Have No Chance in Friday's Storm

Snow shovels clanged unfamiliarly throughout the city this morning, and tinkling sleigh bells added to the Winter symphony.

Old King Winter did an about face, realizing that he had only a bare month left to reign, and sent millions of his little white coated regiment down to cover the city and surrounding district with the soft, white fall.

Back in the little bags went the marbles. Out came the sleds and other seasonal playthings once more as the fall continued and threatened to cover the ground sufficiently for sport. But not for long.

Storm Passes

Shortly after noon however, after the fall had reached its height, it abated, and only an occasional flake circled aimlessly down. The fall was, for a time, over. Banks of clouds and a soft wind gave further promise of more to come.

Local weather prognosticators declare that the fall will be heavy—several feet before it is finished. Others say that it is finished, and are hoping it does to enable them to get back to their jobs on the roads and help keep their seeds in the ground from wasting, as the claim will happen unless they do get enough to cover them before spring. But that worst the present generation is that it won't lagl long enough to make sleighing.

PAYS PENALTY OF HIS CRIME

William Wilkinson Hanged For Shooting of Cafe Owner

Montreal, Que., Feb. 19 (CP) Outwardly calm, but retaining to the end bitterness against the federate in the crime for which he was condemned, William Wilkinson ascended the steps of the scaffold this morning. He was hanged at Bordeaux jail, and pronounced dead 10 minutes later. Only a few witnesses attended at the hanging.

It was little less than a year ago that Wilkinson fired the shot that killed Joseph Ferris, cafe proprietor, and led to his being sentenced to be hanged. With Jack Sirpis, another Ferris Street bandleader, he entered the Dupre restaurant, 1,000 Ferris Street. They ordered drinks and sandwiches. As Dupre was in the act of turning to prepare the food, Wilkinson followed Sirpis over the counter behind and went to the cash register. While Sirpis was emptying it, Ferris was shot. Wilkinson rushed from the kitchen crying: "Come quick, I have shot the man!"

Canberra, Australia Feb. 19 (CP) —An overwhelming majority in the House of Representatives this second for the "Financial Agreement Enforcement Bill," the measure which will give the Commonwealth government the right to seize the revenues of any state which defaults debt payments. The bill was introduced yesterday by Prime Minister Joseph Lyons, and it has the support of the Country Party, of the United Australia Party, larger group in the House, and that of the Commonwealth Labor Party of Premier Scullin. Only the Labor means that its opponents will comprise a mere handful of extremists.

J. Arthur McKinney, Former Reeve of Tyendinaga, Dies

Has Been President of Belleville Cheese Board

42 YEARS OLD

J. Arthur McKinney, former Reeve of Tyendinaga Township, and prominent in dairy circles—especially the cheese industry in this district, succumbed to an attack of heart, which has been affecting him for the past year, at his home on the 2nd concession of Tyendinaga, early Thursday evening. Hastings County has lost a well known and highly respected resident, who always took a keen interest in the township young in years, but whose ability to grasp public municipal affairs, his advice on many matters being eagerly sought and most generally followed.

In Failing Health

The deceased had been in failing health for some time, being forced to withdraw his name from nomination at the last municipal election. Tyendinaga Township, after serving as Reeve the previous year, but he has been confined to his room only for ten days before his death. Arthur was well known in every district in the Hastings County, the members of the County Council recognizing in him a man having him serve on the Roads and Bridges Committee as well as other committees of the county council. He took a keen interest in all public affairs and could speak intelligently on any subject. He was especially interested in the Dairy Township and worked unceasingly for its betterment and was its best advocate on the floor of the County Council. He served on two separate occasions, retiring for a term of two years before coming back.

In church work, he was also interested, and at the time of his death was the Recording Steward of the United Church at Melrose. He was especially well known in the cheese industry in this district being for many years president of the Melrose Cheese Company. As an auctioneer in the factory on the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade, he made many friends and was honored with the presidency for that organization, a position he held with credit and honor. Personally he was a member of Craig Lodge A. F. & A. M., No. 40, Deseronto and L.O.L. No. 242 Shannonville, where also he was known as him his advice and help. The deceased was also prominent in the affairs of the Dairymen's Association.

He was born in Tyendinaga Township 64 years ago, the only son of the late John McKinney of Tyendinaga and the late Hannah Ruth Forbes of Prince Edward County. After his early education to his native Township, he took on farming and practically all his life has been identified with the agricultural interest. Left to mourn his loss' is his wife, formerly Miss Grace Pringle of Melrose, one son, Bruce McKinney of Toronto, daughter, Ruth McKinney, both at home, one brother, Fennell McKinney of Montreal. Besides he leaves a wide circle of intimate friends in this community who regret his passing. The funeral will be held on Sunday from the Church at Melrose and interment in Melrose cemetery.

CHOIR SINGER NAMES FRIEND

Issues Statement to Clear Others Who Were Mentioned

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 19 (CP) A man who gave his name as Harry Brightwell, formerly of Montreal, today was named by George Anderson, choir singer, who was shot on a lonely side road a month ago, as his companion on the night he was attacked.

Brightwell, through his lawyer, today issued a statement saying he had believed Brightwell innocent until told his wallet, which had contained $45, had been found by a provincial police officer on nearby railway tracks.

The reason for wishing to make public the affair, Anderson declared was to clear names of several innocent persons who had been linked with the case. It was not until recently he had learned of the many conjectures made as to the affair.

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP)—A schedule of salary reductions, effective as from January 1, 1932, is announced by the Hydro Electric Power Commission for its employees. PAUL PAINLEVE PUZZLES OVER HIS FORMULA

Mathematician and Political Expert Wrestles With Cabinet

FAILS TO WORK

Strategic Post of Portfolio of Interior at Stake

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Feb. 19 — Paul Painleve, famous mathematician and veteran politician whom President Doumer invited to form a cabinet, is puzzling over his formula. After 24 hours largely spent in negotiations and conversations, Painleve's "national equation" declines to work out.

When all seemed running fairly smoothly, difficulties developed over the ministry of the interior—considered, in view of the coming elections, a strategic portfolio.

Pierre Laval Premier

Pierre Laval, Premier until Tuesday, and Andre Tardieu, War Minister in the Laval government, both wanted the portfolio of the interior given to them. It was decisive in the condition of their co-operation with M. Painleve. Painleve proposed to keep it for himself. Hence the rupture early this morning, when both Laval and Tardieu declined to enter the new government. But Painleve still have further conversations with the two this afternoon, it is expected.

As the position stands it seems probable that M. Painleve will form a new combination varying more to the Left. It was considered probable that Senator Joseph Paul-Boncour, acting head of the French delegation to the disarmament conference, would be the new Foreign Minister. The cabinet was expected today to support any government, the primary function of which would be impartial preparation for the forthcoming elections, elsewise the up of existing business and the adoption of the budget.

But it is a constantly changing situation with many uncertainties.

Paris, Feb. 19 (CP)—It was announced today that former war minister Andre Tardieu had agreed to accept the post of Minister of State, without portfolio in order to return to Geneva as the head of the French disarmament delegation.

BOY EMPEROR ELECTED HEAD

Named Executive of New Manchurian State

Tokyo, Feb. 19 (AP)—The correspondent of the newspaper Asahi at Changchun, Manchuria, said that the executive committee of the new Manchurian state at a meeting there chose Henry Pu-Yi, former "Boy Emperor" of China, to be chief executive of the new state which was launched by proclamation yesterday.

A despatch to the Rengo News Agency from Changchun reported Pu-Yi accepted to call the office of the head of the new state tentatively, and would be translated either as "sovereign" or "chief executive."

Other Mukden correspondents almost ignored the election of the former boy-emperor. Their despatches accompanied by pictures of Mr. Pu-Yi appeared in afternoon papers today, the first time the Japanese have permitted the name of this mysterious high personage to appear. Correspondents generally have known for many weeks that Pu-Yi was slated to head the new state.

The term "Genaiha," reported to have been given him, left it doubtful whether he would be a monarch or a president. Reports reaching official quarters here said he refused to accept the office unless he was made king or emperor, insisting on restoration of at least a portion of the glory of the Manchu dynasty and the "dragon throne."

GOVERNMENT PARTY GAINING

This Afternoon Republicans in Ireland Have Only Four of Lead

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 19 —(Canadian Press Cable)—In mid-afternoon, after numerous changes effected during the lengthy counting process, the standing was as follows:

Republicans	45
Labor (Republican)	6
Governments	36
Independents (Govt.)	19

The Republicans thus had a lead of only four over the government with 96 out of 146 seats reported. It seemed probable that their lead balance of power in the New Dail would rest with the small parties, although the Fianna Fail at the present moment is the only party making any gains. It may be said, in any case the Fianna Fail candidate has headed the poll on the first preferences, which under proportional representation corresponds to a sweeping victory in a single vote one Dail. Private advices received here is 86,000 more than the Government's.

CAR OVERTURNS IN DEEP DITCH

Driver Takes This Course in Preference to Collision

Friday morning about eleven o'clock, Samuel Dean of the third concession of Thurlow was driving in his motor car to Belleville, accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Scott also of the third concession of Thurlow.

As Mr. Dean was approaching the intersection of the road leading from Tweed to Belleville, a car driven by her fourteen, he came suddenly upon a team of horses and wagon in charge of Nathan Clapper of Tweed. Realizing that a collision with the motor truck belonging to the Housepitality Service Station, both of which were coming towards him.

The truck was on the correct side of the road but the team and wagon it-is alleged were on the wrong side. Mr. Dean, realizing that he was driving on that side of the road, turned suddenly into the side upon, which he should have been.

In order to avoid a collision, Mr. Dean swung the car into the ditch, car overturned. No one was injured but Mrs. Dean suffered considerable shock. She was removed to and taken to a nearby house. She was, however, to return to Belleville, in the car, which it is said, received only slight damage.

Cycle Patrol Constable Frank Pitt of Ontario Provincial Police investigated the accident.

Battle For Control Causes Stuttering

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 19 — People who stutter can be cured by a scientist today as being like a motorist trying to "step on the gas" and apply the brakes at the same time.

A battle for control between "starting" and "stopping" mechanisms in the brain is the cause of stuttering, the American Orthopsychiatric Association was told by Frederick W. Rown, member of the committee for mental hygiene.

Japanese Do Not Expect Chinese to Comply With Order

19TH ARMY

Japanese Deadline 12½ Miles Beyond Shanghai

Tokyo, Feb. 19.—Japanese government officials engaged in a series of conferences late today which observers said they believed, were called to formulate tentative plans for sending heavy reinforcements to General Uyeda's army at Shanghai.

Newspapers reported that General Shiro Kaiji-Kan, Japanese vice-minister president, was leading a large army to Shanghai to support the 19th. route army which already is engaged in anticipation of the beginning of the big Japanese drive tomorrow.

Premier Suyoshi Inukai called upon Emperor Hirohito at the Imperial Palace following a conference of ministers which continued after the cabinet conferences the Premier left for the palace to see the Emperor.

Mr. Arakl, the minister of war, told the Associated Press correspondent that the possibility of reinforcements under Chiang Kai-Shek's command to send an additional expeditionary force to Shanghai.

96,000 at Shanghai

"Our intelligence reports," he said "indicate that there are at present 90,000 Chinese regulars and militia in the Shanghai area, including Chiang's troops which are reported to have joined the 19th army. If these reports prove true we may be compelled to send four or five expedition proportionately."

He refused to say just how strong a reinforcement he considered necessary, but indicated that it probably would require ten or fifteen days to put the additional units in Shanghai.

Shanghai, Feb. 19—Chinese guns thundered their tattoo over wrecked Shanghai today that was looked upon as the opening symphony prelude to the first world-shaking battle since the bugles blew peace in 1918 at the close of the World War.

Nanking, China, Feb. 19 (AP) — Wang Ching-Wei, the Chinese premier, said tonight that the Chinese national government had rejected the Japanese ultimatum to withdraw all Shanghai retired to a point 12½ miles from the city.

"The army will withdraw, he said, only to have advanced the Japanese also retire an equal distance. The French concession in Shanghai would remain undisturbed.

Word had been sent to the Chinese headquarters at Shanghai.

Shanghai, Feb. 19 (AP)—General Kenkichi Uyeda, commander of Japan's army at Shanghai, sat listening to a Chinese bombardment across Chapei tonight and spoke his mind on the ultimatum he had expected to be a tremendous battle.

"We have done all we can and are going to withdraw," he said, "but we will not retire from the position we have taken.

"There may be certain points of misunderstanding in the ultimatum which I have delivered to the Chinese commander. Let me make it clear that those demands are made headquarters at Shanghai.

CARS SIDESWIPED AT INTERSECTION

A slippery intersection at the corner of Front Street and Victoria Avenue contributed to a slight crash at that point early this morning.

A small car, attempting to turn up the Avenue from Front Street, skidded and sideswiped another larger car that had at the time approached the corner.

Except for a few marks on the fenders of both machines, where the paint had been scraped off by the impact no further damage was done. An amicable adjustment was made between them.

LITTLE CHANGE IN TEMPERATURE

Despite the fact that the weather yesterday seemed colder than today such was not the case as attested by the official temperatures. Today, high 33, low 16. Yesterday, high 37, low 13.

A strong north wind prevalent all day yesterday was responsible for the apparent coldness.

Winnipeg, Feb. 19 (CP). — A rush to close accounts started here today when the provincial government placed a moratorium for business at 10 o'clock. Depositors were lined up five deep and a block long when the offices opened and the number soon swelled to several hundred by 10.30.

SCORES DEPT OF HIGHWAYS

Winona Rector Blames Lack of Foot-Paths For Two Deaths

Hamilton, Feb. 18. — Officiating this afternoon at the double funeral of Mrs. Verna Robertson and Miss Nettie Stewart, young residents of Winona, killed instantly last Thursday night by an auto while walking on the highway, Rev. Mr. Short distance from their home, Rev. Jr. Mr. McLennan of Anglican Church, Winona, criticized the provincial authorities for failing to provide paths for pedestrians.

Rev. Mr. McLennan referred to the efforts made over a period of many months to have the Ontario Government provide walks, and said a survey had been made but nothing more had been done.

He admitted that it was unusual to discuss such a matter at a funeral service, but said that residents had approached him and he felt it his duty to impress upon the authorities the need for the improvements suggested.

"It is clear legislation of the worst kind when the Federal Government is able to grant tariff protection to those who request it, and the Provincial authorities have the money, yet fail to meet the request of citizens of the province who ask that their lives be protected," declared Rev. Mr. MacLennan. "There is nothing for the pedestrian, and under existing conditions parents do not know, when they say good-bye to their children, whether they will ever see them alive again.

"It is strange that we should spend ten to the North Country where there is work of an important nature to be done, and then instead of sending large quotas of our unemployed there, leaving the Government might well have kept them here and undertaken the improvements work outlined."

Concluding, Mr. MacLennan said the Lake and Dan A. Radial right-of-way could be developed as a footpath. "Why should it be said the men sacrificed while the people waited for cars, he said, and he referred to two other accidents that occurred near the same spot.

Chums of the late lad bore the small casket to the grave at Stockdale.

AIR FIGURES ASTOUNDING TO G. BRITAIN

Statistics to League Re-veal U. S. and Japanese Strength

PARITY PUZZLE

London (By The Canadian Press) —Publication of the statistics of air strength returned by the countries of the world to the League of Nations preparatory for the 1932 armament Conference which opens at Geneva have given rise to much comment and comparison here.

First among the surprises in numbers of military aeroplanes—though scarcely first in efficiency if statements made by French deputies in debate have any shadow of justification—is Russia, with a declared total of 1,667 "first line" machines. To this figure are added 450 "immediate reserves", and 883 "school machines", making a grand total of 2,000 aircraft. The United States figure is 1,753 in the first line, and a total of 2,000 "fully ready to take off of 1,507; but does not provide how many of these are included in the first line; Japan returns 1,355 "first line" machines and an aggregate of 1,939. Great Britain, excluding of aeroplanes on service in India, shows 796 first line machines, with a grand total of 1,454.

The Soviet Union has made no return, but knowledgeable estimates place the Russian "first line" strength at not less than 1,000 aircraft, and an aggregate total of nearly 2,000.

The British figures are dated April 1, 1931. They are listed in numbers since then has been small and the other countries making returns remain unaltered. Experts are astonished at the size of the United States and Japanese figures, both countries, and Japan particularly, for the latter's modern aircraft—which are ordered or projected but not built—is very small.

Thus Britain ranks sixth or fifth among the world's air powers in point of numbers, but if membership according as the Japanese figure of aeroplanes "on service" is a state of the national air service or not. The comparison is startling.

The Party Puzzle

Before the last general statement at Geneva is that task of reaching bases of limitation and international parity which will be universally acceptable. Limitation may be measured in numbers and in horsepower, and by restriction of each nation's power to manufacture any type of war arm. The problem bristles with the thorniest technical and political difficulties. Even the matter of bare "parity" to be established among the principal powers, Great Britain, by delaying the home defence scheme in many important ways has deliberately held back from serious expansion, but her position is still governed by the principles officially enunciated in 1923—the principle that her air defence force able to cope with the nearest, strikiest air force within striking distance of Britain's coasts. The deficiency indicates Britain's many solid contributions to the lightening of disarmament since 1918, when she possessed the largest and most formidable, air force in the world.

No degree of superiority in quality, in the range of speed and performance of machines, could in sudden, changed conditions be expected to close too large a disparity in sheer size. Will the Disarmament Conference, in the search for air parity, seek upon which to return to British numerical standards?

History of Royal Court of Justice

London (By The Canadian Press) —Perhaps the building which most readily strikes the eye of the visitor to London who passes up the Strand is the great pile which is the Royal Courts of Justice. When the Law Society held its annual meeting recently, its members not only marked the centenary of the Society but also the opening of the Law Courts. Most lovers of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas who listen to "Trial by Jury" are somewhat puzzled over the judge in robes and full dress at the Old Bar sings:

"In Westminster Hall I dunned a dance.

Like a well-despondent fury,

For I thought that I never should hit on a rhyme

Of addressing a British Jury."

For many centuries before "Trial by Jury" was written, and for the few years later, the Law Courts used to be at Westminster Hall. The Courts themselves made a sort of dance to the tune of the Courts of Law were at Westminster, though Readers of Dickens will remember the description of the Court of Chancery, which took place at Westminster Hall, and the case of Jarndyce v. Jarndyce encountered the Chancellor in Lincoln's Inn. Seventy years ago the law Society finally triumphed, after more than a generation of tussle with Parliament, for the building of a place where all the Courts should be sited and where the judges should conduct business in Chambers. In the 50 years since their completion well over half a million suits have been tried within them.

RECOVERS FROM ARCTIC FIGHT

Officer Hersey Wounded in Gun Fight Passes Danger Point

Aklavik, N.W.T., Feb. 19—This tiny Arctic trading post rejoiced last night, glad its famous bad-man, Albert Johnson, is gone, and glad that Corporal Hersey, Staff-Sergeant in the Royal Signal Corps and hero of the lead trapper's final desperate battle on the snowy tundras of the Yukon, is out of danger from the bullet-wounds.

Wounded in the final gun-fight yesterday between that desperate, sharpshooting Rat River hermit and the police detachment sent to hunt him, ably caught up with him after a three-week flight, Hersey there was virtually out of danger. He was rushed here immediately by aeroplane after Johnson shot him down and then himself fell dead before a whirling return fire.

MENACED BY GUNS OF QUARRY

POLICE PARLEY WITH FARMER

Alberta Man Wanted For Petty Thefts Dares Whole Force

TRIED TWICE

Evansburg, Alta., Feb. 19.—Efforts of Alberta provincial police constables to make a peaceful capture of Tom Chambers, farmer, were here, wanted for a petty theft, failed Thursday, but the police gained a new defiance at the officers.

Constables spent hours yesterday in parleying with the man, and stood under the menace of his guns. At last he expressed readiness to accompany the police, and then suddenly changed his attitude.

"Bring your whole force," he told Constable Reay late yesterday, "or I will shoot it out."

Constable Reay twice entered the man's home under threat of death and attempted to persuade Thompson that he should submit peacefully.

In the morning he spent three hours in the house while Thompson kept his rifle ready for action and in the evening the officer spent two more hours in the farm house arguing and cajoling with the man. Finally Thompson's wife and his nine-year-old stepdaughter in the house do not deter him from surrendering.

Officers will continue their efforts to get Thompson without bloodshed. He has declared that he has 500 rounds of ammunition and is ready to use it all to prevent his arrest.

Police have established headquarters in a shack 300 yards away from the house, and the home of the farmer is under constant observation. It is probable that a new post will be established at a school a mile away.

On Tuesday Thompson fired shots million dollars.

HENRY ASSERTS HEPBURN UNWORTHY OF CREDENCE AND ASKS FOR RECALL

Data For Liberal Leader's Addresses Drawn From Chicago Journal

PREMIER BITTER

Slap-Stick Style of Debate Pleases Gallery Crowds

Stormy Repartee

TORONTO, February 19 —Blunt charging that what he termed the anti-hydro attitude of Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., was based on the policy of a Chicago journal whose sole purpose of publication was to "kick" public ownership everywhere and that the Liberal leader was receiving newspaper interviews and in platform addresses, during the last year, has asserted for his doctrines in this journal, with the exception of "unimportant statements"; that his opposition statements, had in addition speech, in particular, had received instances that Hydro tubular poles from the pages of the magazine Premier Henry in the Legislature yesterday, caused to counsel the Liberal leader to be recalled by means of responsibility it should resell Hepburn and "drag him from office".

"He is unworthy to be your Leader," said the Prime Minister, "His unworthy of credence. He is unworthy of the confidence of any such great men as Blake and Mowat, and Hardy and Ross, and Sifton and Sandfield Macdonald and others, insisting my honorable friend (Mr. Hepburn) Sandfield Macdonald and others, insisting my honorable friend (Mr. Hepburn) should be the leader of the party in the House."

Claiming that it was impossible to reconcile Mr. Hepburn's practices of attempting to secure support with Hydro with his concurrent use of an organ directly built by the enemies of Ontario public ownership," Mr. Henry threw down a challenge to the elected Liberal members.

Hydro Questioned

"My Honorable friends," he said, "are all these things true? Are you not sitting on the same platform with him while he uses that document in Chicago, with Hydro as the key behind this sheet published in Chicago, with praise and commendation of statement in all its pages?"

Mr. Henry's attack on the youthful Liberalism of the Ontario Liberal Party came at the end of a two-hour speech, in which he scored the Chicago organ (published by the Utilities Publicity Company of 20 East Wacker Drive) and its alleged insidious attempts to "get" Hydro in this Province. By his blunt exhortations and persistency of his remarks, the Premier at times turned the House into a veritable uproar, which at length, forced certain members, Liberal and Progressive alike, to call for order, with him in bedlam and blunder; and at the end, he moved an amendment, calling, in effect, for the House to vote its faith and adherence to the principle of "power at cost", as acquired and administered for the people of the Province by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

No Election Soon

The Prime Ministers' address—the concluding half of the debate effort he began last Tuesday—confined to a general defence of Government administration, but, in spite of his appeal for co-operation from press and public to ride over the "trying times" and be intimated assurance that there would be no Provincial election at any early date, it raised something a ripple from either benchers or galleryites, until he got down to Hydro and the constant and ever-varying ramifications of the Hydro question.

There was no mention of the $126,000 Aird-Beauharnois payment. There was no mention of other Power contracts that have not been rendered "sub judice", as far as discussion is concerned, by the present Royal Commission inquiry. There was, in fact, no reference whatever to the publicly owned power enterprise of Ontario, except in regard to the alleged association of Mr. Hepburn with the Chicago directed propaganda. That reference, coupled with the determined attempt made by the Premier earlier in the afternoon to pin down the Liberal and Progressive group, man by man, to an expressed endorsation of Mr. Hepburn's Milton and Preston speeches and his general policy with regard to Hydro, was sufficient, however, literally to tear things loose.

Chief Armistead was one of the best-known officers in Ontario, and although his service extended back to 1894, when he joined St. Thomas force as a patrolman, he boasted that despite the arrests he had made, he had used a gun and a baton only once. He was a powerfully built man and before his illness weighed over 200 pounds. The ex-chief was born in Fermanagh, Ireland, July 13, 1862. He was prominent in Orange circles. His wife survives.

ECLIPSE WILL BE SEEN AT MAGOG, QUE.

Spectroscopic Work Contemplated By Party

NEXT AUGUST

Party Will Include Many British Scientists

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP)—Districts in Quebec, in the Magog, Lake St. Francis and Amos Vale areas and Montreal will be the gathering place for astronomical scientific parties, travelling long distances to view and study the eclipse of the sun, August 31, this year. The Quebec districts will form the central portion of the eclipse area.

Distinguished scientific parties are expected from Australia, Germany and Great Britain. A party from Cambridge, England, is expected to take up a position on the Physics Building of McGill University.

Dr. C. C. Rose of the National Research Laboratories, who is a graduate of Cambridge and Toronto Universities, has been invited to be a member of a party from Cambridge which is being organized by Lt.-Col. John Satchell, Professor of Solar Physics.

Ordinarily the size, shape and temperature of the solid portion of the sun can be studied with astronomical instruments, but when the sun is shining but the gaseous atmosphere (chromosphere and corona) around the sun can only be studied during an eclipse when the excessive light from the main body of the sun's surface (photosphere) is stopped by the moon passing between the sun and the earth. This is done by the light of the spectrum of the light sent out by the chromosphere and corona.

It is spectroscopic work which the party from Cambridge contemplates and the observations will be made from Magog, Quebec.

VICTIM OF THE STORM FOUND

This Brings Total of Deaths in Blizzard to Four

LAC DU BONNET, Man., Feb. 18 —(By the Canadian Press)—Finding of the body of Gus Shumwick, 16, who with his chum, Tonly Smalnik, had been lost in the blinding blizzard and intense cold since last Thursday, brought to a total of four the death toll taken by the storm, which swept Western Canada last week.

Gus' elder brother narrowly missed finding the lad, when he stumbled on a cordwood camp as he was on the point of exhaustion. He had been missing from the farm home since Monday and is now recovering from frostbites.

STOLEN FROM SUMMER HOUSE

Two Suitcases Dropped By Fugitives Belong To Port Hope

Early in the morning of February 16, C.N.R. Special Constable W. R. Probert noticed two men riding on the tender of passenger train No. 18, going east, and when he approached them they left and he made a complete get-away. In their haste, however, they were unable to take with them two suit cases and a bundle. These were taken by Constable Probert to the railway station office and upon searching them he found five bottles of vermouth, one bottle of champagne and a large and varied assortment of men's clothing, a camera, razors and other small articles.

The goods were turned over to the Belleville District Office of the Ontario Provincial Police and inquiries were sent out in an endeavor to locate the rightful owner of them. It was learned that the summer residence at Port Hope of Mr. W. H. King, president of the United States, had been robbed on the night of February 8th and the goods were found to be the property of Mr. King. Thursday afternoon the stolen articles were forwarded by the Provincial Police to the police department at Port Hope.

At the time of the robbery the house was closed for the winter. The caretaker reported the robbery to the Port Hope police.

FRESH BEEF IS TOUGH

However well finished a beef animal may be, unless the dressed carcass is allowed to hang for a while it will be tough and stringy. When it is first killed the carcass should be hung in a cooler, preferably at a temperature of 30 to 35 degrees Fahrenheit, in a dry atmosphere. In such cold dry air it ripens and sweetens and may safely be held for a long time, whereas in a warm moist atmosphere it will become sticky and sour. Light or very lean carcases are not suitable for ageing, while beef well marbled and covered with fat, as is the case with all officially branded beef, is well suited to proper ageing, ensuring a maximum of sweet, tender succulence and flavour. Such beef is usually "hung" from two weeks to a month or more and when put on the block for cutting is in prime condition—Federal Beef Grading Service.

CHURCHILL TO BE DEVELOPED WITH REASON

Baby Town of North to Be Taken in Hand By Manitoba Gov't

SET SCHEME

Business Men Will Be Required to Have Cash Before Starting

Winnipeg, Man. (By The Canadian Press)—Churchill, baby of the pioneer towns of the north, is to be brought up a good-natured child. She will be well-groomed and attractive, according to her guardian, the Manitoba government. She will have at least as many accessories as can be purchased with the stress of these hard times, but she must not grow up too fast.

Thousands of Canadians would like to grow up with the far-north seaport on Hudson Bay when it is to be opened this summer. The province, realizing the urgency and welfare of little Churchill, long-hoped for-prairie outlet to the sea, has orderly development that will assure the town against unemployment.

No Squatters Allowed

No squatters will be allowed to settle in the townsite, Hon. J. G. McKenzie, minister of mines and resources, has decided. Guided by painful experience in the cases of such settlements at Sandy Lake, Portage and Flin Flon, in Manitoba's central mining area, and Montreal will be the gathering place for astronomical scientific parties, travelling long distances to view and study the eclipse of the sun, August 31, this year. The Quebec districts will form the central portion of the eclipse area.

Distinguished scientific parties are expected from Australia, Germany and Great Britain. A party from England, for instance, is expected to take up a position on the Physics Building of McGill University.

Dr. C. C. Rose of the National Research Laboratories, who is a graduate of Cambridge and Toronto Universities, has been invited to be a member of a party from Cambridge which is being organized by Lt.-Col. John Satchell, Professor of Solar Physics.

Ordinarily the size, shape and temperature of the solid portion of the sun can be studied with astronomical instruments, but when the sun is shining but the gaseous atmosphere (chromosphere and corona) around the sun can only be studied during an eclipse when the excessive light from the main body of the sun's surface (photosphere) is stopped by the moon passing between the sun and the earth. This is done by the light of the spectrum of the light sent out by the chromosphere and corona.

It is spectroscopic work which the party from Cambridge contemplates and the observations will be made from Magog, Quebec.

Deseronto, Feb. 19.—Robert Merritt and Son, Napanee, Ont., have just been granted an R.O.P. orchards for the Merritt and Hodgenstein heifer, Elmville Walker Violet, recently qualified in the R.O.P. with a production in 29 days totalling 10,834 lbs. milk containing 566.23 lbs. butter, giving her the high and exceedingly creditable average test of 4.18 per cent., says Deseronto Post.

Deseronto, Feb. 19.—Three power fire cutting machines are at work on the mill pond these days and this has become one of the busiest spots in this district. Five trucks are being used to transport the ice to its various destinations.—Deseronto Post.

Deseronto, Feb. 19.—The first vehicle of any kind to cross the ice bridge at Deseronto this winter was a car which went over and back last Wednesday, says the Post. Every indication at the time pointed to clear, cold wintry weather and the opportunity for the North Fredericksburg people to visit the town for the first time in months to do their shopping. Owners of skis also saw the chance to get them out for an airing. But, alas for all that. The rain came Wednesday evening, it poured all day Thursday, the snow disappeared and the bay was left a sheet and in the form of frost a wonderful outdoor rink. Of course, with the first day of spring but a month away, we must not expect too much in the way of severe weather. One worst is now over or we miss our guess.

Campbellford, Feb. 19. — The Campbellford cloth mill is working overtime these days due to great measure to the advantages of the tariff wall of the Federal government.—Campbellford Herald.

Napanee, Feb. 19.—Walter Thurston, Harold Cray, and Edward Gray, appeared before Magistrate Ponton on Wednesday, February 10, pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to thirty days, and an additional thirty days if the costs were not paid. Norwood, Feb. 19.—Mr. Reg. Brennan who moved to Norwood recently, has leased the Royal George Hotel in this village. Local friends wish him every success in his new business venture.—Havelock Standard.

Havelock, Feb. 19.—The home of Mr. Cecil McMillan on the McKay Line, on the outskirts of the village was burned to the ground on Tuesday morning last. The alarm was raised about nine o'clock and the fire engines arrived in time but the house had too strong a hold. This was one of the oldest homes in the district and the loss will probably be quite large although considerable furniture was saved. The fire is believed to have been caused by overheated stovepipes.—Havelock Standard.

Warkworth, Feb. 19.—The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Bowling League was held in Warkworth on Friday night last, and was attended by Messrs. J. H. Moore, Reg. Brennan and H. T. Mathison of the local Recreation Club.

THE SKIN SHOULD BE

SOOTHED

A SENSITIVE skin should have frequent applications of rich cream to keep it from early fading and wrinkling. Any skin must be regularly cooled and relaxed.

The best time for applying cream is at night. First cleanse and tone. Then, using the cushion tips of the fingers, pat on the cream with definite upward strokes, beginning at point of chin and working upward to the cheek bones, over the jaw line, the neck, with slapping, lifting pats. Smooth into cream just under the skin where a "crepy" look must be guarded against. Pat for several minutes around the eyes and neck on warm and glowing.

Then dip your finger in Marmola Oil and put this directly on lines, on forehead, neck or cheeks to smooth and give flexibility to dry or flaccid skin.

Another treatment which you must not fail to try when you wish to look unusually lovely for an evening engagement, is the Anti-Wrinkle Treatment. This cream has been specially prepared to quickly smooth away lines and will be thrilled with the real beauty of your skin, if you use it according to directions.

HEPBURN SAYS "NOT AFRAID"

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—"Another of the famous Henry smoke-screens" was the comment of Michael F. Hepburn, provincial Liberal leader, when he was informed last night that Premier Henry in the Legislature had charged him with getting his speeches from a Chicago anti-public-ownership handbook.

"Any criticism I have made," said Mr. Hepburn, "has been based against the maladministration and conduct of the Hydro Commission and the Henry Government. I have always stood for the principle of public ownership. My whole efforts have been directed toward saving Hydro from the wrecking crew now in charge at Queen's Park."

Apart from this general rebuttal of Mr. Henry's allegations, the young Liberal leader said he could withhold specific comment until he had an opportunity to read full report of the Prime Minister's speech in the Legislature.

CONTROL OVER TAXES

What control the city council has over the taxes was made clear in the statement issued by His Worship Mayor Tice on Tuesday showing that the fixed expenditures total 50.5 per cent of the entire taxes, the other 49.5 per cent being used up for maintenance. Of this maintenance only a small fraction is left to the volition of the council. Deducting the cost of schools management and the maintenance of the police and the Board of Health, the council has only 22.4 per cent to handle.

Herein the city council members have to manifest their business instinct and acumen. Within the fairly narrow bounds set by the cost of the debentures and the other expenditures, the council has to find a way for everything. This includes so many things that the work of a city council all is large measure like a piece of carpentry.

This year the outlook is not so dark as retrenchment is believed to be in sight. Assessment has gone up considerably and it is believed that every effort is to be made to reduce the expenditure in departments so as to give a maximum of service to the ratepayers and other citizens at large as well as to provide as much work as possible within the power of the council.

Over six hundred thousand dollars a year is expended or handled in the town of Napanee by the various departments or accounts and destinations, seventy-seven point six per cent of it uncontrolled as far as the council has power.

HORROR PCTURES

What is called an epidemic of horror pictures is said to be subject to the control of demands for the protection of children in England and in the United States, who have raised their voices in protest against the thrillers. But some people who have seen the thrillers did not register the expected "creeps" to the horror and really greeted some of the wild scenes with laughter, are now wondering if their taste has been forever perverted and if what causes just a shiver or perhaps not even that in them is the proper fare for children.

One writer states that it is possible today for the adult to have become so gorged with horrors that he does not will a hair in the excitement. He states however that parents of many are refusing to allow their youngsters to attend wildly sensational films and some publications have listed the outstanding films of this type under a ban. St. John Ervine has said that the reports of teachers founded on statements of children as to the mental effects of these pictures show that the young are made nervous and unstable emotionally thereby. Educationists, accordingly, are concerned as to what should be done to prevent any injury to the emotional life of those who are growing up.

Yet even they are faced with a danger of acting in error for a writer in the New York Times states, "A child is willing to tell a horrible dream which he sees he was expected to have. Few grown people are able to see anything through a child's eyes. The very scenes which they imagine will haunt a child for days and have almost no meaning for him, while something like a wild west chase, seemingly innocent and comic to adults, will plague him for a long time." The same writer quotes a movie man as saying: "Kids don't want kid pictures." These were tried and the people who made them a temporary success were adults. Now the novelty has worn off the fare at the theatres given over to child pictures with grimacings and playgrounds and the whole family goes trooping to the horror pictures. And yet even these latter are beginning to lose their charm.

A fresh type is coming forward for their course seems to have been run. Horror pictures as made are often inartistic and are absolutely untrue to life and so fail because after all the present day audience thinks mostly of the things of this world which they can see and touch and not of the realm of horrid things. The horror depends on shock, but not on the truth to nature which makes the most lasting impression upon the mind of the spectator.

OLD WRITERS STILL GOING

Old age may retard the step of men but it does not seem to dim the light of the mind. Many elderly men are writing today and their work seems as effective as did that of their early years. Shaw wrote "The Apple Cart' and is at work upon another play strong enough to make millions rock with laughter and Gerhard Hauptmann the foremost of German playwrights who stirred the world in 1889 with "Before Sunrise" has now at the age of seventy years written "Before Sunset" possessing all the fervor and the dramatic power of his youthful plays.

DOORWAYS FORBIDDEN
By Aline Michaelis

These are the doorways forbidden,
Never a foot may go past
Into the chambers safe hidden.
Beautiful, lofty and vast.

Life to these portals may lead us.
Putting no key in the hand.
Never to answer nor heed us
Though we entreat and command.

Yet, though we linger in longing,
Never the door will swing wide;
Questions we voice there, swift-thronging,
Still must go unsatisfied.

Hungry, at doorways forbidden,
Hiding strange vistas from view
Pause we in hope there, though hidden,
Just for the dreams that we know.

LAKE PLACID had its place in the sun when the Olympic games of the world blinked and blazed all over this tiny Adirondack village. To have the Olympic winter sports in a community is a big honor, also a large undertaking, and one involving financial outlay of over one million dollars. Lake Placid villagers, however, have come to look upon millionaires and millions as everyday affairs, having developed a premier resort in the midst of the mountains for the Big Shots of Broadway and Fifth and Park Avenue who prefer to stop at a fifteen million dollar hotel, to any other, don't ya know, because it is more exclusive, and the service so recherche, or somethin. In any event the village folks and the wealthy backers went right at the Olympic apple and secured it. The state government gave a million dollars and the rest was raised by Lake Placiders in various ways. Now the great event is over and there is a deficit of $75,000 odd, which does not faze the promoters a bit—they say the publicity was worth every cent of it and more. That's the spirit which makes prosperous and progressive communities, and nations. Anyone can count the pennies which clutter up the change drawer but the business man with a vision can see the good will dividends blossoming a long way off, and is building for the business of next week and next year while he takes care of the present. His advertising is not altogether to bring customers into his store this coming Saturday but to keep them coming.

A CASE RECENTLY came up in the California courts after the demise of a cat, wealthy in her own name. She left a family of kittens but no will. But the trustees seek to retain the legacy, pleading that the cat died testate, and the money naturally goes to "the deceased's issue." The deceased cat's deceased mistress made provision in her will for her favorite cat, and with the death of the cat and the survival of the kittens the case threatens to become a "cause celebre."

ANALYSING OF THOUGHTS IS IMPORTANT

Freud's Method of Mental Probing and Other Schools

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
(Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

LOUIS E. BISCH

Nowadays people talk about having their minds analyzed just as they do of having a windy made of their internal organs like the stomach, heart, etc. Nor are such modern psychological processes confined to those who are suffering from mental disorders. So-called average individuals — at least persons who do not suffer from any trouble with their minds or nerves—often want to know about their own psychology. They consult a psychoanalyst, therefore, and have what might be termed a "research" made on their own thinking.

Sigmund Freud, of Vienna, is the originator of this method of mental probing. Modifications of his original ideas have, of course, been made. There are psychologists like Jung and Adler who have developed set up schools of their own. Fundamentally, however, the original psychoanalytic doctrines of Freud hold good and are practised all over the world, particularly in European countries. The vast literature, both scientific and popular, has been written on the whole subject. Its ramifications extend to pedagogy, appreciation of art, sociology, etc. Here constitutional and extensions of the field are continually being made. Some psychologists and psychoanalysts deals with the individual and exclusively with the individual who is a neurotic.

A neurosis is a nervous ailment but it is not functional and not of organic origin. In other words, when a person complains of indigestion, let us say, the cause—if the case be functional—is not found in any abnormality of the stomach or digestive organs. It is found rather in misdirected nerve energy, if you will, directed toward the stomach but started in the mind.

Heart disorders, various pains like headaches, dizziness, fainting spells, even certain types of paralysis—provided no organic disease of the nerves or muscles have taken place—may come from disordered thinking and be grouped together under the term "neurosis." In fact, many actual "bona fide" organic complaints can have their neurotic counterpart, and, to be sure, there are a hundreds of neurotic symptoms like insomnia, self-debasement, depression, morbid introspection, fainting, fears of various kinds, etc., all of which lend themselves to the methods of the psychoanalytic school of treatment.

What the psychoanalysts claim is that the unconscious mind retains and sets always lie in the unconscious mind, that deeper layer of our thinking which is the repository of our memories and experiences, most of which we think we have forgotten. Actually, however, we forget very little especially if some emotion is attached to the memory. It is these seemingly forgotten ideas or repressions, as they are called, which is termed "complexes"—seeking recognition from the conscious and so even fulfillment which, the analysts state, cause the various symptoms by which the neurotic experiences.

What neurotics can be cured by psychoanalysis appears to be a bit in doubt. That there are exceptional cases which can be cured by this method is also true. It requires a certain educational background as well as an intelligent one to understand the technique of analysis which is very complicated. But if a neurotic has never tried getting well he has his nerves properly—for thousands know through bitter personal experience of how difficult it is to overcome the marked neurotic states—it will be well worth while to consult an expert psychoanalyst either privately or at a hospital clinic and hear what he has to say about the particular case in question.

Title Questions On The Agenda

Ottawa, Feb. 19—The restoration of titles will again be advocated in the House of Commons when Mr. Mandel Lavergne (Ila-Cons., Montmagny) and Deputy-Speaker of the House, Mr. Lavergne has placed a resolution on the order paper which reads:

"That in the opinion of this House, it is in the interests of the Empire and the Canadian Confederation, that His Majesty and His Majesty the King to grant titles to his subjects he restored."

Some men, like modern shops, hang everything in their show windows; when one goes inside nothing is to be found.—Auerbach.

HEXAGONAL SYSTEM APPLIED

Wythenshawe is a suburb of Manchester in England. It is a prosperous region, about 5 square miles in area. It is to be developed by the corporation of Manchester as a city of model suburb and eventually will provide for a population of 100,000.

The news may not be of particular importance to Canada, but there is a connection between Ottawa and Wythenshawe. The plan for laying out Wythenshawe is incorporating the ideas of "hexagonal planning" also the laying out of some of its thoroughfares, and is prevented from incorporating it into all of them by the existence of old and historic roads.

The inventor of hexagonal planning is Noulan Cauchon, chairman of the Ottawa Town Planning Commission. Wythenshawe will be the first example of hexagonal planning to be recorded. We have seen a little of it in Ottawa, where an attempt has been made, and approved by the city of Manchester, and the improvements made to Mr. Cauchon. The town planner in charge is Barry Parker, who was also partly responsible for the celebrated Letchworth Garden City.

GALLOWS TO GAS

Nevada is a remarkable state in more ways than one. As the whole world knows, it makes a legal art of divorce. Well, now it has before this is a sign of an enlightened attitude in capital punishment. Not of a deplorable state of mind. Nevada has abolished hanging as provided by Nevada. It uses a lethal gas which will be more expeditious than a stout of rope and gallows.

We should never have been aware of the fact that Nevada for the unfortunate "accident" that occurred in the state prison. The story it seems that after a convicted killer had been strapped down to death somebody in Texas, conscience-stricken, confessed to another murder committed. This shows, incidentally, that even when humane methods are adopted there is room for error in the gallows. It does them credit, however, to abandon the methods of our forefathers long ago when they substituted the rope for the faggot. Why should it not be further advanced in this tendency to make the death punishment as humane and secret. For it capital punishment is not meant to deter others—and no one now defends it on these grounds—then it will gain less and quiet executions tend to embolden potential murderers!

Perhaps the most humane method of gas chamber however, is clear. It is that which "allows" the victim to lose the lead, is constantly moving away from capital punishment on the ground that it is a barbarous relic. Perhaps it will not bear to think of the gallows any longer, and so introduced its lethal chamber. In which the lethal chamber is used. The world will follow Nevada, perhaps, but it is doubtful if it will follow. The life for a life—or rather death for a death—and of law is slowly on its way out.—Ottawa Citizen.

HINDENBURG AGAIN

Now the call has sounded for the third time, and again von Hindenburg has not failed the Fatherland. He might well have pleaded any one of a dozen reasons why he should retire and leave the work of guiding the destinies of Germany to younger men. But the hour is critical. Germany stands at a dangerous turn of the road. Only the calm, resolute and dispassionate judgment of von Hindenburg, backed by the counsels of Bruening, can be running rampant through the land. Fear is grave danger that the people, already bowed down beneath a tremendous burden of reparations and the debts of war, may get out of hand if they have not the services of incompetent administration. Hitler is ready to seize the psychological moment. He has already made that clear beyond doubt.

And if von Hindenberg did not run for re-election, it is well within the bounds of possibility that Hitler might succeed in wrecking the present Bruening Administration. If he did, the consequences for Germany would almost inevitably be revolution and economic chaos. The aged President realizes this. "For me," he says, "there is but one national goal—welding our people together in the struggle for existence, and unstinting devotion of every German to the arduous contest for the preservation of the nation."

That settles it. Hitler will probably run, and the Hitlerite forces will certainly oppose Hindenburg. But the army will stand by the President, and so long as the army is loyal, Hitler may shout his defiance in vain.—Montreal Star.

Hall Crowded For Dancing at Centennial Function

Toronto, Feb. 19. — The halls, courtrooms and corridors of Osgoode Hall, where everything is usually so hushed and solemn, was a medley of chatter and laughter last night, as about 2,000 men and women thronged the spacious law library, passed in and out of courtrooms and corridors, and danced in convocation hall. It did not resemble like Osgoode Hall at all. For it does not happen often. Once a century, in fact. Or a good deal less than a hundred its first centenary.

Lashes Editorial Upon Stealing

Toronto, Feb. 19—The recent editorial in the New Outlook, official organ of the United Church of Canada, in which it was argued that it was not a sin to steal, if hunger caused the action, was severely by the legislature yesterday afternoon by Premier George S. Henry.

Enlisting the co-operation and support of many of the ladies present at this time, he said: "I seldom have any criticism to offer of the press, but I must say I do offer of an editorial in the United Church press of Canada in which I belong.

Little Benny's Note Book

I sent Mary Watkins a beery looking valentine, costing 10 cents on Mommy Simmons store, also today me and Puds Simkins was spending home from school and Mary Watkins was waxing in front of us and we started to wave and and assidently cawt up to her and started to wave at Simpkins her with her in the middle, and she said, I got the lowelest valentine from Gladys Manning, it was the most bewtiful valentine I ever saw.

No wonder, Puds Simkins said.

Trying to sound as if he was the one who sent it, and Mary Watkins said, Yes no wonder, and I happen to know who sent it.

Meeting me, on account of having write my name under the stamp and pasting Look Under the Stamp on the back of the envelope in distinct handwriting, and Mary Watkins said, My, what a bewtiful valentine, it had real lightaten lace all over it and a part that lifted up with angels flying around underneath shooting arrows into one harts, it was perfekly gorgeous.

O, that was the valentine I sent the one I sent you, Puds said.

I gess it wasent, I said, and Mary Watkins said, Of corse it wasent, because I know the one you I got, so that's a good reason why, because you dident send me any.

Certenly I didn't, I was able do you mean to say you dident get a grate big valentine all covered about from different colors mostly gold and silver? Puds said.

Why no I dident, Mary Watkins said, and I said, Of corse she dident.

Meeting because I never sent it and Mary Watkins said, Then I must of got delayed on account of being so delicate, it has stars all over it with real twinkles on them, and cupids with real wings that flap up and down, and its kind of clubfooted so when you squash it together it makes music.

O yeh, is that all? I said. Being ignorant as to what it was, for I got a calender attached to it, too.

Perhaps it got mixed up in the mail and Mary Watkins looking half as if she dident know what to say, satisfactful as if she dident want to say so in case it was true, and we kept on waiting, Puds Simkins and instead of better and Puds looking like he'd felt grate and Mary looking like looking as if she dident know how to say so.

HOME STRETCH DRIVE TAKING HEAVY TOLL

Rangers Slipping, Leafs Taking Them 3-1 in League Fixture

AGAIN IN TIE

Maroons Playing Brilliant Hockey in Past Few Weeks

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 19 (CP)— Unbeatable during the early weeks of their campaign, the gruelling National Hockey League home stretch drive is having telling effects on the ranks of the New York Rangers, for in their last five starts the Patrick squad have failed to record a single victory against Canadian division opposition. Last night the Toronto Maple Leafs handed the New York team a 3-1 setback before 12,000 roaring fans and jumped back into a tie for first place which vision leadership with Montreal Canadiens.

The Leafs' victory did not provide the only change in the standing of the Canuck group, for Montreal Maroons continued to show their winning skill of hockey in New York and marched to a 3-1 triumph over the Americans and strengthen their hold on third place. The victory sheet flurries on the night's program resulted in a scoreless draw between Montreal and Boston that left the Falcons, Bruins and Black Hawks in a four-way tangle for the second place in the American division.

Battling along for more than half the game without a single score the Leafs and Rangers put on a scoring bee in the final 27 minutes of play and ran in seven goals. Then with a two goal lead late in the middle period on a shot from the stick of Hay Jackson, kid left-winger, without his accustomed team mate Joe Primeau, the Leafs matched the pace of the Rangers in the final session as each scored three times.

Primeau made the count 3-0 for Toronto shortly after the final stanza got under way but "Butch" Keeling relieved the tension by driving Somers' pass through Chabot. "Happy" Day gave the Leafs three goals in front when he broke away with Fiznlon to easily beat Roach, but Keeling put the New York Rangers back in the unit shortly after by scoring on Murdock's assist. Pressing hard in quest for victory the Rangers in the final ers left Finnigan uncovered and Art Somers, Leafs' star crusher when the ice for a clear shot on Roach to score more than Fiznlon in a three-goal lead. Earl Siebert, who was probably the best man on the ice for the Rangers, got the final goal by banging in the puck from a scramble.

Current Sport

By The Observer

Dr. J. J. Robertson announced this morning that the Consolidated Hockey Club had returned his Robertson Trophy and had issued a challenge to defend it again this year. The Robertson Trophy has been played for for the past two years and Campbellford has been fortunate enough to win the cup on each occasion. The Hydro Town representative, Dr. Robertson that they would defend the trophy and also informed him that it was their ambition to win the cup for three years in succession.

The Robertson Cup Series has for the past two years been a big proud feature of the current hockey season locally. The series is of the challenge cup nature with the league winning teams of the section of the previous being eligible for the play-off series. The club to have the most participation in the past have been the winners of the Trenton Valley League and the winner of the Prince Edward County League will also be in the challenge the right to this fine large piece of silverware. Last year the winners were the Kingston City League, are also the champions of the province and would give most of the teams a battle royal.

Now the question arises, is there in the Belleville team representated in this past-season hockey series? Many times there has been donated by a Belleville sportsman, a cup for competition, but it is thought that this town should have a team representative to enter a cup in this series. Belleville is a little more favorably situated than most other town in the district, as they can enter a team from their City League and also one from the County League, thus providing that they win their respective leagues. It is hoped that a local City Council will see that this is only two teams are entered, so as a local team will be represented in the coming Robertson Cup Series.

This series of hockey games created considerable interest two years ago and if our memory serves us right the Belleville Arena was almost filled to capacity in that year. If this interest cannot be once again revived is beyond our comprehension. It can be if enough teams are willing to challenge for the trophy. (It is worth a thought, at least).

The following article appeared in the Saturday Daily Star yesterday: Clifford Houston, Geo. Pryde and "Barney" Potter, stars of last season's Milton intermediates, have taken up their residence in Peterboro. Well, well, now we understand just why the Prize are so anxious to have senior ball next summer. The worst we can wish for "Pete" and the envious of the Peter ites right now." Belleville could stand with at least two players; infielders preferred. But then the locals have been quite fortunate when the spring sun shines on the baseball players and baseball players start to collect at the local ball park. We have failed to see reason yet that the local Nationals have not been able to present, at least, one new face to the patrons.

Last season Belleville had a senior club, an intermediate club and two junior teams besides the the junior team at Point Anne. Whether there will be that many baseball clubs operating in Belleville this season we are not certain yet but at present, but, surely out of all that many material there should be players enough for one high class senior club. (It won't be long before the fans will know).

Both Montreal papers, the Star and the Gazette, are high in their praise of the Winnipeg, Olympic hockey champions, after their recent victory in Montreal. The Winnipegs defeated an "all star" team from the Montreal senior city league by the score of 2 to 1 at the Forum on Monday night. Both Montreal papers refer to the event and boldly state that the Winnipeg's are the most under-rated team to appear in Quebec. It is a pleasure to hear of at least one city in Canada giving the Olympic champions a boost.

In the same papers we noticed a despatch to the effect that "Hack" Simpson, the rugged defence man of the Winnipegs will attend McGill University next season. "Hack" is expected to visit his uncle, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, in the very near future. In fact he is expected to make his visit on his return trip homeward. At present the Olympic champions are playing in New York City.

While Lee Skiels' B.C.I. "puck-sters" are playing in Tweed tonight, Frank "Cunningham's "pets" battle the Napanee Collegiate at the local arena. The losing team, here tonight, will automatically drop out of the running in the loop. No team can afford to lose three games and over a week to do with the local B.C.I.A.A. now. The Skiels coached club have lost three more games to play, one on the road tonight and two at home. They look like the ultimate winners.

Under the direction of Joe Shortt the "all star" juvenile team, picked from the local Ki-Y League, have practiced from 7 until 8 last night. Tomorrow afternoon at 1.30 they battle the Kingston juvenile all stars at the Belleville arena. These "kids" are a credit to any town and the hockey ability shown by them last night was an inspiration to fans wishing to witness minor league hockey. Mr. Shortt had two complete teams out last night and they displayed a brand of hockey which would be a credit to a fair junior team of today. The management of the Belleville juniors would be well advised to call around at the local "ice cadets" early tomorrow afternoon.

Recreation Alleys

In the Junior League the Cubs won three points from the Cities Service. For the Cubs, C. Cook was high with 192-187-202—581 for the Cities Service, O. Lattimer was high with 183-178-222—583.

In the Major League the Moose won three points from the Foxes for the Moose, Dunn was high with 161-355-776—792 and for the Foxes, J. Batty was high with 213-201—614.

The high scores were, P. Drumm, 256 and 278; Whalen, 237 and 255; D. Dunn 253 and 276, J. Batty 213, 204, 235, Dr. O'Callaghan 250, L. Barrett 238 and 224, J. Legault 223 and 222, J. Cummins 237, 223, A. Macdonald 231, 226, D. Dee 216 and 220, Dr. Lynch 240, 227.

CURLING

Excellent ice, splendid curling and the best of good fellowship was prevalent at the curling club last night. The 4 games "Bob" Dever had arranged a spoon competition and three rinks were in play with the "Cap" W. R. Ponton winning the silverware. The way this old veteran is going he's going to add soon have a new set of silverware, "Cap" now having added three spoons to the collection. His rink, although not showing brilliant combination curling gave "Dewey" Dever-paper certainly gave "Dewey" Dever-ton and his highly efficient collection an attack lacking. "Tom" Hurley simply smothered "Doc" Vanderburg's combination shots, although the opposition helped considerably with his big end by taking his own second shot out trying to lift the counter big rock for Hurley rescuing. "Bob" Wray and excellent style, playing a strictly running game and defeated "Jim" Galloway by a heavy margin.

Handicaps played an important part in the final award and "Cap" Ponton is chuckling to himself.

Some fine singles were noticed as follows, Johnson 236, Wells 234, Cordes 214 and Jos Delaney 200.

CHECKERS

Widespread interest is being shown in plans for the checker tournament which is to be held at the local Y.M.C.A. next month. When the officials of the Y.M.C.A. first thought of staging a checker tournament they had not the slightest idea that the match would be one of so freely in Eastern Ontario.

Local players and the officials of the Association have been advised that players will be here from Colborne, Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg, Picton, Bloomfield, Napanee, Deseronto and other points closer to Belleville. They will make a remarkable gathering because of the fact that it will be a friendly competition between men who are interested in the game.

As there is no cup or trophy at stake, but merely the honor of winning the district title or championship, this competition is all the more interesting and plans for a future checker and chess club will be discussed more fully at the tournament on next Monday. The list will be pried off at 2 p.m. and playing will continue throughout the afternoon and evening. Everyone interested in the game of checkers is invited to attend the tournament next Monday at the local Y.M.C.A. as it is free and a large gathering of the finest checker players in Eastern Ontario will be present of the officials of the match.

It is expected that a number of curious spectators will be present at the match as there is plenty of the younger element, who have never seen a checker tournament and will attend through mere curiosity.

IN AND OUT AGAIN

A sport cartoonist can be easily caught napping, especially if he is talking about the local-trending of the Montreal Maroons' position on the International group club. I was. No sooner had I remarked that Norman Smith and had it engraved that he would be back at the Net than he been farmed out by the Maritimes, Stan Wakin being retained for the rest of the season. However I've let it go. Smith is sure to pop into the line again. He is one of the three regular goalies to be used by Manager Tommy Gorman. Dave Kerr was the first. Dave, who jumped into world fame with the M.A.A.A. team which won the Allan Cup in 1927, has also had very much of a show this season. Counted upon in the pre-season calculations to fill the bill, he did not quite stand the gaff and was sent to the Can.-American league. Tiny Thompson has done splendidly. Davey's quite big Marcel Paul Joseph Francois, was hurt, lugged in and out of the Can.-American league. Norman Smith popped up impressively. Now he's out and Tiny Thompson has returned his hockey around Toronto, name originally from Washington, D.S.A.

KI-Y LEAGUE

By virtue of their win last night over the juvenile section of the local Ki-Y league, topped the first place and complete command of their loop. Last night the Bulldogs experienced little trouble in defeating their rivals the Holy Name Society. The latter presented a smooth working machine-like team and never was the issue in doubt. They were much better team than the H. S. Society but the latter had most of the Bulldogs work at the local arena and are commencing to tire-ing and the results of the practices is by no means showing their good work in the Ki-Y league, in which they have yet to lose a game to date. Last night's score being 6 to 0 for the Bulldogs.

The Holy Name Society boys lacked a certain amount of teamplay with the result that they failed to score. For the winners, Geo. High was the big scorer of the night, when he banged three counters. Bill Lindsay helped the issue as did Howie and Don Lee. The rest of the team carried the puck well and well and it was the united efforts of the "Dogs" which spelt defeat for the H.N.S. lads. Both goal tenders were called upon to make many sensational saves during the hour's play.

Bulldogs — Don Lee, Gar Sinfield, Geo. Jeffery, Ed Payne, Cliff Howie, Jack Lindsay, Bill Lindsay, Stew McIlrath and Geo. High.

Holy Name Society — Frank and Ray Lee, Ed. Hall, W.H.A. Clay, O'Neil, N. Langton, J. Barrett and Gray.

Referee—Ken Fox.

PLAYED FUNERAL

New York, Feb. 19.—Four small boys played "mourn" in front of a Brooklyn police station yesterday. Nine year old John Elliott was the "corpse". He was placed in a covered cardboard corrugated box. His three companions dragged the box along the street toward Greenwood cemetery. A large police mounting truck approached, sounding its horn. The three boys dragged the "coffin" into the curb; then saw the truck bearing down on them, and took to their heels in fright... Patrolman Ott, at the wheel of the truck, thought the load was empty... He swung the machine into the curb. The front wheel crushed it... Little John was killed.

FINANCIAL NEWS

TORONTO BD. IS STRONGER

Inter-Listed Stocks First to Show Advance on Friday

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Toronto Stock Exchange inclined to work higher this morning, though still on a low volume of business. The local market was again reflecting Wall Street strength.

Inter-listed stocks were the first to take up the advance. Nickel at 9½ was up ¼ point and Smelters, recovering to 76, showed a gain of 1¼ points. Brazilian touched 14 and C.P.R. moved through 13 for a gain of slightly more than ¼ point. Ford was firm but unchanged at 4¾. The others were unable to make any headway. B. A. Oil sold at 10¼ at times and Superior firmed to 16½ but Imperial Oil was lower below 8¾ and International Petroleum unchanged at 10¾. Walkers softened, slipping over 3½ but firmed at later to hold unchanged from the close last night. Trading in the new stock on the list was not active, commenced with the common at 2⅞ and the preferred at 12.

ELDORADO UP TO $1.44 SHARE

Gold Section of Stocks in Very Quiet Trading

Toronto, Feb. 19.—Though irregularity was the outstanding feature trend on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in the form noon today was slightly stronger. Only a small portion of the list was traded prior to noon and the activity of changes were confined to a narrow range.

Eldorado met renewed demand and, after touching 44c, was up to $1.41 when taken at noon. Noranda recovered 25 to 4.40 and odd lots of Hudson Bay changed hands at $2.50, up 10 from last night. Ajax Oil, regardless a couple to $1.02, recorded the only movement among the oils.

Golds were a quiet section. McIntyre came out at $17.25, off 25, and Dome reacted 5 to $10.20. Teck-Hughes, which lost ground yesterday, regained 5 to $4.45 and Hollinger was up 5 at $5.05. In the cheaper issues Sylvanite was also sold fractionally, higher and Moffatt Hall was easy.

MINES ARE HIT BY POVERTY

De Beers Announces Closing Down of African Fields

Capetown, Feb. 19—It was officially announced yesterday that the De Beers Diamond Mines, the most famous in the world, have closed down. The Premier and Jagersfontein Mines are closing for a time.

The reason given was the dismal state of the diamond market. It is also known that there has been a considerable leakage of illicit diamond from other African fields which has operated against the recovery of the market. There are also rumors of a deal by the governments of Africa whereby the Soviet holdings in competition with the De Beers group.

Direct consequences to Kimberley must follow and South Africa is expected to feel a heavy blow thru' an increase of unemployment, loss of revenue, and drop in railway earnings.

RESTRICTIONS AFFECT SHORTS

Early Rise But Profit is Taken and Then Regular Upswing

New York, Feb. 19.—A monetary bear panic in the closing minutes of the stock market was Wall Street's response today to the short exchange's latest restrictions on short selling.

After a few minutes of feverish trading swiftly rising prices proved however, the market regained its equilibrium. Early upturns of one to seven points were cut in half by profit taking but the list as a whole again turned quietly upward for a time after midday, with trading perhaps more active than at any time in weeks.

The high flyers were largely among the favorites of the "professional" traders, which harbored substantial short interests. Eastmans shot up 7 points, then lost about half of it. Westinghouse was off as much as 5 at a point of its gain, then turned upward later. U. S. Steel rose three points, then fell back somewhat but American Telephone pushed up 3¾ and Consolidated Gas a fraction or more, before turning firm again. Santa Fe rose 3, only to lose most of its gain.

These movements were typical. Some issues actually showed fractional recessions from yesterday's last quotations during the morning downturn.

Brokers and traders were greatly confused as to what the ultimate effect of the new ruling would be, but since it does not take effect until April 1, several of the more experienced traders who were short of the market were said to be taking their sins about covering. The stock exchange's new rule, as announced last night provides that brokers must secure the specific permission of traders long off the market before lending the stock to short-sellers. It was acknowledged that this would considerably restrict the amount of stock available for bear operations.

Aside from the somewhat artificial stimulus given the market by the new bear ruling, the list was helped by Washington reports that the Glass-Steagall bill might be passed by the senate before the end of the day, news that the reconstruction finance corporation has already extended about $2,500,000 in loans so far this month, continued strength of U. S. governments in the bond market, and a strengthening of the dollar as against the French franc in the foreign exchange markets.

ALARM RELATIVES THEY ARE PLANNING TO DEFEND

Toronto, Feb. 19—Parents of some 1,500 children who are taking an education courses at Century Airways, Dufferin Street, have written to C. L. Murray, manager of the airport protesting against them being allowed to take flying and are beginning to fear that they might plan to come to the help of their country in the Sino-Japanese conflict, which is the expressed intention of many of them, Mr. Murray stated last night.

"I have had two or three letters from Hong Kong from Chinese who have heard that their sons are taking up flying with the intention of coming home and cleaning up the Japs," declared Mr. Murray. "They are believing the murder about them taking the courses and have asked me to stop them."

Several more Chinese have applied during the last few days to take up flying with the desire to help defend their country, Mr. Murray stated. There are 12 Chinese taking instruction under his tuteliage now and most of them have the intentions of aiding their country in the present situation, Mr. Murray said.

PAYLESS 10 MONTHS

Chicago, Feb. 19.—(UP)—Unless salaries are forthcoming within the next three days, Chicago's 14,000 school teachers probably will strike, announced Miss Agnes Cloherty, one of their spokesmen, last night.

"We're going to strike," declared Miss Agnes Cloherty. "We have patient—and payless," she said. "Now we're desperate. The only way to movement is spreading; teachers' groups in other cities are preparing a list of 9,479 municipal employees who have not resigned themselves to it.

"It's just an awful mess," said Miss Cloherty. "With the poor municipal employees in the muck of politics and graft and self-interest. We've just about lost faith in everybody and everybody.

Mrs. Ollie Driscoll, only woman candidate in the field, was elected today to the 11th ward post after twelfth count. Mrs. Driscoll is a member of the governing board of Mount William T. Cosgrave, and sister of the late Michael Collins, Irish Nationalist leader, who was ambushed and shot dead in a campaign against Republican terrorist-ists in 1922.

TOBACCO TO ENGLAND

Washington, D.C., Feb. 19 (CP)—Five million pounds of Canadian tobacco will soothe the nerves of the United Kingdom in 1931-32 as compared with less than 2,000,000 pounds in 1930. This estimate is reported from London to the Department of Commerce.

ICKENS' LETTERS REALIZE GOOD PRICE AT AUCTION

OICE OF DEAD POET IS HEARD

onograph Record of Vachel Lindsay Reciting

New York, N. Y.—The music of a ad poet's voice rang out in the ge ballroom of a hotel here re- tly for a hushed audience num- ing a baronass, a prince, a count a former heavyweight boxing mpion and 300 others.

In occasion unique in the art poetry, the gripping intonations Vachel Lindsay, who died a short e ago, were heard reciting "The ntains are Calling Me Again" at annual dinner of the Poetry So- ty of North America. It was a ngraph record, one of a num- of recordings of Lindsay's work. Now for the First time", Profes- Cabell Greet of Columbia Uni- ity told the gathering, "we are le to present a number of records ade by a dead poet."

At the speakers's table, Baroness ndenburg, niece of the President Germany, sat at her head and ended reverently, as did Gene ndo, another guest. The while ad of Edwin Markham, who wrote e Man With the Hoe", swayed unison with the live voice of the ad artist. "The old man said he ld it bat when Dr. Greet put on other record, introduced as "The ilosophy of the Future", and the ice of James Joyce, Irish writer, heard. Markham's eyes grew ist- ished.

"I'm afraid I don't comprehend t that" he said.

It was part of "Anna Livia Plura- ty," fragment of a work on ich he is attempting to make the language musical.

Every one had a grand time. Shaw emond, sonnets and globe wan- ing, told how he taught the Zulus u-jitsu and wished Mr. Tunney d there to teach them boxing. He lked of rhapsody and ecstasy and claimed the negroes would furnish e United States with some of its reat poets.

And Frederick Allen, an editor of arper's gave the poets pointers on ow to go with their poems after ey are written. He puncured the ditorial" that office boys dge the manuscripts, that an au- hor must never sell his work by ail but always "as the editor" all and that he must get a hance in the magazines. Also he explained why editors are adverse sending specific criticism back ith rejected manuscripts. It seems ey don't want to have the string f suicides preying on heir minds.

THE OLDEST FIELD ROOT

The mangel appears to be one of he oldest of our cultivated crops, ates the Agrotiologist of the Fed- al Department of Agriculture. Al- ough exact records are not avail- le, the production of the mangel an be traced back as far as 2000 ars. The evidence of its produc- on at that date is contained on an d plate found in an Egyptian rave. This plate represents a la- orer placing a large root on a able as a sacrifice. According to heophrast red and white roots re commonly cultivated in Asia inor as far back as 320 B.C.

World-Wide Amity

The Olympic Games are supposed to foster cordial international relations, and there is no doubt of the result here shown at Lake Placid, following the finish of the women's 500-metre skating event. Elizabeth Dubois, U.S entry, who finished second, kissed Jean Wilson, winner of the event.

BETTER GRADES BOOST PRICES

Renewal of Trade With England a Determining Factor

In summarizing the past year's activities the Dominion Live Stock Branch in its Live Stock Market Report for the week ended December 30, 1931, reports as follows:

"While largely a period of disappointing prices for the various classes of livestock, the past year was not without some compensating features, particularly in respect to the recognition given to the better grades of stock as practically every market session. It is apparent that of the major branches of the agricultural industry, commercial meat animal production fared better than any other. The two sustaining factors in the market for cattle were the renewal and expansion of export trade with Great Britain, facilitated by an unusually long run of grain-fed cattle; and the comparatively strong increases in the demand for Blue Brand and Red Brand beef, in all provinces where this class of meat was officially guaranteed as of good to choice quality, is being handled by the trade, its response to consumer appreciation. —The Economic Annalist.

Farmers Benefit By New Regulations

The new hog grading regulations go into effect by promulgation in the Canada Gazette of January 30 and extend the provisions for trading in hogs on the basis of official grades in such a way as entirely to eliminate flat-price trading. Hogs sold from farmer or other producer right down the line to the final packer or processer must be traded in on the basis of official grades. This ensures to the farmer full benefits of the agreement with the packing industry whereby a premium of one dollar is paid for all hogs grading "Select Bacon." The regulations also provide for that premium for quality which is right, by his, passing back in larger measure to the original producer. Complete information as to grades and the procedure to be followed can be secured on application to the Department at Ottawa.

One Cent Fares Do Not Attract

London (By The Canadian Press) —The attitude of Scotland towards travel on "the Sawbath" has commenced changed in recent years, according to the General Manager of the Glasgow Transport Department. The majority of the citizens are day trippers, since before starting their travels. A few years ago the traffic was negligible after 4 p.m. whereas now it is heaviest after that hour Tram and bus services run in the forenoon for church goers have never paid, and never will pay.

The system of one cent fares has not proved of great service to the working classes, but is used by business men and others moving about the centre of the city. The withdrawal of one cent fares would result in the reduction in the number of passengers, but would likely produce additional revenue.

Peace River was o named by the Indians, and its existence first made known to Alexander Henry, an early trader, at the La Crosse, north of Prince Albert in 1776.

W. A. ENTERTAINS

Under the auspices of Holloway Street Church Women's Association, two hundred guests including representatives of the W. A. of Centenary, Stone, Aikins and Campbellford Methodist Churches, were entertained at a supper and program in the basement of the church last evening. The guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. A. Priory and by Mrs. B. McMurray, first vice-president, assisted by Rev. R. Noel, pastor of the church and Mrs. Noel.

The tables were most attractive with red candles in silver sticks and with baskets of red roses. After the delicious supper an interesting program was given with Rev. R. B. Neal, as chairman, welcoming the guests to the church. He called on Rev. Mr. Merrick of Campbellford, Rev. Mr. Bexsmith of Sidney and Rev. Mr. Butler of Bayside for addresses and they spoke briefly, responding to the welcome that had been given them.

Numbers on the programme were contributed by the associations of each church. A piano solo was given by Mrs. Hubbs. Mrs. Denton delighted with a vocal solo. There was a duet by Mrs. Moynes and Mrs. Mott and little Miss Helen Brown recited. Readings were given by Miss Reid, of Centre Church, the Misses Vermilyea of Stone Church, Miss Mills of Campbellford and Mrs. Spafford of Aikens. The evening was one of great enjoyment and the Holloway Street ladies were highly complimented on the success of their entertainment.

Golden Anniversary Recalls Devoted Service of Rev. A. Schuster

STORY OF EFFORT

The early history of "Belleville City Mission" now known as the Dundas Street United Church, is inseparably connected with the life and labours of that man of faith, Rev. Anselm Schuster and his excellent christian lady, Mrs. Schuster, whose lives are still fragrant in the memory of the poor they fed and clothed, in the hearts they comforted—the penitent they led to Christ.

Anselm Schuster was born in Frankfort-on-the-Maine, in 1834 and trained to strict morals, close Sabbath observance and in a fine intellectual culture enabling him to speak three languages.

His education complete, and having learned the trade of a jeweller, according to custom his wealthy father sent him to travel abroad in America for three years and finance, and him for that time, when he should return and set up in business for himself. During this time he left the "Arctic" at Liverpool, he was much disappointed. But ever after, thought it a providence, as on the very voyage "The Arctic" went down at sea with all on board, so he never heard of again.

Mr. Schuster visited Canada in a passenger sailing vessel, after a two months' voyage, where he heard his first gospel sermon and was led by the influence of the Methodists and the class meeting, to be a professed christ as the long promised Messiah and accepted Jesus Christ as the work of the ministry.

Very soon after his arrival he was called on the Wesleyan Conference to assist in the work at Hamilton and later on at a camp meeting among 300 miles in circumference among the open air meetings in the Grand Valley. Without money only as he earned it, he left in 1872, and was in christian his income from home was cut off—without a promised salary—penniless, he arrived in 1873 with 300 miles to travel each month over small roads, this wonderful young preacher of faith and prayer, yet believed it was a call from God and he met the challenge by giving himself to the people, sharing their poor lot and preaching them for Christ, and in spite of every hardship established Belleville a searching examination in Toronto on June the 3rd 1874, and was ordained into full connection by the Conference and ordained by the D. D. Dr. Pusshon a minister in the Canada Methodist Church and, after the 3rd night of the same year was united in marriage with Miss Mary Ann Hall, of Toronto, who became a true helpmate in his fruitful and untiring ministry, assisting, visiting, Palmerston, Napanee, Lindsay, Mariposa and the Bible Christian Church. The union was blessed with five children.

Mr. Schuster with the endorsation of the Evangelical Alliance and the Y.M.C.A. began his work in Toronto and on February 21st, 1881, began to give his whole time to undenominational work, travelling all over the south and east and beyond the North West, visiting the Prisons across the Bay. He visited every Hospital, Asylum, and kept records the names of non-churchgoers, children and abandoned, visited Sabbath the sick, the needy, the unemployed the friendless, the penitent, to the institutions of the unfortunate concerned. Preached each Sunday, organized over 20 schools, a day school for neglected grown boys and girls taught by Mrs. Schuster and Mrs. J. Boner. A Sunday School of 40 children attending the first Sunday afternoon, the first picnic across the Bay in the summer of 1881. Many converts were rented from time to time as the work expanded, and the annual report showed encouraging progress in the work insomuch that an adequate mission house and a church became an absolute necessity. Mr. Schuster who had also been no fixed salary—make no direct appeals for money and with the ever increasing mission work a work of faith, by regular weekly and special prayer meeting on the 10th of April, 1882 to pray God's guidance in securing the right sites for the Church and the to be built and the necessary money to pay for it. On the 4th of April, 1882 God assured them of his guidance in the purchase of the property to Mrs. Schuster—the deed being made out for the mission in the name of A. O. Northrop, Hooper and H. A. Hodgson, which was later transferred to a board of trust members. The money commenced to flow in and the last was given by someone gave a donation of brick, which helped to the walls of a church to build. The ground was broken on the 6th day of June and the corner stone was laid on the 25th, 1881 and the church, which cost $1,500, was completed December 30th, and when totally free of debt was dedicated on Feb. the 26th, 1882, when a tablet was placed over the entrance to the door, with this inscription, "Added of the Lord April 16th., 1882, received from the Lord, December 30th., 1882."

Sad to say Mr. Schuster lived but a short time to enjoy his new church and the work he loved, for on the 27th of June, 1885, in the 51st year of his age, he was called from service to reward. A beautiful bronze memorial tablet was put by his many Belleville friends marks his resting place in our Cemetery. Mrs. Schuster assisted by a band of loyal workers continued to carry on the work of the mission for many years, until she too was called to higher service in 1922, during her death the services were carried on by interested workers all of whom felt that the mission should have a settled pastor if possible. Early in 1924, The Ministerial Association unanimously requested Bridge Street United Church to take over the work and to be responsible for its services, which resulted in the addition of Centre Street and Rossmore churches, those lines of new charge which are taken over by the Bay of Quinte Conference in June 1926, and Rev. Mr. J. S. McMillan stationed thereon as pastor, who has organized the field and carried on regular services with the promise of growth and development.

The work of this mission from its beginning has been greatly helped by a number of consecrated christian workers such as: A. Bowen, Mrs. Bowen, Deacon, H. A. Hodgson, W. Alford, Chas. Bowen, A. Clapp, Mrs. C. S. Clapp, H. E. Holton, Mrs. J. Graham, Miss Lou Hall, Mrs. Jer. Mc. Mallen, stationed thereon as pastor, who has organized the field and carried on regular services with the promise of growth and development.

Dad Must Be a Pal

A father complained bitterly that he didn't seem to have any influence or make any impression on his adolescent son when he talked long and earnestly with him over his infractions of school rules. The son was polite but bored; listened to his Dad's remarks, while apparently thinking of something else; said he'd try to not let it happen again, and sauntered out of the room.

"I put everything I had into that talk," said the father, "but somehow I feel that we never made contact for a minute."

Probably many fathers have experienced this same discouraging feeling. There is a reason for it in this case, and perhaps in the cases of other fathers.

This Dad failed to get to the boy's inner consciousness, because it was the only man-to-man contact they had made for long years, and wouldn't have been tried then if the lad had not gotten into difficulty.

A father can't expect to have his son open his heart to him, to let down the barriers in an uncomfortable situation, if he's never had the chance to contact his father in a happy situation.

If so many families Father is saved as a sort of inquisitorial feature to be used when punishment is needed, but never brought into action as a pal to go with on excursions with his growing man-child.

The father who, with his son, loads fishing tackle into the old car and starts trouble bound, or spends with the boy for an afternoon will be able to get to the innermost of the lad's heart when the boy needs help in the troubles looms black on the horizon. The boy who has a pal in his Dad probably won't get into much trouble to begin with.

But the father who thinks he can play aloof from the boy's life and does except when a lecture is needed to straighten out complications with his preaching or scolding no matter how carefully he chooses his words or how wise they may be, does not realize that he is losing the boy's confidence and friendship.

Weddings

DENNEY—MAYNES

A very quiet wedding took place in Toronto on Thursday, February 11th, when Ruth Maynes, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Maynes of Latta was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Denney, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. David Denney of Sidney. The Rev. Harold Tyo officiated.

The bride was charming in a white satin dress with matching accessories. She was attended by Miss Vera Hall who was attired in a tailored chiffon. The groom was supported by Mr. Ernest Richardson. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride where a wedding reception was held. The young couple will reside in Toronto.

Fashion Flashes

Shoulders are back since they have regained their importance in the decolletage of the evening frock. A frock of black lace net in a floral design has huge scarlet ruffles of red velvet on each shoulder. This model gives a girl height and slenderness to the figure.

Mauve and orchid are the fashionable new again. A smart woman has a mauve bolero opera ornamented only with a hairpin with a large smoky pearl top and matching a pair button earrings.

Metals are rising since they appear in the form of a ring fastening the shoulder straps of evening coats. A coat of blue homespun fastens at the shoulder with two rings of nickel, while another coat, a brown woolen has flat gold finished metal buttons and a gold chain belt.

Crepe Romain remains one of the most popular materials season after season. A delightful new frock has a bodice of white romain that is lined to the skirt of black romain in a pointed line. It has a jacket of black romain embroidered with motifs of white beads.

Mission Appeal Home and Foreign

On Tuesday evening, February 16, St. Andrew's and Bridge Street Church was again favored by an address from Miss Millen, of Japan. The subject of the address was "Mission Work in Japan."

Miss Pelton based her talk on verses taken from the tenth chapter of Romans "How then shall they call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved." How then can they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach unless they be sent?"

The speaker pointed the work of missions saying "charity should begin at home." Miss Pelton pointed out by a specific case that missionary societies do not injure a dear ear by aid to their own doors.

The following were the reasons given for sending help to foreign need. We are all created in the image of God and all feel the needs of God. The created never finds rest until he finds it in God. People often question the work of missions saying "charity should begin at home." Miss Pelton pointed out by a specific case that missionary societies do not injure a dear ear by aid to their own doors.

At the eastern conference held on Mount of Olives where fifty-one nations were represented the different religions were discussed and compared, a parallel drawn and the result was the statement that "the cross is the standard of the greatest need."

Though conditions in the west are far from perfect and while there is a certain amount of social distinction in the world, christianity is the only religion that is the standard of God as that of equality and brotherhood. Christianity makes a great difference in the life of a nation as seen by comparison of the life of a man in a village of the east and of the west.

Lastly, if our own religious experience is real and deep we wish to share it.

St. Julien Chapter Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held at the home of the regent, Mrs. Ross. Mrs. E. A. Thomas, William street, and was largely attended.

The chapter has been very active during the year and the reports of the various committees showed this with much satisfaction.

In addition to the regular work of the chapter, a considerable amount of local relief has been assumed by the members. Twice every month donations were made to the Belleville Home for Aged and the Children's Shelter were given three baby cots with complete supply of linen and bedding. A substantial subscription was given to the Navy League of Canada and to Coe Hill was sent a supply of clothing to be used for relief within that district.

The following officers were elected for the year: Honorary Regent, Mrs. A. MacColl; Regent, Mrs. E. A. Ross; first vice-regent, Mrs. E. A. Thomas; second vice-regent, Mrs. Wm. Wilson; secretary, Mrs. Wm. Gilbert; treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Lang; standard bearer, Mrs. H. E. Rowe and Mrs. H. A. Singer.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 19 (CP)—Milk could be sold in Toronto at six cents a quart, allowing distributors a profit and without price to producers being cut, declared M. J. Pentland, president of a chain grocery concern, addressing the Retail Merchants' Association convention here yesterday. He criticized the recent reduction in the price paid producers.

Monkey-Face Does His Share

By Thornton W. Burgess

Each has his share of work to do,
And doing it to self is true.
—Monkey-face.

Two days after Monkey-face discovered that mystery egr in or on what Mrs. Monkey-face was pleased to call a nest, although nobody but a Barn Owl would have dreamed of calling that little mass of rubbish anything of the kind, there were two eggs. How they gloated over them! You would have thought that they never had had eggs of their own before. Mrs. Monkey-face began sitting on them at once. She simply could not help it. Then might be some eggs. There probably would be. The made no difference to her. She could wait for these Monkey-face felt the same about it. He would take her place while she went hunting. Sometimes while she was sitting on them he would hurry home with a fat Mouse and give it to her.

In a couple of days there was another egg, and another every other day or so there would be another egg until there were eight. Each time she shoved him a fine egg Monkey-face would swell with pride, and just as soon as dusk came would hurry out to hunt for a Mouse for her. He would even go hungry himself until she had been fed. Eight eggs were a lot to keep thoroughly covered and sometimes when both had had enough to eat, Monkey-face would sit beside Mrs. Monkey-face and help keep those precious eggs covered and warm.

It was warm and very comfortable there in Farmer Brown's barn although outside there was still snow and ice and sometimes Old North Wind would sometimes howl and roar. But the nights were growing shorter as the days grew longer, and somewhere down in the Sunny South Spring and Mistress Spring was already starting north. The shorter nights meant less time for hunting, but so far there had been no difficulty in getting enough so Mr. and Mrs. Monkey-face didn't mind.

"No one knew of those precious eggs save Farmer Brown's Boy. He had climbed up and discovered them. That had been a bad morning for those two Owls. They had hissed and snapped their bills at him, but they hadn't dared attack him and so could not drive him away and he had seen those eight precious eggs. All the rest of that day they had worried, but he had not returned. You see he knew how they felt, and he was so delighted to have them nesting there in the barn that he wisely took care not to disturb them again. Had they only known it those precious eggs couldn't have been safer.

So the days slipped into weeks and three of them and a day or two over. Then one evening when Monkey-face brought his Monkey-wife a fat Mouse she got off those eggs and proudly showed him something. There were only seven eggs. Yes, sir, there were only seven eggs. But an addition there was a little fuzzy squirming baby who seemed all head and legs and feet. The first egg had hatched.

"Isn't he beautiful?" murmured Mrs. Monkey-face softly.

"Just beautiful!" declared Monkey-face, swelling up with pride.

And that baby was beautiful to them for they were looking at him through the eyes of love, and that makes all the difference in the world. So, really, he was as beautiful as it is possibly ugly looking; for that is the way with baby Owls. But to them he was beautiful and wonderful and a great pride grew in their breast.

Mrs. Monkey-face slipped back and covered him and the six other precious eggs. Monkey-face lifted his head and sniffed the air and he. "There must be plenty of food from now on. I shall hunt as I never have hunted before. I'll see that there is plenty of food, so much you may dear. You can depend on me. Yes, indeed, you can depend on me. You'll always find me near by to do my share."

Present Drama In Centenary

On Friday evening, February 12th the play "Art for Heart's Sake" was staged in Centenary Church under the auspices of the choir.

In spite of unfavorable roads, a large number was present. The cast was picked from young people of Bayside Circuit. Each player had his or her part well prepared and each role was given in excellent style.

Stage and costumes lodged their best behind footlights arranged by Stage manager A. A. Thrasher.

The scenes of the play were taken from a fashionable summer hotel. Jack Creighton and Bob Sheldon, wealthy young gentlemen guests, are both in love with Jean and Dorothy Gray learn from Jimmy, the bellboy who is in love with Mrs. Gray's maid that Mrs. Gray is of an artistic temperament and is very particular with whom her daughters associate. Mrs. Gray insists Bob and mistakes him for Sheldon, the artist. He carries out the deception and introduces Jack as a singer. All goes well until the real artist appears and Mrs. Gray asks Jack to sing at her musicale. He cannot sing a note correctly and his practising annoys the whole house. Aunt Wallace who is staying at the hotel with her maid acts all his accompanists until the dreadful fat Aunt Mabel appears and declares she must stay for home at once.

Many interesting complications arise but the boys, with the help of the other members of the cast are equal to them all and finally succeed in winning the girls after proving the Count and Countess to be criminals.

The evening began with two piano solos by Miss Marjorie Calnan. Between acts Messrs Harold Thrasher and Don Carleton rendered pleasing vocal and instrumental selections. Refreshments were supplied by three of the young gentlemen of Centenary.

HOME AND SCHOOL

Closing the first year of organization with a splendid record the Home and School Club of the city held their annual meeting and election of officers. The report of the year was presented by the secretary, Mrs. F. Vickers, and showed that the year was one of most successfully. Although the monthly meetings of the club are held in King Edward School, membership is not confined to those particularly interested in that institution but all mothers of school children in the city are welcomed.

At the election of officers Mrs. Russell Smith who so ably held the office of first president of the organization last year was unanimously re-elected by acclamation. Mrs. W. Michaud was named vice-president; Mrs. William Harrison, secretary, replacing Mrs. Vickers, and Mrs. Carey Jones, treasurer. After the meeting refreshments were served.

Dundalk, Feb. 18—Jack-rabbits or English hares are becoming numerous in this district, though few hunters are smart enough to shoot them. PRESENT GIFT TO REV. COOK

Community League of Carrying Place Presents Program

Carrying Place—More than sixty persons who braved the inclement weather attended the regular meeting of the Community League in the church on Thursday night. As a special feature, many members of the Ladies Aid turned out and brought with them a splendid lunch which they served at the conclusion of the program. Following the opening ceremony, Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. Cook of Consecon, the reading of the minutes by the secretary, and the election of trustees, the president Mrs. Harrington, handed over the chair to Mr. Bill Hanthorn, the supervisor for the evening. A most interesting and varied program followed, consisting of a song by Jack Waller, a reading entitled "The Northern Highway" by Allean Hanthorn, several humorous sketches by Mr. G. Westfall, a dialect song by Fred and Howard Hanthorn, and an interesting account of the production and manufacture of wool in three parts given by Misses Girls, Lucille Waller, Marion Hanthorn, and Daisy Downes, a song by Mr. J. A. Baker of Gardenville, a humourous reading by Miss Edith Hanthorn which brought peals of laughter, and a "nation" contest conducted by Miss Elsie Pitchett, with, with Mr. Bill Hanthorn was an organizer of the program. Following this, Mr. Cook was called to the platform. Mrs. Harry Lalor read the following address:

Mr. and Mrs. Cook:

We, the members of the Carrying Place Ladies' Aid, have gathered here this evening to show our deep appreciation of the earnest way in which you have carried on the work of our church since its reopening last year. We have found you to be ever willing and anxious to help in every possible endeavor, and as a slight token of the esteem in which we hold you, we ask you to accept this gift.

Signed on behalf of the Ladies Aid, Mrs. R. Lalor, Pres.

Mrs. T. Green then brought forward a beautiful hand worked quilt and presented it to Mr. and Mrs. Cook. In her reply Mrs. Cook thanked them for their gift, stating that nothing could be any more acceptable to her. Mr. Cook who was quite taken by surprise expressed his gratitude and stated that his work in the church had been a pleasure, and that he hoped he could always serve in some way. The Ladies Aid then very generously donated the entire proceeds of the evening to the newly formed Community League. Lunch was then served, and after everything had been cleared up, the usual votes of thanks and benediction, the members dismissed.

The benefit dance for little Thelma Batchelor which was held in the Parish Hall on Friday night was well attended and more than twenty dollars realized. The band was supplied by the Harmony Kings of Belleville. Sweet and square dances were alternated with each other, and it was well after two o'clock before the dancing stopped.

Friday afternoon brought the annual gathering of children's aid to the school children. The pupils of both rooms were treated to ice cream after the afternoon recess; and after a short program the committee were given and later the girls served candy which they had made, and which was stored in the phonograph still dismissed.

Friends of Mrs. Percy Scott and of Mr. Harry Croff were shocked to hear that they had claimed in the two brothers within a few hours of each other early on Sunday morning. Mr. Scott, who resided on the Trenton road, had suffered some years with cancer, and had been very seriously ill for several weeks. Mr. Harry Croff who resides in Trenton, was not known to be in ill health; and his sudden death from heart trouble came as a surprise. A double funeral was held from the church on last Friday at Harry Croff in Trenton on Tuesday. Mr. Croff was for many years with the proprietor of the summer resort at Twelve O'clock Beach.

Miss Gertrude Kemp who is attending O.B.C. spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wannamaker.

Mrs. John Buchanan is still seriously ill, and is under the doctor's care daily. Many friends are hoping in wishing her a speedy recovery.

Divorce proceedings were carried on in the Parish Hall at Carrying Place on Monday evening when the members of the A.T.F.A. staged a mock divorce trial. After the regular business of the meeting was concluded, a jury was empanelled, and Justice Rev. A. E.) Taverner ascended the bench. Mrs. Fred Hennessey, acting the part of the disillusioned husband, is suing for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Hennessey (played by Bernice Davis), naming Mr. ---- Waterbury (George Lyons) as the homewrecker. Mr. Cliff Baker as attorney for the plaintiff, ably marshalled his witnesses. According to the evidence brought forth, Mr. Waterbury was discovered hidden in a clothes press off Mrs. Hennessey's room, dressed in one of her gowns, wearing her hat, and with one of her stockings partly pulled on. Mr. Arthur Harrington, the defence counsel, called several witnesses including Mr. Hopandjumpit, the Polish Janitory; Mr. McPinkelbottom, a badly damaged husband; and Mrs. McPinkelbottom, his wife, who was armed for battle. Several times the hilarity of the court room was disturbed by the furious flourishings of Mrs. McPinkelbottom's rolling pin but peace was at last restored in spite of her threat of vengeance. The trial lasted until after eleven o'clock. The jury then retired and returned with the decision that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a divorce. Refreshments were then served and the meeting adjourned. It has been voted to stage a Minstrel Show in the near future with Mr. Cliff Baker in charge of the program.

A general outbreak of measles in the locality is feared, as quite a large number of families are already shut in. The school attendance has been very poor this month owing to this and other diseases.

JACKIE COOPER AND KEN MAYNARD NOW AT BELLE

Jackie Cooper, the phenomenal towheaded boy who teamed so effectively with Wallace Beery and Jackie Robert Coogan in the first Percy Crosby story to reach the screen, "Skippy" co-stars again with Cooper an in a new shaggy-town adventure for the lovable comedy character "Sooky" which is featur number one, on the two-picture program to be exhibited at the Belle today and Saturday, matinee daily.

Paramount, which produced the first Crosby hit, in its successor picture has maintained as much of the original cast as possible.

In addition to Jackie Cooper as "Skip" and Bobbie Coogan as "Sooky" other members of the "Skippy" cast carry on in roles which they created. They are Jackie Searl as "Sidney", Willard Robertson as "Dr. Skinner" and Donnett as "Mrs. Skinner", Helen Jerome Eddy as "Mrs. Wayne" and Guy Oliver as "Mr. Mooge".

The story centres chiefly in the efforts of Skippy and Sooky to build their own cadet corps after they have decided that the grown-ups they have been neighborhood, are too snooty and need a ribbing. These antics, tricks, frolics and good nature, with and at the expense of Walters, brothers, their little pets and trinkets, constitute a luscious slice of typical boy life.

A vivid, colorful picture of the West, with its thrill of battle, touch of love and romance and rising passion will be presented on the same program, when Ken Maynard appears in "Sons of the Saddle".

Ken Maynard has every thing that goes to make a thrilling Western romance. Maynard is seen at his best in a hard-riding, hard-fighting, swiftly moving role which is counter-balanced by gives humor when he appears in the awkward role of a lover.

Two corking hand-to-hand combats, and numerous running fights make the film one teeming with action. There is plenty of the villain-ous element to keep the story moving along at a rapid pace. The love interest, although subdued, gives the heart-throb to the romantic story.

LAKE PLACID

With a sensational first-string forward line, made up of the fleshy Lenny brothers, Tony and Albert, and Freddie Carter, Native Sons can easily skate with the Olympic representatives. Their defence average may not be as tightly-welded as that of Winnipeg but the goal-tending of Jerry O'Brien it considered the equal of Cockburn, Peg goalie.

If the first Sons can master their second forward set into a formidable array they may earn themselves the right to defend the Allan Cup, won a year ago by Winnipeg in either case, Winnipeg will be represented in the play-downs. Eric or Pegs or Sons are capable of going some distance this Leap Year.

OUTLINE WORK FOR THE YEAR

Cent. Hastings Religious Education Council Committee Meet

Bonarlaw, Feb. 19 By Mail— A special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Centre Hastings County Religious Education Council met at the home of Mr. Herbert Wood, Crookston on Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th. There was nearly a full attendance and reports were as follows: President, Mr. A. Williamson, Bonarlaw; Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Sager; Secy-Treas. Mr. J. F. Baker; Supt. Boys' Work, Rev. J. R. Trumpour; Supt. Young People's Dept. Mr. H. Vanalstine; Supt. Adult Dept. Mrs. W. H. Hicks; Supt. Home Dept. Mr. H. Wood; Supt. Teacher Training Dept. Mrs. H. Rollins; Supt. Missionary Dept. Mrs. F. Jones; Supt. Temperance Dept. Mrs. J. McCaffery.

A letter was read from Miss Ida McCaw, Supt. of Children Dept. who is visiting in Scotland expressing her regret at being unable to be present and sending some valuable suggestions. Reports of Mrs. Jones, Supt. of Girls' Work was unable to attend.

The meeting was opened with prayer and Mr. Williamson, "You are that will not let me go." Before singing this hymn the President explained the Thanksgiving Campaign which it was written which was sung heartily.

Mr. Wilson asked for ideas regarding the Adult Study work and also in connection with the annual convention, which is to be held in June. Mr. Wilson was himself full of splendid ideas which, together with the contributions from the other members of the executive, give promise of a good year's work ahead during the coming months.

It was decided to conduct that this County R.E.C. endorse the petition circulated by the Dominion Women's Christian Temperance Union.

In presenting the Secretary's report Mr. Baker explained exactly what becomes of the 25 cents dollars and dollars asked for by the Ontario Council. Mr. Williamson then made an appeal that all Sunday Schools endeavor to have at least five cents per member to this Association.

It was decided that at the next County Convention some manner of recognition for Mrs. Williamson would be carried out and eliminate the necessity of a roll call, thus saving time.

After the meeting was closed a bountiful lunch was served to a large company by Mrs. Wood and daughters, consisting of sandwiches, tea, cake, tarts, macaroons, fruit salad, ice cream and fresh fruit, etc.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wood for their wonderful hospitality to which Mr. Williamson in that it was a real pleasure to entertain this committee at any time.

Queer Piggies on W. Ontario Farm

One Little Fellow Had Plenty of Room to Grow Fine Whiskers

Brussels, Feb. 19.—A cow on the farm of William Brennan, 6th line of Grey Township, has given birth to a freak of nature this week when there was born a baby calf which has one head and two complete bodies and four legs and two tails. The head was also decorated with four ears, two in the usual places and two at the top of the head. The animal was dead when born.

London, Ont.—Another freak—Shaw, farmer of North Yarmouth, had a freak of nature in the form of Siamese twin pigs born on his farm on Sunday night, the mother being a Yorkshire sow, says the London Advertiser. The little pigs were joined at the chest, at the stomach, but strange to relate, had a head, a tail, and the heads are back to back.

One of them made an effort to live, and for three days was fed lapped some milk. The other showed no sign of life, and the pair died half an hour after birth. There were eight pigs in the litter, but the others appeared to be freaks, followed by five normal ones.

Mr. Chase believes this is the first case of its kind on record in this part of Northern Ontario, and he is taking steps to have the pigpies preserved.

Apple Aroma Stops Potatoes Sprouting

Manhattan, Kans., Feb. 18.— Keep your potatoes in a well-closed bin with some ripe apples. If you desire to prevent them from sprouting themselves by sprouting.

This appears to be the practical hint to be derived from a series of experiments by the Kansas State Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dr. Elmer found that potato tubers stored with apples in closed containers until June remained firmer and of better quality than did a similar lot of potatoes stored without apples for company. Uniformly he found also that potato sprouts within "smelling distance" of the apples failed to develop normally. Growth at the ends was stopped in every instance. Just what this sprout-stopping volatile substance in apples may be, is not yet known. Apparently only ripe apples have it. It is not confined to the skin of the apple, for peeled apples seemed to be as potently sprout-preventive as whole ones.

FAMOUS HOME WILL BE LEFT
Taxation and General Expense Force Lytton Family to Move
London (By The Canadian Press) —Pressure of taxation and the general burden of expense is causing the Earl and Countess of Lytton to forsake their famous seat of Knebworth, Hertfordshire and to live in a small manor house a few miles off. For several years the first Lord Lytton (Sir Edward Smith) rented Knebworth and entertained there on a large scale. The present Earl Lytton is the grandson of Lord Lytton, the great statesman and novelist whose "Last Days of Pompeii" and "Last of the Barons" are likely always to be read.
Knebworth, as it now stands, is the result of the demolition of a great Tudor mansion, the reconstruction being carried out by the novelist's mother some 50 years ago. The present building stands on a imposing pile with its castellated parapets, cupolas and towers, and its multitudinous windows. There is a beautiful banqueting hall, with Elizabethan oak-screen and minstrels' gallery. Greatest amongst the novelists of Knebworth are the grounds, which are as nearly perfect as art and nature combined can make them. The church, which is not far from the house, contains the Lytton Chapel, where members of the family have been buried for over 600 years.
Lord Lytton has decided to open the house and gardens to the public on certain days, charging a small fee which will provide for keeping up the gardens.

Future Eclipses of Old Sol Noted

Ottawa, Ont. (By The Canadian Press)—Astronomers are hoping for the next eclipse of the sun which this year coming on August 31 provides an excellent chance for scientific observations in Quebec, the central portion of the eclipse area, have exact data—the day, the month and the year—a, which this phenomenon will appear in Canada until the year 2024.

The last eclipse was five years ago, 1927. There will be the one on August 31, 1932, and then a lapse of 13 years to July 9, 1945.

The next following eclipses, according to officers of The National Research Laboratories, will be on some 30, 1954 and February 26, 1979. With the exception of the last these will not, however, be in readily accessible areas and the next eclipse, after the above, of any scientific importance to be observed on this continent will, if the schedules hold out, be on August 21, 2007, and April 8, 2024.

Canadian Seed Corn Available

Owing to the effectiveness with which Ontario's seed corn drying has been carried out in southwestern Ontario the European Corn Borer has been curbed to such an extent that production has again reached considerable volume. Canadian-grown seed is always preferred because it is refused to Canadian conditions. To make this popular source of supply fully available for the coming season—the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa through its Plant Inspection Service is giving special attention to the inspection and certification of shelled corn for seed. While seed corn can be shipped out of a quarantine area only when accompanied by a proper certificate, this precaution ensures absolute freedom from the possibility of spreading corn borer infestation.

The larva of the Borer requires a host in which to be carried and it is much too large to lodge in a kernel of corn. Therefore, the Dominion Entomologist assures, when no particle of cob or stalk remains the shelled corn it may be safely shipped and used.

RESEARCH REVEALS ALL-BRAN RICH IN HEALTH-ELEMENTS
Helps Correct Constipation with "Bulk" and Vitamin-B; Also Has Iron
Recent scientific research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains two kinds of fibre to relieve temporary and recurring constipation. It has "bulk" to absorb moisture, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.
These two important food-elements promote regular habits, and relieve the need for drastic cathartics, laxatives, enemas, or other unnatural means of constipation.
The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild in action—much like that in fruit and lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of waste. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer and more palatable.
Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more wholesome than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming?
Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's daily—enough for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.
Besides, ALL-BRAN brings your body twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of lean beef.
Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

"STREET SCENE"
PULITZER PRIZE DRAMA BROUGHT TO SCREEN

"Street Scene", pictured from the famous Pulitzer Prize play by Elmer Rice, will be presented by Samuel Goldwyn at the Capitol Theatre on Saturday for 2 days. In directing the story of a warm-hearted romance and a passionate murder against the living screen of a city tenement, Vidor makes of "Street Scene" his most ambitious effort since "The Big Parade".

Sylvia Sidney in the role ears she still retains the talkie-vein acclaim that greeted her appearance in "An American Tragedy" has the romantic lead in the picture. William Collier, Jr., Beulah Bondi, Estelle Taylor follows her brilliant performance in "Chandelier" with the exacting and difficult role of Mrs. Maurrant,—which, to many of the New York actress friends will believe "Street Scene" to be much such a story of mother love as Goldwyn's earlier "Stella Dallas," is the most important of all.

Not so much with the street, but more so with the people whose lives radiate from its rusty brownstone houses, is the play concerned. A girl who knows nothing except the faithful, an insensitive, cruel father, a typical old Jewish socialist trying to read a purpose into life, brothers, the boy she loves above squalor and misery, a lonesome woman, hungry for social ones to talk to, an Italian couple of opposite temperaments, the baby that they can't have, the improvising poor—these are the strings that King Vidor weaves together and the play relentlessly moves toward the hysterical murder that neither ends the play nor solves life's mystery.

For the first time in screen history, the "Street Scene" of the picture is shot in its entirely within the confines of a studio. Reproduced on the stage outline, the entire action takes place on the street, mostly on the steps of the one house. The camera doesn't go inside the house and there are no close-ups. King Vidor and Samuel Goldwyn insist "Street Scene" be a play apart from the ordinary.

Most of the original stage cast were brought to Hollywood for the picture. Every detail of a tenement block in New York's west sixties was reproduced with the utmost complete authenticity, the houses, the pavements, the passer-by, street noises, traffic and the crowds duplicated, where an actual train was built to cross the tracks that are among the undertones of the picture.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

CHAPTER XI

Troubles of the heart were by no means uncommon at Dreamland. Ellen had no idea that her misery was evident to her foe of hearing, but the moment she entered the crowded, chattering dressing room, little Tony spied it out. She came over to where Ellen was dressing.

"What's eating you?" she demanded in a voice that blended curiosity and sympathy.

"Nothing," Ellen replied spiritlessly, as she kicked off her street shoes.

"Meaning everything," the other hazarded shrewdly.

"Please don't, Tony."

After a long, searching look Tony disappeared into the hallroom. Ellen stepped into the chiffon dress adjusted the cunning little jacket and walked out of the dressing room.

She sat down at her table. One by one the other girls straggled to their positions. The orchestra tuned up, struck into the first dance of the evening. Business had begun at Dreamland. It was a dull evening. Ellen looked around in a kind of sickness. She felt listless and depressed, tired of herself, tired of life.

After a while she began tracing little patterns on the table cloth. The patterns traced by her restless fingers became more definite. "Larry" she scratched on the cloth and then "Larry Harrowgate." After that slowly, slowly, "Mrs. Lawrence Harrowgate."

"Well, you're a fine one," said a familiar voice.

Ellen's heart gave "a great leap. She looked up into Larry's half angry, half laughing eyes.

"I waited for you all afternoon —that is, I really waited more than half an hour," he was saying reproachfully. "Why didn't you come?"

He dropped to the chair opposite. Ellen's breath came in quick, uneven spurts. Her heart hammered oddly. With trembling fingers she rubbed the chalk while he watched, a puzzled frown between his gray eyes.

"Why didn't you come", he repeated.

"I went to a movie," she answered truthfully. "I didn't notice the time until it was too late."

"Well" he commented, discomfited. A dark flush rose under his tan. "You sorta made me think you loved me," he observed.

"I did," she said faintly.

"You don't like me now?"

"Why shouldn't I?"

"I didn't ask if you should or shouldn't. I asked if you did. Have I done something bad. Has made you change?"

His gray earnest eyes were fixed upon her. She saw that he was genuinely concerned. It was dawning that he should be like this. She would have understood better, have been better able to resist him, had he continued to be flippant and casual.

"What have I done?"

"Nothing," she faltered. "I—I went to the hotel to met you but I got there too late."

There! She had said what she had not meant to say.

"Then everything's all right and you do like me," he summarized, his face lighting.

"Yes."

"What's over?" he said in relief. "Let's dance."

It wasn't over. Ellen knew she knew that he should have told her he was engaged. But as he swept her into his arms, as they moved out to the floor, she knew that, engaged or not, billionaire or not, Larry Harrowgate interested her more than any man she had ever met before.

Sunday morning breakfasts in the Rossiter household were invariably silastic. Mike, as usual, was up and about early. He ate from the kitchen table the prepared cereal and fruit which Ellen or Myra, or, more rarely, his mother, put out for him the night before. Sometimes he would linger over the newspaper, the comment to the despair and fury of the other sleepers. Generally, though he curled up with a book to study. He was one of those unaccountable who like studying. He represented the problem of the underprivileged city child who knew was the only way to play except the street and the street was no place to play. So he studied too much and his supposed energy turned readily to nerves and tears.

Molly slept late seldom stirred until late afternoon. Mike never disturbed her. Nothing short of fire or flood could disturb Molly Sunday mornings.

Myra and Ellen usually breakfasted in bed about noon, talking terms pressing and sketchy meal. This morning it was Myra's turn Already Ellen was aware. She sat up and yawned luxuriously as Myra came in balancing a tray containing coffee, marmalade, rolls, undercooked toast and coffee that would have been good had it percolated five minutes less.

"Umm!" Ellen sniffed. "I'm hungry."

"I'm afraid I've done the coffee too long again, observed Myra as she set down the tray and pulled up a chair.

"I could eat a leather boot," Ellen declared. She tried to break a piece of toast which bent under her fingers and laughed as she said "It looks almost as if I'd have to. You didn't have the oven hot enough."

"I never do," Myra sighed, "But try some of the raspberries. They should give satisfaction."

"Ooh, I should say they do." Ellen poured on milk with a lavish hand and admired the soft, blush-red of the berries.

"What were you thinking about for this afternoon?" asked Myra through a mouthful of toast. "Movies? There's a new feature at the Grand, Greta Garbo".

"I've a date," Ellen answered in a voice which she hoped was careless enough.

"Really! With Steven Barclay?"

"Oh no—not him," Ellen laughed. She hesitated and said, "It's with with Larry. Now wait a minute before you fly into me. I didn't go to the tea, just simply didn't go. But he came to Dreamland last night and it's—well, it's all fixed up for this afternoon."

"Then you think he's not engaged at all?" Myra asked in a voice which she hoped was careless enough.

"Really! With Steven Barclay?"

"Oh no—not him," Ellen laughed. She hesitated and said, "It's with with Larry. Now wait a minute before you fly into me. I didn't go to the tea, just simply didn't go. But he came to Dreamland last night and it's—well, it's all fixed up for this afternoon."

"Then you think he's not engaged at all?" Myra asked in a voice which she hoped was careless enough.

"I've a date," Ellen answered

WANTED BUT ONE PROVINCE

United Prairie Government Proposed Early in Century

Regina, Sask. (By The Canadian Press)—Amalgamation of the three prairie provinces for governmental purposes, recently suggested by Premier John Bracken of Manitoba, is not a new thought. Old correspondence files retrieved from musty government archives, reveal that Sir Frederick Haultain, when premier of the North West Territories, made a similar suggestion just thirty years ago.

When the formation of the province of Saskatchewan first was mooted and negotiations to that end were in progress, Sir Frederick, in a letter to C. Clifford Sifton, dated April 2, 10.., wrote: "With regard to divergence of opinion as to one or more prairie provinces, I might say that this is a difficulty which will always arise and which any postponement of action will not remove.

Wanted Province Larger

Sir Frederick always wanted the province to be greatly larger than was finally created as Saskatchewan. In support of this a resolution was passed in the North West assembly asking for one province that "would include all territory now occupied by the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan and a portion of Manitoba. In this connection Sir Frederick writes: "In considering the question of the area to be included in the province, it may be claimed that the area proposed is too large for one province.

After pointing to the areas of other provinces, Sir Frederick continues: "Our present cost of government only amounts to 10 per cent. of the annual territorial expenditures, which is much less than the percentage of charges for this service in the older provinces and indicates that the present machinery of government is well suited to the requirements of the country and can be extended much more cheaply and satisfactorily than any new government department can be organized."

All Under One Head

Under date of January 21, 1903, Sir Frederick wrote Sir Clifford in part, as follows:

"The government has presented the federal authorities the claim of the people of the Territories in a document which has been published widely. In that document the Territorial government has expressed its opinion in favor of the organization of one province only. Action upon the whole question has been postponed by the Dominion government principally upon the ground that there is a divergence of opinion respecting the question there should be one province only or more than one province—a question that I think the reason is one for the Dominions government to decide.

"There is a widespread and well-founded opinion existing throughout Canada against what has been called 'over-government,' or multiplicity of governments, and there appears to be no substantial reason for the formation of more than one province in the Territories. Much the more reason for considering that other proposition which has been made on the part of Manitoba, namely, the division of the people of the Territories by including within the limits of Assiniboia in that province a considerable part of the district of Assiniboia for the whole sentiment of the people concerned is against it."

In respect to the latter, Manitoba was given the territory indicated Saskatchewan thus losing valuable mineral limits, including part of the Pilin Flon mine. The merger of Canada's three provinces would bring under one government a territory having an area of 755,811 square miles, or, roughly, one and three-quarters the size of Ontario and one and one-quarter times that of Quebec province. Its combined population would approximate 2,346,221 persons.

STILL BUILD HUGE SHIPS

Many Keels For Ocean Greyhounds Laid Recently

Despite the depression, the race among nations for the biggest steamship goes on with little abatement, even though some delay is temporarily experienced, and there seems no limit in sight yet as to the cubic contents these ocean giants will attain.

The biggest ship either built or building is No. 534, the 73 000 ton vessel the Cunard is now having constructed on the Clyde. Second to this is the T-6, a 70,000 liner the French line is building at St. Nazaire.

The Conte di Savoia seems to come third, with 50,000 tons. This product of the Lloyd Sabaudo Line built in Trieste, has a special gyroscope stabilizer to overcome the ship's roll at sea. This ship will put Naples just a week away from New York, when she goes into action this Spring.

Italy also claims fourth place with the Rex, of the N.O.I. Line, 46,000 tons, now being built in Genoa. The Georgic, pride of the White Star, is to go into service this summer, while the Britannic, another White Star vessel, is still very new and very popular.

U. S. in Competition

The United States is not dropping behind, and the Manhatian, of the United States Lines, which was recently launched, is the largest passenger ship ever to have been built in the United States. The keels for two more big ships like her and perhaps bigger than the Manhattan, have already been laid.

The French line plan to put a sister ship to the Lafayette, the Champlain, into the New York, Plymouth, Havre run this year.

The Dollar Line, President Coolidge and President Hoover, are drawing attention. Motor ships they run to the Philippines via the Panama Canal.

The Matson Liner Mariposa, is also regarded as one of the really fine ships of the Pacific. Her run will be from Frisco to the Far East.

The Furness boat, Monarch of Bermuda, which boasts of every room with bath, is another new one to come into the 1931-32 picture.

The new Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Britain, is not as big as some of the super-giants, but is plenty big enough to give comfort without creating the idea one is living at a 2,000 room hotel. Her heavy bookings have been backing Canadians' faith in her.

Prince to Unveil Thiepval Memorial

London (By The Canadian Press) —The Prince of Wales will unveil the Memorial to the Missing at Thiepval, on the Somme, on Whit-Monday, May 16, M. Paul Doumer, President of the French Republic, will attend the ceremony.

Adjoining the memorial a small Anglo-French cemetery has been created to symbolize the sacrifices made by France and the British Empire during the war. The cemetery will contain an equal number of British and French graves and will be used for the reburial of the bodies of British soldiers still being found on the neighboring battlefields.

The Imperial War Graves Commission is constructing the cemetery half the cost being borne by the French Government and the British cross of sacrifice will be one of the main features. Upon this will be engraved the total joint losses of the armies of the British Empire and of France.

BATTLE AT SHANGHAI MEANS FORMAL WAR

Flanking Movement at Shanghai Begins When Defences are Weakened

Relentless Machine Creeps Inch By Inch Forward

HEROIC DEEDS

Pressure of Japanese Meets With Lessening Resistance

Pounding the Chinese from land, sea and air, Japan's army has begun a tremendous effort to blast the stubborn defenders out of the Shanghai area.

The Japanese announced they had taken Kiangwan Town but the Chinese denied it. The Japanese said the Chinese had shelled the destroyer in the Whangpoo River inflicting several casualties.

Apparently the Japanese were advancing slowly north of Shanghai through Kiangwan, to Woosung, using everything in their power.

Fight in Manchuria

There was fighting once another front in Manchuria, the new state, which has been dubbed "land of heaven." Chinese and Japanese forces were locked at Tunhua, one of the most strategically important towns in Kirin province. News from Manchuria said Henry Pu Yi, the former "Boy Emperor" would become the ruler of the new state on March 1.

Point of Thrust

Kiangwan, the central objective of Japan's terrific thrust upon the Chinese forces at Shanghai today is situated nearly half way between Chapei and Woosung, on the Shanghai-Woosung railway.

It is about 5 miles north of Woosung and a somewhat shorter distance from Chapei. It is situated in the centre of a pulling bulge of land which pokes itself into the sweeping curve on the Whangpoo River. The name of the village, Kiangwan, is translated "bend of the river."

Tragic Scenes'

(By James F. Wens)

Shanghai, Feb. 20 (AP) — There were tragic scenes today as thousands of Chinese refugees increased out of the Hongkew district and Yangtsepoo further beyond, into the comparative safety of the International Settlement.

An uninterrupted procession of men, women and children flowed south through the French concession toward the Chinese city further removed from the battle zone. They rode in wheelbarrows, carts and rickshaws, and some afoot carrying or dragging such of their belongings as they had been able to salvage.

Aimless Flight

Nobody knew where they were going, for only a small part of the total crossed the Whangpoo into the Settlement. The rest of them disappeared somewhere, probably crowding into the buildings and homes already filled with earlier refugees.

They were permitted to move freely in the streets except where armed guards with drawn pistols were at the boundaries of the Chinese city and the Settlement corners. They turned back comparatively few but nevertheless the sight of the poor frightened these people who were fleeing from fire.

Changchun, Manchuria, Feb. 20 (AP)—Chinese and Japanese forces fought stubbornly for three hours today in the streets of Tunhua, one of the most important strategically in Kirin province, but they were driven at with heavy losses.

Means War

Nanking, Feb. 20 (AP)— The Central Daily News, spokesman for the National government, said in an editorial today that the General's "ultimatum to the Chinese at Shanghai means Japan's declaration of war on China", and that today's battle there will largely determine the future of the world. Further civilization is to follow justice and peace and humanity or international law is to dominate by brutal force."

Campbell Tests Daytona Course

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 20. — Sir Malcolm Campbell drove a sleek car eighty-five miles an hour over the beach track here before dawn today to test the course and said he might make an official attempt to break his own automobile speed record of 241 miles an hour before noon.

The beach improved greatly last night and the Englishman ordered his racer brought on the sands. He said he would make a series of test runs over the track and possibly an attempt to establish another record.

Simcoe Wrestles With Short Weight Bread

Simcoe, Ont., Feb. 20 (CP) — With one exception bakeries selling bread in Simcoe have been dispensing short weight loaves, Mayor R. G. Berry told the town council during discussion last night on a bylaw to regulate the manufacture and sale of bread in the town.

This, the mayor said, was the finding of a representative of the Department of Weights and Measures, who, while in the town recently, checked the weight of bread from all bakeries and from those at Brantford, Port Dover, Jarvis and other out-of-town places sending bread here. In one case the shortage was as much as 8 ounces on the standard 24 ounce loaf.

The one exception, it was learned, was the McHutchin Bakery of Brantford. The council passed the bylaw which outlines proper sanitary methods of manufacture and number of Police West as bread inspector.

WASHINGTON'S BI-CENTENARY IS OBSERVED

President Hoover Inaugurates Ceremony on Sunday

COSTUME BALL

Parades and Fetes Held Throughout Ensuing Months

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20 (By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Under political conditions inducing a resurgence of the "isolation" policy laid down by "the father of his country," the United States is prepared today to begin the celebration of the Bi-Centennial of George Washington's birth.

Sunday the pilots of the nation take account of Washington and on Monday a joint Presidential Hoover will formally inaugurate the year's celebration with an address to a joint session of the House and Senate.

Sousa to Lead

In the east plaza at the capitol will be massed the Army, Navy and Marine Bands to be directed by Phillip Sousa, the famous composer of marches. Walter Damrosch conductor of the New York Symphony, will lead a chorus of ten thousand voices in appropriate hymns to Washington.

The year long celebration will naturally centre in the capital but its features will be repeated at many other cities. Motion pictures of Washington, "the father of the Capital," the production of which was directed by the bi-centennial commission during the seven years o preparation for the celebration, will be shown throughout the country.

Original Colonies

On Monday evening there will be a concert in Constitution Hall, ten representatives from each of the thirteen original colonies, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, Delaware, will take a leading part in the ceremony. Wakefield to be given in Constitution Hall. Miss Anglin will represent Maryland, Miss Foltz, Virginia, and Miss Roberts, Georgia.

Throughout the ensuing months there will be parades and pageants after the other, Army Day, May 5, Memorial Day, in honor of Mary Ball Washington; Memorial Day and the Fourth of July will this year be dedicated to the memory of Washington. INVESTIGATOR PROBES CASES

Relief Must Be Necessary Before Given Says Mayor

In an interview with a reporter of this paper Mayor Geo. Tice referred to rumors to the effect that a number of people of this city were trying to obtain relief from the city who were not in the least need of it.

"This practise will have to stop," declared the mayor. "Work is being greatly hampered because some people it is believed, continually misrepresent themselves and make necessary investigations to find out if they are in need or not. While there are a number of very worthy cases still there are a number who are getting, or trying to get, relief without being entitled to it. In the future if there are such cases, offenders when tracked down by the investigator will be dealt with by order of the city, will be punished to the full extent of the law.

"Our city is in an enviable condition and we meant to keep it that way. We are doing all we can to help the bona fide residents who are up against it and we do not intend to be hampered any longer by the ones who are merely after what they may get. Eventually these people will be found out and when they are it will go hard with them."

SWEAR SEAL AT SANDBANKS

Six Fishermen Have No Doubt of Antics of Animal

Six men cutting ice on the lake near Lakeshore House, at the Sandbanks paused in their labors last week, rubbed their eyes, looked again and saw a real live seal jump off a cake of ice that had been sliding on flip into the water and swim away. Later he reappeared, snorted once or twice, dove again and disappeared. Means, Hyatt, Jones, McDonald, Bruce McDonald, John Stanton, H. Huff and Garfield Mayne, are officially stated Gazette, locked at each other and looked back at the ice cake which still floated in the open water.

"Did you see what I saw?" asked Amos. "It was a seal," remarked Will . . . "Six feet long," guessed Bruce . . . "It was silver, and had whiskers," added John . . . "And what do you know about that!" Declared Garfield, still gazing at the spot the animal had last disappeared.

Last summer it was "sea serpents" which kept the lake front in an uproar and made children wary of swimming in locations where deep

Secret Cellar Found In Old Ottawa Home

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 20 (CP)—During recent repairs in the basement of the old Ferley home on Wellington street, now used as the Canadian Legion Shelter for homeless ex-service men, workmen came upon a secret cellar which had been walled up for many years.

Search of the room showed that at one time it had been used as a wine cellar. In it were discovered three bottles of Scotch whiskey. The date on the bottles was 1867. The ultimate fate of these 65-year-old spirits, born in the year of Canadian Confederation is shrouded in mystery.

A reporter, however, was able to verify the dates on the bottles, in the dust and plate of emptiness.

35 OF FLIERS MARRIED MEN

Camp Borden Feels Blow More Severely Than Other Air Depots

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 20 (CP) — The clash in air force estimates as a result of which many officers and other civil corps are being evicted from service affects 77 flying officers throughout Canada, it was learned here today. Of that number 35 are married, most of them with families.

Irish Republicans Gain Steadily Returns Show

Fianna Fail Have 62 Seats in New House So Far

MAY FORM GOV'T

Dublin, Irish Free State, Feb. 20 (CP)—Eamon De Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail gained steadily today as the count of ballots cast in Tuesday's general election neared its close and it appeared almost certain he would be asked to form a new government.

The Fianna Fail and its Labor supporters had a total of 71 seats in the Dail Eireann, a margin of twelve over the 59 seats won by President Cosgrave's government party and 13 Independent allies. Results from 22 constituencies still out.

The standing of the parties was:

Fianna Fail	62
Labor	9
Government	50
Independents	13

It was clear that De Valera's Republicans will be the only party in a position to form a government, but even with the alliance of Labor ites, they would have a hazardously small majority.

The ministers of President Cosgrave's government have all been returned with the exception of Patrick McGilligan, Minister of Industry, whose seat has not reported yet.

Trans-Canada Road To Be Continued

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 20.—(By the Canadian Press) — The Ontario Government is planning to build a limited scale of the trans-Canada highway, as a relief program, throughout the summer, Hon. T. B. Pearson, minister of Lands and Forests, announced to the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. Mr. Pearson, after a conference with Premier R. B. Bennett and Hon. Wesley Gordon, Ottawa, said: "Whether the works is continued, rests upon the unemployment situation. We hope to make further grants which will be supplemented by the provincial government.

"At present the province has guarantees for funds until the end of this month and it is hoped the federal government will see its way to help to make further grants so that the work can be completed completely by April 1, which would mean that some 10,000 men would be thrown out of work.

Hon. Mr. Finlayson stated that if their program is approved the province will continue in conjunction with certain sections of the highway in order to give further employment during the summer if other relief work in the north may be delayed during the summer if funds are agreed upon.

No Further Speaking at Arms Conference Until Wednesday

Geneva, Feb. 29 (AP) — The League of Nations secretariat proceeded today with plans for calling the second extraordinary session of the League Assembly in the thirteen years of its existence, which has been summoned for March 3 to adjudicate China's case against Japan.

In deciding to issue the call for the extraordinary session, one delegate after another in the League council subjured Japan to postpone further its effort in the Chapei area against the Chinese army which ended early this morning when the big drive at Shanghai began.

Ironic Laughter.

Naotake Sato, Japanese delegate, heard ironic laughter from the spectators, when, during a debate in the council, he said Japan's interests in Manchuria and Shanghai had never been protected by the League. Arrangements for the audience when he said the country refused to force only to defend the interests of her people in China. "It is regrettable", he said, "that the council will transfer this matter to the assembly because China will not settle the conflict."

FUMES ALMOST CLAIM VICTIM

Wife of Ann Street Man Finds Him Almost Unconscious

A casual investigation of the lifeless of her husband by a lady residing on Ann street when she took a short walk to the garage to get what was detaining him, probably saved the life of Mr. Kreogh, one of this city this morning from certain death as the garage was filled with carbon monoxide poisonous gas from the motor of the car which was running motor in a closed garage. The husband was found on an automobile robe on the floor near the car. The lady had been feebly trying to arouse him. Mrs. Kreogh stated that it was pretty generally known that this gas was the most deadly of all, being invisible and almost odorless.

"I thought I was going to have their doors closed when the engine of the car had run out of gas," said a piece of rubber hose and slip it over the end of the exhaust pipe and then run it through a hole in the door. This danger will be eliminated," he remarked.

Board of Education will Buy Curtain For Q.V. School

A spirited debate on the stumbling block of granting of uniforms for the Collegiate cadet corps for the coming year kept the Board of Education later than usual in their meeting last evening, but ended in a creditable discussion among the members.

One thousand dollars had been asked for by the supporters of the corps, as a grant for the new uniforms for the boys, but after the matter had been gone into very thoroughly it was decided to give a grant, of only half-that amount. Together with some of the money already to the account of the corps, the Board thought that it would be sufficient for their needs.

New Member.

With Chairman A. R. Schryver in the chair, and after a new member to the Board, Mr. Weg. Moncrief, had been suitably introduced to the members, after an acknowledgment of thanks to the short address presented by Mr. Schryver, the Board immediately swung into the business in hand.

Reading of reports from committees, which followed, indicated that the thorough economy and investigation had been accomplished by the different committees which turned over to them. Especially in the matter of Queen Alexandra School was the report in the shape it. A fire broke out in that school the children attending would never hear the alarm on account of the weak signals emitted by them. When one is in a room they are not, for as to be almost imperceptible, and every effort to rectify such as stronger batteries and so on, have had no effect. However new gongs are on their way from Toronto and will be placed in the school approximately. If they work, then we will have some definite motion as to their acceptance. The fire alarms in the area are also in very bad state and we urge that they be repaired and put in order. Several break-ins have occurred. This motion as regarded in locks was carried. Further reports on the Collegiate showed that drinking fountains were in a bad state of disrepair. "They leak all over Chris G. Holmes, the musical manager of the Capitol Theatre has just received three orchophonic records direct from England. They are "Zol Nedrel", (the famous Jewish chant), a "coin song" sung by Mme Suggia, wife of Pablo Casals, the world famed violinist, and "Three Bears", an interpretation of the well known fairy story, composed by Eric Coates and performed by Jack Hylton's orchestra, and two light selections by Hylton's wizard orchestra. Marek Weber's masterly violin work makes it hard to believe that this musician is not twenty three, although youthful musicians reaching the concert stage is a common occurrence in the European music world.

These recordings are now to be heard at the Capitol preceding the regular performances.

BRIGADE CALLED TO RAWSON'S HOME

Answering a hurried call to the home of Mr. Fred Rawson, 138 Bleecker street, on midnight last night, the fire department arrived in time to extinguish a blaze, which might have caused serious damage had it gained much headway. The blaze started from an unknown origin in an upstairs clothes closet and had it had a little time to spread would have soon gained access to the upper attic but due to the fast work of the fire department was soon under control as reported. A slight damage was reported to the closet and its contents.

SERVICES ARE LARGELY ATTENDED

Belleville has been more than fortunate in having Rev. Paul Gelatt conduct the services each Sunday in the Regular Baptist Church here this week.

Last evening the church was filled to capacity, Mr. Gelatt speaking on the subject, "Elijah's God." The deep spiritual uplift of all the meetings during the week was well obtained in last evening's meeting and everyone present voiced the hope that he would be here again and this will be arranged if possible.

Matters Musical

By
Chris. G. Holmes, A.L.C.M.

The musical world of the present century is top-heavy with the vast majority polls for 1932, and the minority retains the 1902 standard of music, commonly called, "the good old days".

Were to analyze music as we would analyze an epidemic of disease, we should find, that music is governed by mental conception, better known as mood, and it is upon this mood that the general public bases its standard of music is built.

In the good old days, progress of civilization moved very slowly, and, in consequence, resulted in mental stagnation. The result was, those people,were very much more patient than we are to-day, and with their minds almost free of anything resembling hurry or speed, were able to listen to musical compositions with ability to distinguish and appreciate every chord distinctly and uninterrupted.

To-day we are confronted with entirely the opposite. Everything is moving with bewildering rapidity. No longer are we able to listen to anything but the easiest of melodies in our own minds, through being accustomed to hearing distortions of musical sounds for some years, we are unable to grasp the beauty and meaning of what constitutes virgin music. A fair, but atmosphere of music prevails, and with one human performer satisfying the musical tastes for every million people, thought to them in all stages of reproduction, a laziness and an apathy toward providing one's own mind by one's own efforts is the inevitable result.

In 1901 every home was incomplete without a piano, and mothers were proud of their children's progress in musical study. In 1932 every home is incomplete without a radio, and mothers say, "What's the use?" fathers say, "Good Old Maple Leafs", and children do not enter into it at all.

In 1901 the piano will be an antique, and fairy stories will commence... "There was once a musician..."

Forgetting the future, let us look at the good things of the present, and we will find that, although we cannot compose music, there is a living desire for something finer in musical composition than the eternal grind of the verse and chorus. We have begun to realize that there is something in the statement that only one popular song was ever produced, and since then we have had twenty-two thousand versions of it.

Although people of the present day are unacquainted with the names of various musical compositions of the past, when they do hear them mentioned, the subconscious mind responds, and they touch a sympathetic chord in our minds, but the effect of many years of untutored and untrained musical appreciation, swamps that response, and very inconsiously we say, "Very nice", it finishes at that.

Mrs. Palmer had been in ill health for a considerable time and for the past few days her condition had been very critical. the floor," declared Mr. Barlow, when questioned by Mr. G. F. Ostrom, regarding them. "This equipment—is all nearly new equipment. What was wrong with it in the first place?" queried Mr. Ostrom. Mr. Barlow: "I don't know, I wasn't here then." Mr. Ostrom: "Are you under the observation of the committee, who reported that from the present time, that should be changed to the rigid connection type of switch boards in order that they have a shower and their next neighbor a shower with this—the water will shower and then sprinkle them with it, over the side of the booth. Maybe we were going to have showers when we were born," stated the speaker. Mrs. Frank Fowler: "Even given power to act.

Assemblies of Building.

Another letter regarding the acoustic properties of the collegiate auditorium was read. This had been referred to the music committee who had made an exhaustive study of the whole subject for some time.

"That just another part of the weak spots of the building," declared Mr. Ostrom. "It should be remedied immediately."

Principal MacLaurin explained that Dr. Hall had been a member of the Kingston Collegiate auditorium committee was read. This had been down. It was described by him as being very much like the Belleville auditorium. The wings of the stage had been closed off, and the platform raised. Some changes that could be remedied in Belleville in regard to the lighting. The board's report which was available the estimated price given by the Houston Lumber Co. for its alterations, and that would amount to $181.00. Material used for changing board would be of insulin and would comprise a curtain hanging from the ceiling, the curtain opening to the rear wall. A system of amplification of sound by the radio system already in use, installed for trial purposes by the Carl Hall Company, Limited, of Belleville costly. The matter was referred back for further consideration.

Parking Near Collegiate.

Whether or not there is a by-law covering the parking of cars in that section occupied by the school is problematical, stated Mr. Ostrom, but quite sure on. Some trouble had developed by parking cars along the street near the school and it was felt that some definite word from the city council should be obtained for the protection of those who park cars there when attending functions at the others' classes. The clerk was instructed to write the council asking for requesting the use of Church street for parking. "The county council won't like that," remarked Mr. R. J. Butler.

"I was on that committee appointed to look into the purchase of electric stoves for cooking and declared Mr. Ostrom when that subject of heating came up. "We thought and I was opposed to it from the start, but when I went to that school now saw the old ones they have been using I at once changed my mind, and now I recommend the purchase of a new one."

"It's all very well to talk of buying an electric machine like the one suggested," remarked Mrs. A. McAuley. "But many of the young girls who attend that school will be fortunate enough to have an electric machine when they graduate from the school and have to work at home. Not very many."

Against New Machine.

"I agree with Mrs. McFee. When they do such nice work on the electric machine, and then have to depend on a foot power one, and their machine will not work they feel that are doing there is liable to be war," added John Elliott.

Principal MacLaurin outlined the fact that his girls were receiving plenty of work on all types of machining, and that there was no danger of being spoiled by the electric one. "Some of those sewing machines we have here are fifteen years old." The motion was finally made and passed that the new machine be bought at a price of ninety-four dollars, thirty-five cents. Mrs. Fowler was given the board on that purchase.

"According to the report presented to the board by Dr. Hall, P. Tuck, R. N., there was very little sickness in the city. Some children were home from school on account of quarantined illness but they were in the minority. "Is it compulsory to have a doctor's certificate to admit a child who is off sick to school after sickness?" asked Mr. R. Wotten.

Should Have Tickets.

Mr. Elliott: "Every child should have a ticket to get back to school."

"There is no law in school regulations respecting this," stated Inspector of Schools H. J. Clarke. School Principal Mr. A. C. Within said that in his school a nurse made a complete investigation before any child was admitted back to school after an illness. "We have no nurse here," stated Miss MacLaurin, "and if I were not constantly on my guard any number of them would be away from school. I know."

"Parents as well as children should be required to bring tickets," stated Mr. H. Greenleaf.

Inspector Clarke finally made that the officer of the Board of Health be asked to notify all school principals that no

AIR SERVICE IN FILM SHOWN

"Flying Postman" Name of Featurette to be Shown at Belle Theatre

RECORDS TRAVEL 3000 MILES HERE

Postmaster Truesch has recently received instructions, from the staff and publicity section of the post office department of the Dominion of Canada, that they were sending a film to be shown at the Belle Theatre starting on Monday of next week entitled "The Flying Postman." This film has been prepared by the department at Ottawa, to demonstrate to the citizens of this Dominion the advancement the postal advantages of the country.

Manager Geo. Forhan, of the Belle Theatre is co-operating to the fullest extent in the showing of this unique and elaborate demonstration of the inside workings of the mail service in Canada from the time the letter is posted until it is delivered to its destination. The pictures especially displays the "air service" that was recently introduced in this country.

Well Mentioned

"Rob" Young, the movie critic for the Toronto Star comes to the front with the following statement in regards to the "Flying Postman" —An air mail scenario roaring out of the screen towards you sweeps into the opening title of "The Flying Postman" and this bit of action sets the pace for the rest of this all-too-brief one-reeler, which is a graphic eleven minutes gives you an insight into the action behind the scenes in Canada's air mail service.

This featurette was made by the post-office department, motor-graphed, recorded, developed and printed in Canada, so that it is truly a Canadian movie effort. Since it treats with the speed of the air mail service it naturally moves fast and the highlight is a race between the C.N.R. limited and C.P.R. and C.N.R. fast trains east of Cobourg. These scenes, taken from the air and the ground, show the aeroplane roaring down the narrow space between the two trains and provide one of those thrills, that you have not felt since Pauline was in peril in six-teen parts.

Ten Prize Distributed

The picture of "The Flying Postman" have been distributed over Canada, which shows that the department is in earnest in getting the film before the public. Eight prints is the usual allotment to Canada in the case of feature pictures.

There are a few minor criticisms for example, some of the aeroplane photography is bumpy and the sound recording is not good in the sequence devoted to the mechanical department, but on the whole it is a very fine little bit of Canadian movie craft. This is what Mr. Young, Canada's premier movie critic, has to say in regard to the picture "The Flying Postman" which appears at the Belle next week starting Monday night of next week. "The picture was solely made and produced to introduce Canada's new air mail service to the general public and therefore acquaint the public more fully on its many excellent qualities as to speed and efficiency.

When you

CAN'T QUIT

A HEADACHE is often the sign of fatigue. When fatigue throb it's time to rest. If you can't stop work, you can stop the pain. Aspirin will do it, every time. Take two or three tablets, a swallow of water, and carry-on—in perfect comfort.

Don't work with nerves on edge or try all day to forget some nagging pain that Aspirin will end in a jiffy! Aspirin can do you no harm; just be sure that it is Aspirin with "Bayer" on each tablet.

In every package you'll find proven directions for headaches, colds and sore throat; neuralgia, neuritis, etc. Carry these tablets with you, and be prepared. To block a sudden cold on the street-car; quiet a grumbling tooth at the office; relieve a headache in the theatre; spare you a sleepless night when nerves are "jumping."

And no modern girl needs "time out" for the time of month! Your little box of Aspirin tablets is sure relief for such pain.

Take Aspirin for any ache or pain, and take enough to end it. It can't harm you. At drug stores everywhere. Made in Canada.

Not Afraid of Policemen? Eh!

The reverberations of an empty, battered old biscuit tin as it bounced noisily over the hard cement sidewalk, and ricochetted against lower Front street store buildings, disturbed the vernal calmness of an early morning quiet in the city last evening. Hardly had the can stopped rolling than one of the three ragged young urchins whooped wild Indian fashion and aimed another hefty kick at the gaseous object.

"Wham! . . . Ding! . . . Smack! . . . Off the store steps of a nearby shop it bounced, bastinged, veered off at right angles and scuttled smartly and painfully against the legs of a testy old gentleman who just at that inopportune moment had approached the scene of action.

"Aww . . . Ohh . . . Ow! . . . Waww".

"Maybe it don't kick it hard" gives us a clime," suggested "Mick", whose young recklessness was nothing. "Will ya, Mister—will ya give us a dime if we don't kick it you any more?"

"They Threaten".

For answer the old gentleman had hobbled nearer the shifty three, and a large cane smote fretly in their direction. It missed his tormenters and he glared helplessly around. Ransom was demanded, he realized, but he was deeply determined that such a shoddy trick would not be worked on him.

He limped after them as animal at bay. Three grinning young boys who had been standing spectators to the spoliation of public property, he was looking at had vanished. Where? Why, they had quietly sauntered around the corner, stood for a moment and then crossed the road. The pair of lynx-eyed rascals had seen him almost before the corner had been turned. A quick "scram" had been made — up the nearest lane.

A crusty old gentleman slowly resumed his way. "Humph! Not afraid of a policeman, hain't they . . . ? Humph . . ."

THE PRICE OF MATCHES

A Windsor man wants to know why it is that when a chain store operating in both that city and Detroit is able to sell matches across the international boundary at eight boxes for 25 cents, in Windsor the price for the same article is 65 cents for the same number of boxes.

He is not the first to wonder why such things as matches should cost twice as much in Canada as in the United States when this country would seem to be particularly well adapted to their manufacture.

People have been known to smuggle matches across the St. Lawrence in large quantities simply because of the great difference in price. A box of matches that cost 10 cents here is often sold for 5 cents in Morristown, only a couple of miles distant.

If (as seems quite likely) the tariff is to blame, then steps ought to be taken to see that tariff no like the price of an everyday necessity such as matches will be brought down to the consumers of this country.

If the match manufacturers of the United States can afford to make and distribute their products so that they will sell at 5 cents per box, surely the match manufacturers of this country, with ample wood resources and with cheap power at their command, ought to be content with a smaller price than that which is now demanded. —Brockville Recorder-Times.

CENTRAL ONTARIO

Campbellford—Charles Dawson, Campbellford's "grand old man," and an authority on all Government steel construction work, formerly erected hundreds of shell holes here during the Great War, and also connected with building of the Quebec bridge, died at his home here Thursday afternoon, at the age of 82.

Kingston—Annie Townsend, who celebrated her hundredth birthday on March 1st, died after a comparatively short illness. Up to a few days ago Mrs. Townsend had full possession of her faculties, although she had been unable to leave her room for several years.

On her 100th birthday, Hon. T. Rod. Kidd, Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, called on her to extend congratulations, while messages were received from His Majesty the King, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and Premier G. S. Henry. The late Mrs. Townsend was born in Berkshire, England. One son survives.

Lindsay—Eight or ten experienced trappers will be given work here this spring hiking from 100 to 150 thousand muskrats, the first "harvesting" of the Emily Creek Fur ranch, a company supported by English capital. They breed under natural conditions. The furs will be marketed in Canada, the United States and England.

Port Hope—Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Langdon, Fort Hope, R.R. 3, celebrated their golden wedding Monday. Before her marriage, Mrs. Langdon was Rebecca Anna Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tinney of Oakwood. Mr. Langdon was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Langdon of Port Hope. They were married at the bride's home, May 15, 1882, taking up residence in port Hope, where they lived for a number of years. Later they moved to Canton, where they now reside. The family of children included the eldest daughter, Mrs. Edith Goldsmith, and grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Cobourg—Mr. A. Pratt, of Academy Hill, had a narrow escape when the steering wheel on his car broke at the top of Tait's Hill, just north of the village. After striking a telegraph pole the car started to go backwards down the long hill, quickly gathering speed until it was halfway down, when it finally upset in the ditch. Considerable damage was done to the car but the driver escaped injury.

Campbellford—The Campbellford Flying Club is again active and will commence work for the coming year. Several informal meetings have been held and it is expected that in the near future proper quarters will be obtained for the club, this being the present great need.

The officers for 1932 are as follows: President, W. Nelson: Vice-President, T. D. Meikle; Secretary-Treasurer, Ronald Richardson—Campbellford Herald.

Colborne—The Colborne Council purchased three acres of standing beech and maple wood from James A. MacGregor for the purpose of giving employment to Colborne men out of work. The men will have to work the first day. They are to be paid $4.50 per cord for a foot wood. The wood will be held for fuelling corporation buildings and for relief.

Norwood—The old Buck cheese box factory in Norwood has been purchased by a new company to be known as the Norwood Cheese Box Company, and which is understood to be controlled by the Coxiville Box Company. The property owners of Norwood will vote on Feb. 19th on the proposition to grant the new company a fixed assessment of $200 for a term of eight years. It looks like good business for Norwood, and will doubtless carry easily. Mr. Edward Elmhurst, of Indian River, will be the managear of the new company.—North Hastings Review.

Bancroft—Mr. R. F. Delves is busy erecting a new home for Mr. R. J. Stringer. When the craft is completed it will be launched on Pauliah Lake for pleasure purposes—Bancroft Times.

Madoc—At one of the largest congregational meetings held in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, Rec. R. Bertram Neiles, of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, was unanimously called to the Presbyterian Congregation here, on Tuesday evening, February 9th.—North Hastings Review.

Madoc—Mr. Hiram Ashley killed a garter snake in his yard at his home at Madoc Junction on Wednesday, measuring 2 feet in length, says the Review.

Trenton—Geo. Rosenpiol, of Trenton, has a lemon tree 5 feet high and six years old which has produced 15 lemon in 3 years. They weigh about 10 ounces each, much larger than the ordinary kind.

Trenton—To plow at the age of eighty years is quite a feat in itself but for a man of eighty to plow in the middle of January is rather unusual. But such is the case of Mr. J. T. Allison of the Ridge Road who last week turned over part of a field. Mr. Elson Aulthouse also plowed in the same field at the same time.

Oshawa—The Board of Directors of the Oshawa Retail Merchants Association following action taken at their last meeting on Friday, have placed a formal request before the City Council that the Transient Traders' fee be raised from $100 to $250.

The retail merchants take the stand that the smaller sum required under the existing city by-law, does not give sufficient protection to the Oshawa business man who is established here and pays taxes to the city treasury.

EXERCISE

Rapping the English passion for violent exercise, C. A. Hart, U. S. Minister to Persia, said: "I would rather see men keep themselves fit than wear themselves out at golf, riding or hunting." London Morning Post quotes Falstaff's protest: "I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion." Mr. Hart calls golf slow suicide.

A critic in New York takes the minister to task adding that if the British plan is a heresy, it is too late to make a change in the U. S., where boys and girls are larger than their parents were at the same age because of the raising of the health and exercise standards.

ELDERS IN SEATS OF MIGHTY

The place which older men are taking in world affairs and in contemporary literature is something to give the rising generation thought. Hindenburg, a real patriarch at 84 as years go, is the steadying force in Germany with all its ripe experience, while Shaw is said to be writing a new play at the age of 76 and Gerhard Hauptmann, dean of German playwrights illumines the stage with "Before Sunset" at the age of seventy, marked by the old time strength of the poet as a youth.

Why is this? Why is the voice of these Nestors listened to? Because they have a very real meaning to the world of today, even the younger element which seems mentally under their youngest years, and men on-the summit peaks of life's years. What boy is fresher than Shaw? What young man can delve more deeply than Hauptmann into the social evils of the time? What German can weld the forces of his nation as Hindenburg has done and in drinking, have added to the possible length of men's days, and even the rush and turmoil of the machine age days, seem to give zest to many people, even though they kill others with their heart-breaking thrills. A man like Shaw thrives on the excitement of the present period and he reacts in plays and wit. Modern sanitation measures make possible longer days in the men of this age than were accorded to the mediaeval folk. Shakespeare who died at fifty-two, may have fallen a victim to the ravages of fever for the fever of Elizabethan days was no little foe of human life. What disease can do is indicated in the case of a world figure like Edgar Wallace who died at fifty six—a victim of pneumonia. Mortality from such diseases is being reduced in number slowly but steadily with the advance of science and old age is more likely to be attained than in ancient days.

It is a good sign to find these Nestors of life in action. No conflict is too strenuous to keep them out, they have the keen zest of life though they have entered into the period of old age.

A word about these old men would be miss much, for they are balancing forces in a turbulent world.

PLEA FOR EAGLES

A plea for the eagles which have made their appearance in the vicinity of Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte is made by Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb, naturalist. No harm should come to these stately figures of the skies.

In a letter to the editor accompanying the poem Mr. Robb points out, "It would do no good to wait until some one shoots an eagle and then write a thousand lines of sorrow and public woe. They do no harm. These eagles are living beauty. Their economic status is practically of no account, except that they may take rabbits, which farmers would gladly have taken, and their artistic value and their life inspiration to man, is very great. The glorious white head and tail are not on eagles under three or four years of age. So a bird must live four years before we see it in all its beauty. The bald eagle is the American eagle but this name does not mean U.S.A., but North American."

Mr. Robb's appeal on behalf of these birds should not fall on deaf ears. Destruction of one of them would be senseless. To kill a living thing, itself the essence of beauty, is ruthless because it destroys a form of life which as Mr. Robb points out has a message to man.

INTERPRETING BANKS' ACTION

Good news came out of England Thursday—at least the financial world interpreted the reduction in the interest rate as one of the best indicators that adjustment has been reached and as the surest sign of a recovery which has been so long withheld. New York financiers took up with the situation with optimism, thinking that the reduction is bound to have a far-reaching effect throughout the world.

President Hoover's measures to counteract deflation, according to a German economist, Prof. Albert Hahn, warrant hope that the world may escape the abyss towards which some thought it was heading. His contention is that deflation as it has been witnessed for three years is much more vicious than inflation could possibly be.

SECRET STAIRWAY

By Aline Michaelis

In this old building is a secret stair
Set cunningly into the heavy walls.
The initiate only guess its presence there,
So viewlessly the oaken panel falls
Against its base. Yet up and up it sweeps
With lovely curves into a lofty room
Where sunlight dwells and beauty ever keeps
The place a sanctuary from all doubt and gloom.

You are the secret stairway in my life,
Where I ascend on steps of faith and hope!
Your cheer, your courage lead me up from strife
And shadowed halls where other mortals grope.
Through you I rise into a sunlit place
To find love's heaven- mirrored in your face.

TOLL! TOLL THE BELL! another old-timer has dropped out of the spotlight, joining that great army of old-timers behind the scenes watching that curious army of Flaming Youth now swarming over the footlights of life—The Police Gazette has suspended publication. Toll it not in Gath but tell Hank the village barber—alas much of the color has gone with the barber shops of the world with the disappearance of the highly colorful and picturesque Police Gazette, which made Richard K. Fox a fortune and ruled supreme for years in the realms of sport and theatricals of the lighter variety, particularly burlesque, running to many pictures of well fed females in pink tights. The Police Gazette waxed so rich and fat that it had to have its own building in New York City where fighters of the day came to meet all the pugilists and show on occasion the famous diamond studded belt which John L. Sullivan won and defended so long and which finally found its way to the hock shop after being a show piece behind the bar in a sporting saloon in Brooklyn. The Police Gazette was the advance agent of the great human drama, Sex Appeal in a day when women's dresses were ankle-sweeping sweepers and female ankles were only visible on windy days. After making two million dollars or more for its owner and lingering on through the years of Advanced Thought and all that kind of thing, besides a host of publications which went farther and deeper into social misconduct than the Police Gazette ever thought of doing, the Old Sport just naturally folded up and quit—for a new generation has arisen that knew not Joseph and his bright colored coat of many color. Perhaps the invasion of barbershops by the women has had something to do with the demise of the Police Gazette for since the women started to patronize the men's exclusive face repair shops the Ladies Home Journal has succeeded the pink sheet and the sports have had to look elsewhere for their favorite literature. That was, I imagine, the hardest blow of all, to be forbidden the barbershops, particularly after the bans were turned into soda water fountains.

BALDNESS AND THEIR CAUSES

Health of Scalp Must be Assured to Bring Cure

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D. (Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

Dandruff and baldness usually go hand in hand. There are cases, however, where baldness occurs without dandruff or any skin disorder being present.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Dandruff should be looked upon as a diseased condition of the sebaceous gland. In other words the tiny glands of the scalp which supply it with fat. What occurs under such circumstances is that an excessive amount of fat is secreted. This causes excessive oiliness which hardens and often cakes. When the dandruff is dry plus the chief factor is a mixing of the fat with the dead skin cells outer-most layer of the skin. When the dandruff is powdery and dry we still have excessive fat production by the sebaceous glands only here the unhealthy condition of the dry skin cells is even more excessive.

In dry, powdery dandruff and to prevent the baldness it usually leads to, attention must be directed to the health of the scalp. Furthermore, since the scalp is a part of the skin and the skin, as an integral part of the body proper, we must always look to the general health of the body, including the nervous system, if the scalp is to be kept in the pink of condition.

Many persons have noted that occasionally they have had a bad druff trouble. If such persons will observe the barber shops of the world's health at such times they will also find that there is usually considerable of working, dissipation, loss of sleep, lack of exercise, etc., which are responsible. Likewise, there are New Street brokers who suffer dandruff only when the stock market is low and when they have been operating on the short side of the market. Worry is a proper amount of nervous energy as well as rich blood is as necessary to the scalp's well being as to the nerves or any other organ.

As regards local treatment of the scalp itself intelligence is more important than all the hair tonics ever concocted. First of all a scalp should be properly massaged and when the scalp is dry, the hair often becomes of special importance.

Massage, if it does not, or rather should not, mean mere rubbing. In fact, rubbing is wrong. The often delicate hairs which are no longer as vital as they should be and hence fall out. The vibrations loosens the scalp and so allows more blood to flow to the roots of the hair, time allowing the elimination of wastes to go on properly. The end result is that the fat glands as well as the hair follicles become better nourished and brought into a healthy state.

A hot towel to the head may be tried. Then the scalp should be held firmly between the tips of the fingers and the scalp moved forward and backward, but not the fingers. This is repeated with the fingers in different positions until the entire scalp is thoroughly manipulated. Such a procedure should be carried on night and morning.

Thorough brushing of the hair, especially in the morning, should also be carried out twice daily. Stiff, wire bristles are likely to irritate and inflame the scalp. Soft, pliable bristles are best. Although hair may fall out after vigorous brushing, such combing is should be remembered that such is a good sign of health and could not be saved. Attention must be directed to the hair follicles or roots which furnish the nourish the scalp is in a healthful condition.

For both dry and oily scalps olive oil or absolene should be massaged into the scalp daily after the method already mentioned. This nourishes, even oily scalps. Later the head should be shampooed, for even oily scalps twice a week. The tincture of green soap is useful here. The use of the ultra-violet rays in expert hands is likewise valuable.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

When were you and your family vaccinated against small-pox? To be on the safe side, every person five or six years should be allowed to go by without being vaccinated again.

SUFFERS SLIGHT CONCUSSION

Lindsay, Feb. 20.—Ted Quibell, clever young goalkeeper for the C. D.S. team, entered in Intelights Cup hockey tourney, who was accidentally struck in a game with Vachtila, suffered a slight concussion when his head hit the ice—a nasty crack after hecollided with Alex Kincaid, Valentia centre.

CURLING CUP IS LOST

Lindsay, Feb. 20.—The district curling cup is lost. The prized trophy of many hard fought battles is probably collecting dust in some persons piano. In the meantime curling officials are hunting feverishly for the mug. Clubs at Peterboro, Millbrook, Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon have been telephoned with no results.

Bobcaygeon won the cup this year from Fenelon Falls and Lindsay.

The man of the hour is generally one who made every minute count.

Other Papers' Opinions

SUNDAY ADVERTISING

Radio listeners in Canada will follow with interest the movement on foot in the United States to prohibit Sunday advertising. The proposed bill is offered as an amendment to the United States Radio Act. In brief it provides that on Sunday there shall be no commercial announcements setting forth the merits of this and that product. However under its provisions the broadcasting of the programs may be given at the beginning and end of the program, and with a period of one hour between announcements.

Provided the bill becomes law there will be at least one day in the week during which one does not have to listen to a barrage of windy sales talk from across the line. Anyway, who wants to listen to ballyhoo advertising on the Lord's Day?—Kitchener Record.

MRS. FISKE

To Jose Mrs. Fiske is to lose an actress who kept the theatre at its best during her time. It was no idle sensation. For sixty-four years she was a favorite as well as an actress and wielding nothing short of distinction of her career she represented all that was significant in the grand tradition of trouping.
